TORTURE FARMER; GET HIS MONEY.

Two Masked Robbers Disguised as Indians Attack Couple in Dwelling Near Hammond.

BIND AND GAG WOMAN.

Aged Man Hurries to Wife's Rescue, Is Overpowered, Beaten, Then Burned with Candle.

THIEVES FLEE WITH $178.

OLD COUPLE'S CONDITION SERIOUS.

Two masked men dressed as Indians entered the house of Michael Johnson, a farmer living six miles from Hammond, Ind., and after beating him almost into insensibility with their revolvers, thrust a lighted candle against his face to torture him into revealing the hiding place of his money. The escape from the house of a servant girl, who had been insecurely bound, alarmed the robbers and they fled into the swamps along the Little Calumet River. They secured $178.

Last night the country for miles around the Johnson farmhouse was being scoured by angry farmers, who were seeking the robbers. All these vigilants were armed with rifles or shotguns and summary punishment would have been meted out to the fugitives had they been caught. Johnson's wounds were pronounced severe by a physician called from the Village of Highlands, while his aged wife suffered a serious nervous shock from the rough treatment she received.

Bold Robbers Enter House.

Mr. Johnson is a wealthy farmer, well along in years, whose house is in an isolated locality. Soon after 5 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon he went into the sitting-room of his house to await the call to supper, and while waiting fell asleep. It was at this time that the two robbers boldly entered the house, surprising Mrs. Johnson and her servant girl at work in the kitchen.

Thrusting revolvers into the faces of the women the robbers ordered them to keep silent. The girl was forced into an adjoining room and the door was locked. Mrs. Johnson was bound in a chair and gagged. Her struggles aroused Mr. Johnson from his sleep, and he ran into the kitchen only to be confronted with the revolvers of the robbers. There was a short and fierce fight, and the old man went down beneath a rain of blows upon his head from the heavy butts of the revolvers.

Tying the hands and feet of the old farmer securely with a clothesline, the robbers began a systematic search of the house for valuables, making their investigation with the aid of a lighted candle. They found $178 in a bureau drawer, and continued their search in the belief that more money was secreted in the house, Mr. Johnson being accounted one of the wealthiest farmers in the neighborhood.

Are in Quest of $10,000.

Failing to discover any more money the robbers became infuriated. They threatened the aged couple with a horrible death unless they were informed where $10,000 had been hidden. One of the robbers told Mr. Johnson that he knew the money had been hidden on the premises and that the only way for him to save his life and that of his wife was to tell where the hiding place was.

Threats failed to move either Johnson or his wife. The latter was in an agony of fright that rendered her speechless, while the man had been beaten until his power of speech was practically gone. Although he tried to assure the robbers that they had already secured all the money in the house they refused to believe him.

"We'll try a little fire on you," said one of the robbers. "Maybe that will make you talk."

Torture Man with a Candle.

While the old man sat bound in a chair the lighted candle was applied to his bleeding face. Time and again the flame seared his lips and brought screams of pain from them. While the work of torture went on the servant girl imprisoned in an adjoining room bent her efforts toward escape. After frantic attempts to raise a small window, the girl succeeded and reached the open air. Darkness had set in, and although the robbers heard the girl escaping they were not quick enough to see her hide in some shrubbery near the house.

For a few minutes the robbers searched for the girl and then, fearing that she had gone to alarm the nearest neighbor, half a mile away, they fled without returning to the house, where their victims were waiting in an agony of suspense. As soon as they had left the place the girl ran to the neighbors and gave the alarm. It was quickly passed along to other farmers, and in a short time a posse had been organized of angry farmers.

Three Holdups at a Bridge.

Within the last four weeks three different persons have been held up and robbed at Ewen's bridge across the Little Calumet River. Each of the robberies has taken place in the daytime, and the victims, after being deprived of their valuables, were told to go home and say nothing. In each instance the highwaymen escaped in the swamps. These robberies, with that at the Johnson house, have aroused the community, and the most vigorous measures will be taken to rid the vicinity of some characters.

FIRE TERRIFIES 300 GIRLS.

IN WILD PANIC WHILE FIREMEN FACE DEATH.

Blaze at 254 Madison Street Causes Employes of Schultz's Box Factory to Rush for Stairs—Flames Span Alley and Catch Pipemen on Ladder—Total Damage Is Estimated at $60,000 —Cabman Runs Down Woman in the Crowd.

With a squad of firemen hanging with blistering hands to a hot fire escape while they waited for water and with 300 girl employés struggling in a panic to escape from a building threatened by fire there was plenty of excitement as the building at 254 Madison street was partly burned out last night. The damaged structure is between the buildings occupied by Lyon Bros. and Hollister Bros. At the rear separated by an alley is the Schultz Bros.' box factory.

In the last building 300 girls were working when the fire was discovered shortly before 8 o'clock. The flames burst out of the windows on three different floors almost simultaneously and shot across the alley towards the box factory. A panic followed. With cries of fear the girls ran for the stairs, which soon were filled with a struggling line of girls fighting their way down. Some crawled out on the fire escapes and thus to the ground.

Fainting Girls Carried Out.

Before all the employés had reached the street some of the girls had fainted and had been carried out. It was an excited and frightened crowd of girls which reached the street.

While the factory girls were making their hurried exit a squad of firemen were braving death on the fire escapes to the box factory building. The first lead of hose had been carried up the fire escape to reach the rear of the burning building.

Then the flames came bursting through the windows, shot across the alley, and almost touched the wall against which the firemen were crouching. The wooden ladder caught fire and burned away under the men. Two firemen who had been mounting it dropped to the ground. Then men above seemed fairly caught in the fire. There was a great cry set up:

"Water! Water!" yelled the men up on the fire escape. "For mercy's sake, water!"

At length the stream was turned on and the men saved.

Estimate of the Losses.

The occupants of the burned building and their estimated losses are:

Harry L. Weisbaum, first floor, cutlery	$ 7,000
S. and I. Goldberg, second floor, tailors	7,000
Illinois Suspender company, third floor	8,000
Kalamazoo Corset company, fourth floor	10,000
American Electric company fifth floor, electrical supplies	5,000
Buehl Bros., manufacturers of wax figures, sixth floor	8,000
On building	15,000
Total	$60,000

While several hundred people were watching the firemen William Smith attempted to drive his cab across Market street. Smith was stopped by Sergeant Flynn, but whipped up his horse in an attempt to get through the lines. The animal became frightened and dashed into a crowd, knocking down Miss Eunice Qualey. A number of men started for Smith, but the police hurried him away.

GETS GOLD BY NEW PROCESS.

Denver Chemist Develops the Yellow Metal from Ore in a Gaseous State.

Denver, Colo., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—A new process of extracting gold from ore is announced. For five years Mr. Wynn, a noted chemist, has been working solely upon this line. Gold, recognized heretofore only in its visible form, he says, may be developed from a gaseous state and ripened to ultimate degree of development. He declares that much more gold can be extracted from ore than under the fire and cyanide process.

RISKS LIFE TO SAVE WOMAN.

J. J. Domellan Grasps Passenger Who Is Falling Under Wheels of a Railway Train.

J. J. Domellan saved a woman's life yesterday at the risk of his own. As the 1:55 train on the Illinois Central pulled into the Kensington station a woman passenger tried to alight. The train was moving and she lost her footing. As she fell she grasped the railing of the car platform and was dragged some distance.

Her cries attracted several people, who sprang to her aid. The first to reach her was Mr. Domellan. Catching the woman in his arms he sprang on to the car platform just in time to escape being swept against a pillar.

BROOM PREVENTS A SUICIDE.

Woman Swings the Sweeper and It Smashes an Acid Bottle at Her Husband's Lips.

A 25-cent broom that already had seen six months of faithful service saved the life last night of John Hendrickson, 85 Chicago avenue. Hendrickson and his wife quarreled and the man, grabbing up a bottle of carbolic acid, raised it to his mouth. Quick as a flash the woman swung the broom. The heavy stub of the instrument struck the bottle and broke it before any of the poison had passed the man's lips, but the acid burned Hendrickson's cheek and caused him to fill the neighborhood with lamentations. He was taken to the County Hospital.

EARTHQUAKE IN UTAH; 20 SHOCKS

PEOPLE ARE IN A PANIC.

Houses Wrecked by the Vibrations, Windows Smashed, and Walls Cracked in Many Places.

TREMORS LAST MANY HOURS.

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Fully half a million dollars' worth of damage has been done in Utah by a series of earthquakes, beginning last night and lasting until this afternoon. Buildings were wrecked in several towns. In one place a chasm was opened in the earth and a number of persons had narrow escapes from death, although no fatalities have been so far reported.

The first shocks felt in Salt Lake City were slight and small attention was paid to them. During the early morning and forenoon, the State was again shaken and great damage is reported from the south and central part of the State. In the Town of Richfield alone the damage is estimated at $100,000.

Twenty Distinct Shocks.

In Sevier County, of which Richfield is the county seat, twenty distinct shocks were felt, the first being at 9:30 o'clock last night and the last at 1:10 o'clock this afternoon. Buildings rocked back and forth, glass was broken, walls fell, and several structures were completely wrecked.

The Mormon tabernacle there was severely damaged, the front of the building collapsing. A majority of the houses in the town were more or less damaged.

Two children of O. K. Salisbury had a miraculous escape. They were asleep in a bedroom when the side of the wall fell, and the roof was brought down. Heavy timbers, brick, and plaster fell on all sides of them, and their bed was covered. The children, however, escaped unhurt.

Bishop's House Wrecked.

At Monroe the large residence of Bishop Orson Bagley was ruined, as were several other buildings. There are several hot springs at this place. One of them ceased entirely to flow, while the flow of others was increased.

At Joseph the same situation developed. None of the children was hurt. Mrs. Russell Kelly had a narrow escape from a falling rock. She was standing beside the stone house, where she resides, when the building collapsed. The débris fell on all sides of her and a rock knocked her hat off and grazed the side of her face, falling at her side.

Panic in Schoolroom.

At Elsinore the principal hotel, the Jensen House, was partially wrecked and will have to be rebuilt. The guests escaped unhurt except for the shock to their nerves. The schools were in session when some of the worst shocks occurred in the forenoon and there was another panic there. The children attempted to make a break for safety, but the teachers managed to prevent a serious stampede.

Choir practice was in progress at a meeting-house, and a panic ensued. It was thought the building would collapse, and there was a break for doors and windows.

Several women were hurt in the crush, and others in leaping through windows. The town council broke up in disorder with a scene almost as bad.

Shock Felt in Mines.

At the Annie Laurie mine on Gold Mountain the miners felt the earth shake and heard rocks begin to fall in various portions of the mine. There were several minor caves, but the men reached the surface without sustaining any injuries.

Landslides in Mountains.

At Kimberley there was a landslide down the mountain, which wrecked some dwellings.

The Clear Creek road was blocked by another landslide. Still another came down over the Rio Grande Western track near Marysvale, broke rails, and stopped traffic. Telephone poles were broken and communication with the outside world was interrupted.

In Beaver the courthouse, Mormon meeting-house, Beaver Branch Academy, and scores of other buildings were either seriously damaged or completely wrecked.

Filmore was badly shaken up, but no buildings were wrecked. People ran in the streets in the early morning without waiting to dress.

Parowan, Cedar City, and numerous other towns over the State report more or less damage.

Salt Lake felt the shocks, but no great damage was done.

Near Moab it is reported that a chasm opened in the earth. This was not close to any habitation, and no great damage was done.

WEALTHY VIRGINIAN IS KILLED.

J. W. Scott of Richmond Murdered by Footpads on Way to His Home from His Club.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—John W. Scott, one of the best known citizens of Richmond, was murdered last night in Franklin street, four blocks from the Commonwealth club, of which he was a member.

Major E. T. D. Myers heard a crash of glass at his front door about 2 o'clock this morning and found Mr. Scott dying on his doorsteps. He was unconscious and was taken to a hospital, where he died at 9 o'clock without regaining consciousness. He was bruised about the head in a number of places and his ear and cheek were cut. His purse and pocketbook were gone. The theory is that he was held up by highwaymen.

Mr. Scott is a lawyer and the son of the late Major Fred R. Scott, President of the Richmond and Petersburg railroad, and his family is among the most prominent socially and financially in Virginia. He was 43 years old and had never been married. At the time of his father's death, several years ago, Mr. Scott inherited a fortune. Mr. Scott was a graduate of the Universities of Virginia and Harvard. His brother, Fred W. Scott, is President of the People's Building, Loan, and Trust company and Treasurer of the South Atlantic Life Insurance company, and Vice President of Richmond Stock Exchange.

LAW STOPS BOGUS HONEY

PURE FOOD INSPECTORS BEFRIEND THE BUSY BEE.

Glucose Forms a Large Percentage of a Big Consignment of the Table Sweet Which Comes Labeled as the "Clover" Article, and State Agents Refuse to Allow It to Be Sold—Not Harmful to Health, but It Disorders the Pocketbook.

Glucose honey, under the attractive guise of "pure clover honey," is invading the Chicago markets to such an extent that the efforts of the State pure food inspectors are largely directed toward investigations of this imposition. One entire carload of "honey," consigned to J. Dawson of the Western Brokerage company, 42 River street, from a California firm, was barred from the markets yesterday except as a plainly labeled adulteration.

The analysis of the "honey" composing the consignment showed that it contained from 50 to 60 per cent of glucose, and as "pure honey" the stuff was condemned. The consignee had the choice of selling it as a glucose mixture or of sending it back, and he chose the latter course, at the same time canceling other orders which would have brought other large quantities of the glucose honey into Chicago.

Harm Is to the Purse.

Unlike many of the adulterations which flood the market, the glucose honey is not regarded as an injurious mixture, and the Pure Food Commissioners affirm that the imposition on the purchaser is one which injures his pocketbook and not his health. The dealer has the right to sell the "honey" under the label of glucose mixture, and as such it is worth about one-fifth as much as real honey.

One complainant, Dr. A. J. Park, 520 East Fiftieth street, said:

"I know of no place in Chicago where one can purchase a pound of pure honey. I called the attention of my grocer to the fact that his tin cases of 'white clover honey' was manufactured stuff made up of glucose and paraffine. He at once called on his South Water street merchant and demanded that his money be refunded or that the merchant disclose the name and place of the party from whom he got the mixture, but he declined."

Similar complaints have been received by the Pure Food commission, and investigations have resulted in the preparation of a list of offenders against whom suit will be brought for violation of the pure food laws.

How to Detect Imposition.

Commissioner Jones said it was comparatively easy for a purchaser to detect the imposition.

"Genuine honey," he declared, "has brown coloring around the cells. Glucose honey is perfectly white. The purchaser can detect the fraud by this simple rule. Honey, butter, and vinegar are the three articles in the purchase of which citizens are most subject to imposition just at present, and they are causing most of the work for the commission. Syrups may be classed with honey in this respect."

IOWA FARMER CHARGED WITH ATTEMPT TO POISON FAMILY.

Mount Carmel Man Arrested and Accused of Putting Strichnine on Food Which Neighbor and Wife Ate.

Carroll, Ia., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Henry Ertz of Mount Carmel was arrested today, charged with an attempt to poison Joseph Naberhaus and wife.

Last Sunday, on returning from early mass at Mount Carmel, Naberhaus, at breakfast, noticed that the food tasted strongly of a drug of some sort. Naberhaus, after taking several bites of bread, soon was seized with convulsions. Neighbors called in saw that he was poisoned and noticed crystals scattered over the table on every eatable in the house.

The poisoned man was placed in a buggy and driven to Breda, where a physician administered an antidote and saved his life. His wife had only sipped her coffee and was not much affected.

The poison proved to be strychnine. Several attempts to poison these people have been made since last spring. Their stock has been maimed and property about the barn and farm destroyed.

Ertz is a widower with six small children and a brother-in-law of Naberhaus. Evidence against the accused is chiefly circumstantial. On being arrigned today he waived examination and gave $1,000 cash bond for his appearance before the grand jury, which meets here next Monday.

HALF BACK IS BADLY INJURED.

W. B. Soper of Bloomington, Ill., a Yale Sophomore, Seriously Hurt in Football Game.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Willard Burr Soper of Bloomington, Ill., lies in Grace Hospital a victim of one of the most serious accidents of the present football season at Yale. He is suffering from some internal injuries.

The coaches have been driving Soper rather hard because of his promising form, and yesterday they worked him with unusual severity because Wilhelmi, the regular left half back, had just been declared crippled and Soper was the next man in line of promotion. Soper fell at the bottom of a heap and was taken to his room. He became worse and was later transferred to Grace Hospital. He told the attendant physician that he was struck in the back in a scrimmage. The physicians think that Soper is mistaken over the location of his injuries.

His relatives in Bloomington have been notified of the athlete's condition. Soper is a sophomore in the academic department, but for his injury would have won a place on the varsity in the Yale-Princeton game next Saturday.

SNOW-STORMS IN THE EAST.

Syracuse, N. Y., Has Ten-Inch Fall and Street Car Service Is Impeded.

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 14.—The snow-storm throughout central New York continues tonight with unabated severity. Country roads are in many cases blocked and huge drifts are piling along the fences. Streams are rising and several places report threatened floods. In Syracuse sleighs are running even in the down-town streets. Trolley service is demoralized, but the steam railways are making their time. About ten inches of snow has fallen. The mercury is about the freezing point.

Utica, N. Y., Nov. 14.—A blizzard is raging throughout this section and in northern New York it is quite severe, drifts from one to six feet deep blocking trains in the Adirondack region.

Rochester, N. Y., Nov. 14.—Four inches of snow covers the streets here tonight. All street car traffic was blocked for several hours this evening.

WOMEN INSPECT SWEATSHOP ILLS

DAY'S WORK AT 26 CENTS.

See Sisters Who Strive from Dawn Till Dark, but Can't Earn Enough for Comfort.

MANY CHILDREN TOILERS.

Committee Promises That Prompt Action Will Follow Its Realization of These Ghetto Horrors.

IN NOXIOUS TOBACCO SHOPS.

Chicago members of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs trailed their skirts in squalor yesterday and turned away appalled from the conditions they saw about them. They listened to facts that startled them because of the hardship they realized must follow the payment of miserable pittances for the hard work over which the faces of women grew pale and gaunt or that which weakened the fibers of men's frames and left them unfitted for the struggle. They saw the strenuous life unfolded before their eyes in cold reality.

These club women who had begun the study of sociological questions under different conditions heard women tell with drawn faces of struggling by the dim light to make a dozen pairs of trousers a day for 26 cents. They listened to men who spoke of running a machine at breakneck pace to grind out the meager sum of 75 cents, and to others who work in ill-smelling tobacco shops as long as light lasts to make $1 per day.

Party Visits Sweatshops.

The excursion in pursuit of knowledge was begun yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock under the escort of George J. Thompson, organizer for the Federation of Labor. The party consisted of Mrs. H. M. VanDerVaart, chairman of the Committee on Industrial Work of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs; Dr. Cornelia B. DeBey, and Miss Anna Nichols, who accompanied Mrs. VanDerVaart as unofficial representatives of other clubs. Later in the day the party was joined by Edgar T. Davies, assistant chief State inspector of factories and workshops.

During the morning the party visited eight sweatshops and cigar factories, all lying in the Ghetto or adjoining it. Particular attention was paid to the sanitary conditions, Dr DeBey making a careful inspection of the surroundings and evincing her disapproval frequently in disgusted sniffs. Inquiries regarding the ages of children employed in the shops were met with a shrug of the shoulders and the invariable reply, "Their parents make affidavit that they are 14 years of age, so what can we do?"

Will Keep Up the Work.

"A trip of this character is an education in itself," said Mrs. VanDerVaart, "but we do not intend to let it stop there. I regret that it is impossible to convey from the district the surroundings that make a picture most impressive. We may tell of these conditions and sympathize with the unfortunates who exist under them, but none will understand and appreciate the appalling surroundings. We mean to continue the work of gathering material for a formidable report, which we hope will excite an interest among members of the club that nothing else has succeeded in doing in the past."

The next trip of the committee will be to shops occupied largely by children, particularly girls. It is the desire of the clubs to do something to save the children, the men and women apparently having become so accustomed to their surroundings that they have ceased to worry over them or to hope for anything better.

One benefit that is hoped for through agitation the women's clubs may arouse lies in connection with the Factory Inspector's office. State Inspector Arrington says the law is practically useless because it does not empower the inspector to compel a change of sanitary conditions.

Misstate Child's Age.

"About the only thing we can do," said Mr. Arrington, "is to enforce the law protecting children. Every effort, at present, is made to evade this and there is room for improvement in that line. About one-third of the affidavits made by parents are false, the child being under 14 years of age. We tried to have the inspection law amended, but employers of child labor opposed it and brought about its defeat. Perhaps with the aid of the women the law could be changed."

No effort was made by any one to hinder inspection during the trip. Questions were answered freely, but not always fully or with an understanding of the object in view. In some cases both women and men thought the visitors merely curious and not impelled by a desire to obtain facts that would be of benefit to both.

Men and Women at Work.

The first place visited was a sweatshop operated by P. Bernstein, 135 West Thirteenth street. On the second floor of a frame building in the center of the block seventeen men and women were engaged making boys' trousers for a down-town firm. The whirr of their machines, which seemed to fly with the hands that moved along the table with the cloth, was the only thing that could be heard. The atmosphere was close and the light poor. The faces of the toilers showed pale and sallow under the scrutiny of the visitors.

A bright faced forewoman came forward and replied to the questions of Dr. DeBey. She said the shop turned out about fifteen dozen pairs of trousers daily for which they received $1 per dozen. The wages of the workmen varied from $5 to $10 per week, even the most skilled finding it difficult to make the latter sum. None murmured of the conditions or the surroundings.

Make Cigars in Garret.

From the sweatshop the party was taken by Mr. Thompson to the cigar shop of Samuel Cohen, 11 Newberry avenue, known as Factory 1,134. It is situated in the garret of the building, what little light that enters finding its way through the half windows at the side. Working with closed windows, and in a sickening atmosphere, sat a dozen persons making cigars. Cohen was surly and uncommunicative because he has been suspicious ever since a couple of revenue officers recently took him to task for infractions of the law.

The cigar factory of Joe Lawrence, 44 Johnson street, was found to be better situated than the others. Lawrence recently built a new house and fitted up the basement for the cigar shop, his stock and outfit being transferred from an old barn which had formerly been used.

Old Fatherland Recalled.

At the cigar factory of Elias Epstein, 447 South Sangamon street, Dr. DeBey discovered a Boer. She was glancing at the faces of the men, women, and boys bent over the tables when she saw the face of a Hollander. She directed the attention of the proprietor to him and requested his name, which Epstein said was Charles Oliver.

"How long have you been in the business, my man," asked Dr. DeBey.

"Thirty-five years."

"How much do you make now?"

"About $18 per week. I used to make $25 without any trouble."

Then Dr. DeBey spoke of Holland, and Oliver's face lighted up with a smile. They talked together for several minutes and when the visitor turned away Oliver bent low over his work as if his eyesight was growing dim. Perhaps the memory of his old home intervened and made it difficult for him to discern the outlines of the cigar he was making.

Epstein's shop is on the fourth floor of a frame building, poorly ventilated, and not particularly well lighted. Thirty-five men and women were in the main section, while in an ante-room, foul smelling quarters they were at best, sat three boys, thin featured and pale faced. They were stripping the tobacco, which they passed to a woman who was suffering with neuralgia.

As the party filed out into the open air there was a general "Ugh" of relief.

Plunge Into Degradation.

At this time the party received an addition in Mr. Davies, the Assistant Chief State Inspector of Factories and Workshops. Mr. Davies brought with him a bundle of addresses and authority to enter any place. He plunged into degradation immediately when he guided the party into the brick building at 137 Ewing street.

Here forty families occupy two floors, being crowded together like so many cattle. Thrusting open a door on the dark landing Mr. Davies ushered the party into a room, rank and foul smelling, where two women sat by a window sewing diligently on men's trousers.

One, apparently the daughter, was emaciated and looked ill, but she had a brave heart. Her mother sitting opposite her bore the sign of continuous toil on her hands, marks of the needle being visible on every finger. Almost born with a needle in her fingers, she said she never had known what it was to rest.

"What do you get for making these trousers?" asked Mrs. VanDerVaart kindly.

"Twenty-eight cents a dozen."

"How many can you make in a day?"

"Usually two dozen."

Fifty-six cents for two persons, yet not a murmur of their circumstances came from them. Instead a glint of pride seemed to sparkle in her eye as she spoke of the work completed with each going down of the sun.

Day's Work for Twenty-six Cents.

In the adjoining room there was a similar scene with one less occupant. A bright eyed woman sat sewing as if her life depended upon it. She only glanced up when the inspector entered, as if begrudging the time she must lose. She could not speak English, and Mr. Thompson acted as interpreter. She told him she received 26 cents a dozen for making men's trousers and had to work hard to finish a dozen pairs in one day.

As the party passed out men and women alike applied handkerchiefs to their nostrils to enable them to reach the street. The odors were suffocating, stifling.

"If you have any more like that I think I'll wait until after lunch," remarked Mr. Thompson.

"I believe it would suit me better, too," said Miss Nichols.

Flavor Cigars with Paste.

The cigar store of L. Galella, [illegible] street, furnished another rich assortment of odors. The place, a single floor, is used by Galella as factory, retail store, and dwelling. A man was at work in the factory turning out cigars.

"What are you plastering those with paste for?" asked Mr. Thompson.

"It makes 'em taste better."

"Well, that's the first time I ever heard of smearing paste all over cigars to add to the flavor. They must smell nice when the paste cools and you smoke them."

"Have one and see."

"No, thank you. I want to live awhile longer."

Galella explained that he had a "fine trade" that paid him $1 a hundred for the cigars. At this he made a neat profit, he said, as they cost him only 50 cents.

Straws Through Cheroots.

In a room on the second floor of a two-story frame house at 124 Ewing street Joseph Balanti was industriously engaged in making cheroots. These were curiosities, being rolled around a broom straw, which was run through a larger straw that served to provide the draft. These cheroots also were plastered with enough paste to make them sickening.

Balanti occupied the entire second floor with his family, a cat, and a dog. Of these he seemed proud, calling particular attention to them as the party passed out. Balanti himself is a skeleton, his bones barely containing enough flesh to cover them. Surrounded by squalor that made his place repulsive, he smiled and appeared contented at least.

Work in Foul Air.

The finishing touch was found in the sweatshop of Leo Marks, 227 DeKoven street. Marks was arrested recently on complaint of Inspector Davies for violation of the State inspection law. Two rooms, less than twenty-five feet in length, were occupied by twenty-six women with their machines. It was an ordinary cottage, the rooms being divided by a center door. Under the order of the inspector this door is kept open, permitting the circulation of what little air enters the rooms.

The girls, for nearly all are under 20, were crowded together until they could not move without discommoding each other. The atmosphere was stifling, and one wondered how it was possible to breathe in it.

Wearied of the scenes which often had wrung their hearts, the party decided to postpone further investigation until another day. The committee, however, insists that it will not be deterred by the personal discomforts but will persist in the inquiry.

RATHBUN HELD WITHOUT BOND.

Insurance Swindler, Arraigned on Charge of Murdering Charles Goodman, Pleads Not Guilty.

Jeffersonville, Ind., Nov. 14.—Newell C. Rathbun, suspected of killing Charles Goodman in a hotel here by poison, was this afternoon positively identified by an officer and an acquaintance of the prisoner from Little Rock, Ark., where he lived for a while. Later Rathbun was arraigned before Mayor Rader in the police station on a charge of murder. Rathbun pleaded not guilty, and Mayor Rader held him over to the Circuit Court without bond. The prisoner had no lawyer. After being arraigned he was taken back to jail. The Circuit Court will convene in special term on Monday and a grand jury will be empaneled to consider Rathbun's case.

HAS PRIVATE REFORM BUREAU.

Secretary George C. Sikes Has a Surly, Negligent Street Car Conductor Discharged.

Secretary George C. Sikes of the Local Transportation commission has inaugurated a street railway reform crusade of his own. On an Archer avenue car he met a surly conductor, who abused him and insulted another passenger. Mr. Sikes asserts further that at a railway crossing the conductor gave the "go ahead" signal without taking the trouble to look for any approaching trains. All this Mr. Sikes recited to General Manager McCulloch of the Chicago City railway in a formal letter. The conductor is looking for work.

TAX CASE NOW IN FEDERAL COURTS.

Chicago Traction Companies Invoke the Constitution of the United States.

ASSESSMENT IS TIED UP.

Members of State Board of Equalization Called Before Judge Humphrey.

SET FOR MONDAY, NOV. 18.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The right of the Illinois Board of Equalization to assess the capital stock of corporations after the manner prescribed by Judge Owen P. Thompson's decision in the teachers' tax case is to be tried before the United States Circuit Court for the Southern District of Illinois. The matter will come up before Judge J. Otis Humphrey next Monday morning. Before it is settled it may reach the Supreme Court of the United States.

The suits were filed in the Federal Court this morning by Attorneys Henry and W. R. Crawford, representing the Union and Consolidated Traction companies of Chicago. They represent that the State Board of Equalization is about to make an assessment against the company in violation of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, which guarantees that no State shall "deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, not deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Injunction Asked For.

In formal legal language the court is asked to restrain the board from taking such action.

The suits came as a complete surprise to the members of the board and the people in Springfield who are interested in the franchise tax fight. Many of the board members had left the city, but the writs were served on the following: Messrs. Barnes, McKnight, Cruttenden, Hirschelmer, McComb, Yantis, Kells, and Hopkins. These officials agree that there will be no effort made to avoid the writ and say the board will now await the outcome of the second legal engagement over the tax question.

Attorney Crawford was not in town long, but while he was here he said a good many things which will prove to be disquieting to the country men and possibly to some of the steam railroads. By way of an opener he said there was a time in Illinois when steam railroads were in their infancy and were taxed on their capital stock. He didn't see why it couldn't be done now.

The next proposition Mr. Crawford evolved will interest the farmers. He said there was not an acre of farm land in all this central Illinois section which wouldn't bring $100 and some $200 per acre. The average value of farm land in Illinois, as shown by the records for assessment purposes, was a trifle over $6 an acre. He didn't see why the Thompson decision, if sustained by the court, couldn't be applied to local Assessors, and he said something, too, about the price of horses and mules. Then he showed that the banks were getting out of paying taxes. He said that there were but two classes of property—to wit: taxable and non-taxable—and that no Legislature could take one class of property out of the taxable list and put it in the non-taxable column without defying the constitution. This was intended as a reminder to the manufacturers and proprietors of coal mines, etc. He said that later on he would appear before the board and lay before that august body these thoughts, as they had occurred to him.

Then Mr. Crawford went up-town and got his dinner, and in the afternoon he started for Chicago. He threw with unerring aim many a brick into many a greenhouse while he was in Springfield, and every brick knocked out a sash of glass.

Attorney General to Act.

As chairman of the Capital Stock committee the duty of attending to the board's side of the new turn of affairs devolved upon Mr. Barnes. "Our duty is clear," he said. "We shall call upon the Attorney General to represent us in this proceeding. The traction companies have the right to go into court and test the matter, provided they do so in good faith. The action we have contemplated and to which they object is based upon the decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois. That will be our law until it is determined otherwise. However, there will be no attempt to take snap judgment. I think I can say for the members of the board that they want this matter settled and settled so definitely that there will be no further question regarding it."

Later in the day Mr. Barnes called upon Attorney General Hamlin and asked him to look after the suits for the board. The Attorney General said he would take up the matter at once, and he immediately sent for all the papers in the teachers' tax case, in order to familiarize himself with the details of the tax fight.

Attorney Smith to Assist.

Mr. Hamlin was not in the Attorney General's office when the fight was instituted, and in the contest in the Circuit and Supreme Courts the State board was represented by Attorney John S. Miller of Chicago.

Attorney E. S. Smith of this city, of counsel for the Teachers' federation, is now one of Mr. Hamlin's assistants, and, as he is thoroughly familiar with the case from its inception, it is probable that he will be a leading figure in the litigation. By the peculiar turn in the fight Mr. Smith now becomes the champion of the board which in the original suit he opposed.

The members of the board with few exceptions got out of town at noon. It is believed here now that Judge Thompson will, considering the latest phase of the situation, extend the time for the return of the mandamus writ, originally fixed for the 22d inst. This it is expected he will do on the application of all parties in interest. While the board was ready to obey the mandate of the writ within the time specified, this lawsuit has quite upset everything. It came like a clap of thunder in a clear sky.

Sentiment of the Equalizers.

Not a half dozen members of the board were here this afternoon, and the most of them were exceedingly chary in talking about the matter. Equalizer Yantis said: "It's going to be a great suit, and Mr. Crawford evolves a point for which I have been contending—to-wit: The State board has been assessing corporations on a rule which the Supreme Court says is wrong, so I think we ought to disregard rule and back up and assess them over again."

Equalizer Hopkins said: "I am glad the suit has been commenced. It evolves new points. The country has always soaked Cook County, and now let us see that the farmers pay their taxes once."

Equalizer Kell said: "I have not examined the papers yet, and have no opinion to express, but I think everybody ought to be taxed alike, and made to pay."

Equalizer McKnight said: "The matter is now in the hands of the legal representative of the State government, the Attorney General. Until we have his advice there is nothing for the board to do."

Predicts the Case Will Fail.

Attorney I. T. Greenacre, representing the Chicago Teachers' federation, was present when the subpoenas were served on the members of the board. He said:

"I think the corporations are in desperate straits. So far as the Fourteenth amendment to the federal constitution relates to this case, its provisions are not different from the similar provisions in the State constitution.

"I can see no question raised by their bill which might not be raised by a like proceeding in a State court. I fail to see wherein a federal question is involved.

"I predict that upon the application for a preliminary injunction the court will hold that no federal question is involved, and that that will be the end of the matter. The bill utterly ignores the fact that the first assessment for 1900 was declared fraudulent by the State Supreme Court."

Synopsis of the Suits.

The suits filed are practically identical in their scope. That of the Union Traction company states that it is engaged in operating a street railway system in the Counties of Cook, Lake, McHenry, Du Page, and Will, and that it is the lessee of the North Chicago City railway company, the North Chicago Street railway company, the Chicago West Division railway company, the West Chicago Street railway company, the Chicago Passenger railway company. It is operating over 300 miles of roads. The franchises of the consequent companies were assigned in their entirety to the complainant.

The bill recites the fact that prior to April 1, 1900, the outstanding capital stock issued as "full paid" was $20,000,000 and common stock $12,000,000.

Property All Listed.

The company duly listed all its property, as the statute required, issued a sworn statement as to its capital stock, and delivered a complete schedule to the Cook County Assessor.

The bill declares that it was impracticable to state with accuracy the market or fair cash value of the corporation's stock, as no dividends ever were earned or paid on common shares. Dividends of one-fourth of 1 per cent on preferred stock were paid on Oct. 1, 1899, Jan. 1 and April 1, 1900.

The price paid upon occasional purchases was 20 cents on the dollar for common and 65 cents on preferred stock. For reliable dividends it had no established worth and its [illegible] speculative and [illegible].

The real value at the time did not exceed the aggregate value of the tangible property of the corporation, so the bill says.

The Board of Equalization decided that the fair cash or full value of the "capital stock, including its franchises," of the complainant was $2,690,630 above the value of its tangible property, and the sum of $600,000 was set down as the assessed value of the property so designated. On Jan. 28, 1900, the complainant paid to the County Treasurer $76,916—the total amount of the taxes levied by the Board of Review and the Board of Equalization. None of this has been tendered back to the corporation, the bill says.

Discrimination Is Alleged.

The board did not at that meeting make any assessment on valuation on the capital stock of any of the 112 railroad companies whose cases were considered, this number including the four elevated railroads of Chicago. The bill asserts that the board now intends to ignore the capital stock valuations made in 1900, and that it will make a second and much heavier assessment against the complainant, along with twenty-two other corporate taxpayers. At the same time 300 taxpayers of the same class were left undisturbed by the board, and this the bill declares is unjust.

The petition states that the statute gives the board no power to vacate or annul the capital stock valuation or assessment for the year 1900, or to confiscate the money paid to in satisfaction of taxes. It declares that such action on the part of the board would be unjustifiable discrimination, and it seeks to enjoin the board from assuming or exercising jurisdiction to make the capital stock assessment for 1900 against the complainant or any of its constituent corporation. The court is asked to grant an injunction to restrain the board from recording in its proceedings or certifying to any such capital stock valuation or assessment for 1900 to the Auditor of Public Accounts.

The only particular in which the other bill varies from the one filed by the Union Traction company's case is the recital of the affairs of the corporation.

LOW AT FEAST OF VICTORY

NEW YORK FUSIONISTS CELEBRATE THEIR TRIUMPH.

Mayor-Elect Addresses Large Crowd, Outlining Plans, Saying His Administration Will Not Succeed Through Use of Patronage—Wild Greeting for Justice Jerome — Richard Croker Guest of Honor at Democratic Club Dinner.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The City club gave a triumphal dinner tonight to Mayor-elect Low, Controller-elect Grout, President-elect Fornes of the Board of Aldermen, District Attorney-elect Jerome, and to all the fusion forces which these men led to victory in the late campaign.

The dinner was in the Madison Square Concert Hall. The room was as crowded with tables as it could well be. At them were seated men known in every walk in life in New York from labor delegates to corporation lawyers. In the two galleries were gathered hundreds of women. Those who sat on either side of Wheeler H. Peckham, the toastmaster, and Mayor-elect Low were Professor Felix Adler, Edward M. Grout, William T. Jerome, William H. Baldwin Jr., Charles V. Fornes, Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Lieutenant Governor Woodruff, Morris K. Jesup, R. G. Morris, Samuel Greenbaum, James R. Burnet, Jacob A. Cantor, Carl Schurz, James A. Blanchard, John P. Clarke, Eugene A. Philbin, Jacob H. Schiff, and James Speyer.

Mr. Peckham started the speechmaking with the thought that there was little to rejoice over in a plurality that amounted merely to 5 per cent of the total vote.

Low's Speech Evokes Cheers.

Mayor-elect Low's speech evoked hearty and often prolonged applause.

Of his future policy he had something to say. It was certain, he declared, that he would not appoint to office the enemies of the movement that had resulted in his election. Nor would he appoint one solely because he had helped in that cause if he was unfitted. but if he found the combination of fitness and activity in the fusion work, his pleasure at appointing would be the more keen.

The city, he said was cosmopolitan, and its government should be the same. That government must be so clean in the next two years that the people would never again be satisfied with any other sort of rule; that they would be forced to give themselves honest officials whether they wanted to or not.

When the speaker announced that his coming administration could not in his opinion be successful by means of any use of patronage, the applause was tremendous. At the close of his talk Mr. Low said that he did not place the business interests of the community on a par with the human interests.

Uses Waring as Standard.

Mr. Low said:

"What Colonel Waring did in one department we shall strive to do in many. If Warings were more abundant, I should say we should strive to do it in all, but at least we will try to set up a standard by which future administrations must be judged whether they want to or not. We shall try to see that the laws that have to do with the welfare of the poor are administered, if anything, even more conscientiously than those that concern the rich."

Wild Applause for Jerome.

Justice Jerome was introduced. Instantly there was loud applause. Almost the entire audience sprang to its feet, and in all parts of the hall men were seen waving their napkins and clapping their hands.

The newly elected District Attorney said: "This election has been fought on clean lines; it has been fought on an appeal to the plain people of this city, and they have responded to that appeal nobly. When you consider what they have been subjected to for four years and more, when you consider this, that they should have dared to stand up under what they have suffered, that they should have dared to have voiced their belief in us, it means a heap more than any 6 per cent. If we qualify on our pledges, the next time we can practically direct the secretary to cast one ballot."

Croker Speaks at Dinner.

Richard Croker was the guest of honor tonight at a dinner given at the Democratic club by the board of governors and the officials of the club. At the conclusion of the dinner a handsome silver jardiniere was presented to Mr. Croker, President John Fox, who presided at the dinner, making the presentation speech.

LOCKS UP GUARD; ESCAPES

FORT SHERIDAN PRISONER DESERTS SECOND TIME.

Private Richard Stross of the Twenty-ninth Infantry, Under Sentence for First Offense, Turns Key on His Sentinel and Again Disappears—Soldiers Complain of Rigid Rules Which, They Say, Tempt Men to Run Away—Shots Fired at Fleeing Regulars.

After locking his guard in a room, Richard Stross, a private in the Twenty-ninth Regiment at Fort Sheridan, threw the key away and boarded a train for Chicago. He has not been seen since. The guard, John Long of the same regiment, was released a half hour later by an officer, to whom he had called from a window. The escape took place on Wednesday afternoon.

Stross was a general prisoner at the fort, having been sentenced for six months and fined $60 for desertion. About two months ago he left the regiment and was gone for twenty-eight days. Then he surprised the officers by walking into his quarters and giving himself up.

Coolly Walks Away.

With another prisoner he was taken by Long to Lieutenant Stevens' quarters on Wednesday afternoon to do some repairing. Stross was told to bring some tools that were outside the door. As soon as he left the room he shut the door behind him, turned the key in the lock, and ran out of the building. Long was unable to make any one hear him, and Stross walked slowly out of the grounds. By the time that Long was released his prisoner had disappeared.

When Stross returned a few weeks ago to surrender himself he told a wonderful tale of visiting in Louisville, Ky., at Montreal, and other places. He expressed himself strongly against the forced retirement of Colonel Van Horne, and said he would not stay under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Forbes. Many of the men about the fort yesterday told of regulations instituted by the new commander which they believed to be too severe.

Many Seek to Desert.

The number of attempted desertions during the last month is larger than for any same period in the history of the fort. Last Sunday three men tried to leave. Several shots were fired at them by the sentinels, and the men were taken back to the guardhouse. Monday three others made a break at different times.

One of them, Sherman Long, a private of Company K, also a prisoner, talked with the sentinel for some time, finally asking for permission to look at the guard's rifle. The sentinel passed over the weapon and Long started to run. He was seen by other members of the guard and ten shots were fired at him, none taking effect. Long threw down the rifle and surrendered.

Lieutenant Colonel Forbes was not in his quarters last night. The other officers about the fort claimed to have no personal knowledge of the increase in attempted desertions.

MAN DIES; WIFE IS ARRESTED.

Mystery in Anton Lessner's Death Causes Police to Hold Woman and a Boarder.

Anton Lessner, a laborer, 60 years old, was found dead in his house in the rear of 944 Diversey boulevard at noon yesterday. The police arrested his wife, Anna, 45 years old, and Joseph Krause, a boarder. They will be held pending the Coroner's verdict.

The body was discovered by Matt Grossman, who lives in the same house. He found the dead man lying on the floor and by his side lay his wife, in a stupor. She was incapable of giving any information regarding her husband's death and was locked up.

Krause was away from the house during the morning. He returned about 1 o'clock and was arrested. He said that Lessner had been sick for seven weeks, but aside from that he knew of no cause for his death.

SEEK CLEWS TO THE STRANGLERS.

Evansville, Ind., Police Follow Men Who Knew Two Murdered Women.

HUNT SO FAR IS VAIN.

Coroner Holds Inquest and Declares One Person Committed Both Crimes.

EVIDENCE IS KEPT SECRET.

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The authorities seem as far from finding the stranglers of Mrs. Georgia Railey and Miss Lena Renner as ever.

The theory that one man committed both crimes is not taking deep root with the police, because nothing has developed to bear this out beyond the similarity of the two murders and the fact that the analysis of the stomachs of the two women showed that each had eaten yellow-skinned apples.

Coroner Walker, however, declares one man killed both women.

While Miss Renner's stomach showed the presence of morphine, enough to make her drowsy and an easy victim, there was nothing out of the ordinary with Mrs. Railey's stomach.

Police Follow Many Clews.

Charles Hayes, the St. Louis traveling man, who was a friend of Mrs. Railey, has not been seen since the woman's death. An attempt has been made to locate him.

The police have a clew regarding a stranger whose identity they are jealously guarding. The story that this man was seen to stop on the street and talk with Mrs. Railey as she was proceeding on her way home from up town and the man's disappearance the next day is taken to mean much. This man, whoever he may be, has been followed through Illinois to St. Louis and back into Illinois. Detective Hutchens is making desperate efforts to follow his lead.

One of several young men who paid court to Miss Renner, who satisfactorily explained his whereabouts on Monday night, was put under surveillance today. It has been found that some of his statements were untrue and he probably will be arrested tomorrow. He is a railroad man.

Question Friends of Women.

The police believe that the two women were killed by men jealously in love with them. The acquaintances and associates of the murdered women are receiving especial attention of the police and a number of them have been invited to headquarters for a conference. Several have been put in the "sweat box," but results are said not to have been encouraging.

Says One Man Killed All.

Coroner Walker has been taking testimony all day, and after summing up the evidence, which is denied the public for the present, he still adheres to his original belief that one man committed both crimes.

The Coroner is of the opinion a degenerate is at large in this community whose mania is to strangle women.

Mrs. Mary Starck was the first victim, three years ago. Last spring two colored women came under the influence of this messenger of death. Each was believed to have been choked to death.

Fannie Butler, a mulatto, was in an empty stable in the residence part of the city, and Lizzie Green, a black woman, was lying in an alley not far from the same spot a few days later. The Butler woman was said to have died of heart failure, although it was said at the time she had been strangled. The Green woman was stretched out as if prepared for burial, her arms being folded across her breast. A verdict of suicide was returned.

The mystery surrounding these three deaths was never cleared. Now that the fourth and fifth deaths have occurred this community is startled at the seemingly easy manner in which the work is done.

MERCHANT KILLS HIMSELF IN THE MONADNOCK BLOCK.

Charles Bachrach, for Years in the Clothing Business, Mails a Letter to His Son and Then Takes His Life.

Charles Bachrach of 3360 Prairie avenue, for thirty years in the clothing business in Chicago and Elgin, committed suicide in the Monadnock Block yesterday morning.

Shortly before shooting himself he wrote and mailed a letter to his son Benjamin, who is associated with W. S. Forrest, the attorney. The letter was bulky, and probably had required some time in its preparation. It is believed it contained the reasons why Mr. Bachrach took his life, though so far as other members of the family know there was no cause for the action. At the residence last night it was said that the son Benjamin was asleep. No information about the letter was given.

Mr. Bachrach accompanied his wife on a shopping tour in the morning, as she was preparing to go to Baltimore to visit her daughters. They went later to the office of their son Sampson, who is in the jewelry business in the Medinah Temple. There Mr. Bachrach wrote the letter to his son, Benjamin, and then went away, saying he would leave for Elgin at 10:30 o'clock. At that time he appeared in good spirits.

He went to the Monadnock Building, and entering a lavatory on the seventeenth floor, fired the shot which resulted in his death a little later at the County Hospital. The family was notified at once, but before any member could reach his side he was dead. Mrs. Bachrach was prostrated.

The clothing store of the deceased was in Clark street, south of Jackson boulevard. It is known as the "Imperial." A few years ago Mr. Bachrach failed in business, but it is said he made a settlement satisfying to his creditors.

Mr. Bachrach leaves a family consisting of his widow and seven sons and two daughters. One of the sons, Harry, was a private in the Fourth Infantry in the Spanish-American war and was wounded in the ankle at the battle of El Caney. Another son, William, served through the same war with the Second Illinois Infantry.

The funeral will take place at 10 o'clock on Sunday morning. Burial will be at Rosehill.

BIG FIRE AT STURGEON BAY.

Three Lumber Yards Burned, Four Firemen Hurt, and Entire Town Threatened for Time.

The fire started in the yards of the Parker Lumber company during a heavy gale and spread rapidly to the yards of the Milwaukee Lumber company and the Pankratz Lumber company. All these were destroyed.

The gale carried the blazing lumber over the city, and for a time it was feared the entire city would burn. Aid was summoned from Kewaunee and other neighboring towns.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—M Jane Toppan's own stories concerning deaths in the Davis family at Cataumet considered by the prosecuting officers to among the strongest things to support charge that she poisoned Mrs. Mary Gibbs. Most important of all is a statem she made to State Officer J. H. Whitney l August, in which she accused Harry Gor of Chicago of worrying Mrs. Gibbs, ascribed her death to that cause. This what led State Detective Whitney to k Miss Toppan under surveillance pending report of Professor Edward S. Wood of H vard University as to the cause of the dea of Mrs. Gibbs and Mrs. Gordon.

Whitney called upon Miss Toppan Lowell on Aug. 27 or 28, which was before bodies of Mrs. Gordon and Mrs. Gibbs w exhumed for the autopsy. The nurse parently entertained no suspicion that Whitney had called upon her because thought she had any criminal knowle of the deaths of any one of the four memb of the Davis family.

Substance of Toppan Testimony.

He asked her particularly about M Gibbs, and Miss Toppan made substantia this statement:

"Mrs. Gibbs was much distressed at death of her mother, father, and sister, a especially after her father died. She was su fering from the shock and was in no cond tion to attend to the affairs of her father estate. Mr. Gordon insisted upon Mrs. Gib joining him in an inspection of Alden Davis' papers. He kept her at work on t papers with him all day Sunday and duri Sunday night, until she was almost pro trated from the nervous strain and t fatigue.

"Monday she was tired out, although s went to Falmouth. That evening Mr. Go don wanted her to continue the work, b she was so weak that she could not.

"Mrs. Gibbs lay on the lounge, and I tempted to prescribe for her and to make h comfortable. Mr. Gordon ordered me o of the room and said: 'Mrs. Gibbs pref to be with her relatives. She does not wa you here.'

"I did not have charge of Mrs. Gibbs un Dr. Latter came the next morning and t me what to do.

"I feel sure that Mrs. Gibbs' death w hastened by the nervous and physical str to which she was subjected by her work up her father's papers with Mr. Gordon."

Talks of Quarrel with Gordon.

Miss Toppan also told Whitney that th was some controversy between Mrs. Gi and Harry Gordon on the appointment of administrator for the estate of Allen P. Gib as Mr. Gordon wished Mrs. Gibbs, as the o immediate heir, to agree that he be selected take charge of the property.

After the bodies of Mrs. Gordon and M Gibbs were exhumed and the autopsy p formed, Whitney called upon Mrs. Beul Jacobs, and asked her what she kn of Harry Gordon's interference with t nurse. Mrs. Jacobs denied the truth of M Toppan's statement.

ARMY SOCIETY BANQUET.

TENNESSEE ASSOCIATION HEARS PRAISE OF M'KINLEY.

Senator Fairbanks Makes Notable Speech to Assemblage in Indianapolis—Says Executives of United States Do Not Suffer in Comparison with Greatest Sovereigns in History—General Greenville M. Dodge Elected President.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The members of the Army of the Tennessee closed its reunion with a banquet at the Denison Hotel tonight. The chief address was by Senator Charles W. Fairbanks, who responded to the toast, "Our President." In part he said:

"The office of President of the United States, with a possible exception, has been filled by men of high character and exalted purpose from George Washington to Theodore Roosevelt. We may from time to time have opposed their economic views and challenged their administrative policies, but there has not been an occupant of that high office who has not desired his country highest welfare. The President of the United States has never suffered in comparison with the most august sovereigns upon this earth."

Praises Dead Presidents.

The Senator named each President, paying to each high compliment. Of the late Benjamin Harrison he said: "And then came Harrison of Indiana. Benjamin Harrison, your illustrious comrade, who brought to the great office of President a genius for statesmanship and a devotion to the public service which ranks him among the greatest who have held that office."

Continuing the Senator said: "And then came another whose fame and name are about the earth as the atmosphere—our third martyred President. What a rich harvest the assassin has gathered in this land of liberty.

McKinley Ideal Leader.

"Our friend who so lately fell at Buffalo was the ideal President. His early years were spent with you, where the nation's greatest heroes were born, in unselfish service for his country. Through his wise counsels, his exalted statesmanship, his great example, he had advanced his country to a place of unexampled prosperity, contentment, and happiness. How gently he bore the honors of his high office!

"Tonight there are gathered upon yonder shore most of those who have builded the republic and have preserved it to this blessed hour. We are the inheritors of the glories they won. Among the greatest of them, by the unchallenged judgment of history, stand Washington, Lincoln, and McKinley.

"The duties of the President, so mercilessly wrested from McKinley, now repose in the hands of a courageous, upright American, Theodore Roosevelt. His ideals are lofty, and to the exalted trust committed to him he will be true."

Society Officers Elected.

The society elected these officers for the ensuing year:

President—General Grenville M. Dodge, New York.

Corresponding Secretary—A. Hickenlooper, Cincinnati.

Recording Secretary—Colonel Cornelius Cadle, Cincinnati.

Treasurer—Major A. M. Van Dyke, Cincinnati.

John D. Black, son of General John C. Black of Chicago, and Isaac E. Burt of Minneapolis, son of Captain R. W. Burt, were named to succeed their fathers in membership in the society.

FIVE DEAD, SOME MISSING, MANY HURT IN MINE FIRE.

Baby Shaft at Pocahontas, Va., Scene of Explosion in Which Dozens Are Killed and Injured.

Bluefield, W. Va., Nov. 14.—Five dead bodies have been taken from the Baby mine at Pocohontas, Va. Several other persons are unaccounted for, and twenty-five persons have been rescued more or less severely burned.

The Baby mine of the Pocohontas Colliery company at Pocohontas, Va., caught fire early this morning. An alarm was sent in and the fire company responded promptly. In a short time after the fire fighters had reached the mouth of the mines and were attempting to extinguish the flames, some of the firemen and others having rushed inside of the mines to ascertain the extent of the trouble and to assist the miners entombed therein, a terrific explosion occurred, and many persons were more or less injured.

It is supposed that the mines caught fire from a defective electric light wire. It is uncertain how many more are dead, though it is now known that there are several, perhaps eight or ten men, still in the mines, unless they succeeded in making their escape through the Tug River entrance.

Twenty-five persons have been rescued, all more or less burned, some seriously and perhaps fatally. The injured were carried to their homes in wagons, and all the physicians in Pocohontas have been busy all day attending the injured.

One or two other explosions have followed that of the early morning, and others are hourly expected. The mine is still burning and clouds of smoke are constantly issuing from its mouth. The fan has been stopped, and as soon as it is possible to do so the mine will be reëntered with hope of extinguishing the fire.

In 1884 Pocohontas experienced a like occurrence, in which over 100 lives were lost.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF TETANUS.

Little Girl Dies of Lockjaw at Camden, N. J., as a Result of Vaccination.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Another case of tetanus following vaccination was reported in Camden today. The victim is Annie Cochran, aged 11 years. She was vaccinated twenty-one days ago, and felt no symptoms until yesterday, when the muscular contraction of tetanus developed. Her condition is critical. Dr. Creer reported that he had had a patient, a girl, die from lockjaw a week ago. He attributed the disease to vaccination.

Wants Methods Changed.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The development of lockjaw with fatal results in the cases of twenty patients in St. Louis who had been subjected to the antitoxin treatment for diphtheria leads the New York Medical Journal to demand that prophylatic agents, such as vaccine and antitoxin, which are to be used by the health departments, be obtained from individual producers. The fatalities at St. Louis are attributed to contaminated antitoxin. The danger of such occurrences is always greater, the Medical Journal thinks, when the serum is produced by the health department of a community for its own use. They are the more deplorable because likely to result in a popular prejudice against the antitoxin, which, since it came into use, has reduced the percentage of deaths from diphtheria from 35.46 to 15.67.

POLICE CATCH BOLD THIEF

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB DOWNTOWN STORE FAILS.

Charles Duffy, Who Already Has Been Behind the Bars, Fights Desperately When Two Detectives Prevent Him and a Companion from Stealing Jewelry to the Value of $600 from Jacob Goodman—Raid Is Planned Cleverly, but Noise Betrays.

A daring attempt to rob Jacob Goodman in his store at Clark and Harrison streets resulted last night in a desperate fight between one of the robbers and Detectives Herman and Spiegel. Charles Duffy, who has figured in other arrests, finally was subdued and locked up.

Duffy and a confederate did not enter Goodman's store until they had made a clever calculation. The store fronts on both Harrison and Clark streets, but the Harrison street entrance is little used. When the pair walked into the store Duffy was ten feet behind his companion and apparently not interested in his acts. The companion engaged Goodman in conversation relative to the purchase of some clothing and Duffy hid beneath a table and adjusted a mask of black cloth over the lower part of his face.

When the confederate and Goodman were in the most remote part of the store Duffy crawled toward the show window under cover of the table and seized a trey containing $600 worth of jewelry. The slight noise made by the thief attracted Goodman's attention, but when he started toward the door Duffy's partner seized and attempted to hold him.

Police to the Rescue.

Goodman shouted "Police," and both thieves started for the doorways. Goodman was quick enough to intercept Duffy, who drew a revolver and was backing out of the door with his plunder when the detectives, who had heard Goodman's calls for help, responded, and ran squarely into Duffy as he was backing out of the door.

There was a scuffle and the jewelry was scattered over the floor. Duffy was disarmed and handcuffed, but succeeded in tearing Detective Spiegel's overcoat almost off him. Detective Herman suffered a sprained thumb and a slight cut on the cheek, made by the muzzle of Duffy's revolver.

A crowd of several hundred people collected about the store, and it was with some difficulty that the detectives got their prisoner to the station, which is only a block distant. Once behind the bars Duffy became sullen, and denied that he had a confederate.

Prisoner's Police Record.

Duffy is only 20 years old, but is fast gaining the reputation of being a dangerous youth. On Feb. 20 of this year he was arrested on a charge of complicity in the robbery of William Stevenson of Liverpool, Ind., who was assaulted and deprived of $20 at Clark and Polk streets. While in jail awaiting trial he gave a friend $7, which was delivered to James Farrell, a companion. Duffy wanted Farrell to employ an attorney to defend him, but Farrell spent the money on liquor.

When Duffy heard of the betrayal of trust he declared he would get even, and after acquittal hunted and found Farrell in Ike Rosen's saloon in Clark street, near Harrison. Without warning he emptied his revolver at Farrell, who was taken to the hospital, where five bullets were extracted from his body. For this assault Duffy was never punished.

Duffy's attempt to rob Goodman last night and his armed resistance lead the police to think he has been concerned in some of the recent crimes of the same nature and his movements will be closely traced.

FAST MAIL BLOCKS FUGITIVE.

Burlington Train Checks Flight of Alleged Burglar and He Is Caught—Women Attack Him.

To the untimely arrival of the Burlington fast mail, John Conlon, an alleged burglar, may charge his capture by the Grossdale police. Conlon was being closely pursued, but might have escaped. He rushed up the railroad embankment and would have crossed the track had not the fast mail came thundering by at the moment, forcing him to check his flight. That momentary delay cost him his liberty.

When Mrs. Charles Crowley of Grossdale returned from a meeting of a woman's club on Wednesday afternoon she found Conlon in her house. She says he threatened to shoot her if she didn't keep quiet, but as no revolver was found on him it is presumed this was a bluff on his part. However, Mrs. Crowley refused to keep quiet. She ran at the man and shouted for help. Her onslaught was too much for the supposed thief and he fled.

Out of the house he bolted, the woman in pursuit and still shouting. Her cries attracted others, among whom was Chief Hoppenrath, and all joined in the chase. For nearly a mile the race was kept up, through pastures and over public highways, Hoppenrath occasionally sending a bullet after the fugitive. The Chief showed good speed and was gaining on his man when the railroad tracks near Hollywood were approached.

There the villain was unhanded. He was arrested by the policeman, and the women, it is said, fell upon him, for they had not dropped out of the hunt. They tore his clothing and pulled his hair, and in other feminine ways vented their indignation. Hoppenrath interfered and saved his prisoner, and on returning to the town again had to exercise his ingenuity to keep a crowd from attacking the man.

Mrs. Crowley reported her husband's watch and some articles of jewelry missing. Conlon admitted taking the watch, but said he had thrown it away.

Mrs. Rachel Gorman Robbed.

Mrs. Rachel Gorman, a solicitor for the Home for Epileptics, 413 Center street, was held up and robbed of $2 in Dearborn street, across from the old Tremont Hotel. The money had been collected from receptacles for the institution she represented. The robbers struck the woman and she was cared for in a drug store.

BOY AND CHIEF MEASURE WITS IN POLICE COURT.

Knight of Evanston Cross-Examined by a Messenger and Then Is Rebuffed When He Offers to Pay Fine.

Chief of Police Knight of Evanston measured wits yesterday with a 16-year-old boy, and the result was a dramatic scene in Justice O'Connell's court. The Police Chief was forced to take the witness stand three times, and so sharp was the cross-examination of the boy that the court, admitting there was "no preponderance of evidence," required the boy to pay only $1. Then the Chief himself offered to pay the fine, which the boy indignantly refused to allow him to do.

It was the Chief's word against the boy's. The youth, Harry Osborn, acted as his own attorney. Young Osborn was charged with riding his bicycle on the walks and with riding without a light.

"It's a millionaire's word against a working boy's," declared the messenger, "and my word is as good as his. If I were Chief of Police you would believe me. If I were Chief of Police, though, I would not hunt for boys to arrest unless they had done something."

The justice asked Chief Knight if he wished to have the fine remitted.

"There is no preponderance of evidence," he said. "It's your word, Chief, against the boy's."

Mr. Knight said he would be willing had not the boy "acted as he had," but under the circumstances he wanted to impress the boy that he could not ride on the walks. Then he told the justice that whatever he saw fit to do would be satisfactory. Justice O'Connell said he would remit the fine and half of the costs, which left $1 to pay. The boy's mother advanced, pocketbook in hand.

"Mother, don't pay the fine," pleaded the boy, breaking into tears. "It's unjust, and I would rather go to the bridewell for a month than to pay."

Chief Knight then offered to pay the fine himself and placed his money on the justice's desk. The boy, still defiant, but, seeing that the justice was about to accept the money, took a $2 bill from his own pocket, and paid the fine.

INTEREST IN NEW LIGHT

QUEER TESTS MADE AT BROWN UNIVERSITY.

Professor Frederick P. Gorham Succeeds in Extracting Enough Organisms from Decayed Meat to Produce Light Strong Enough to Take Photographs By—Explains His Line of Studies and Hopes to Produce the Organisms by Chemical Action.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The efforts of a Brown University professor to extract light from decayed meat, as announced yesterday, have created unusual interest in scientific circles here.

The man engaged in this attempt is Professor Frederick P. Gorham of the Biological department. He has been occupied with his researches for some time past and has thus far reached a point where he is able to take passe porterhouse steak and cause it to emit enough light for the taking of photographs.

This is an achievement said to have never before been accomplished in the scientific world, and hardly paralleled.

But the decayed porterhouse is with the professor only a means to an end. In time he hopes to get along without the steak, although he finds it at present essential in his investigations.

The substance of the problem which is occupying Professor Gorham's mind is the production of the greatest amount of light with the smallest of heat, and he hopes to accomplish this end by chemical means.

Having set forth the problem, Professor Gorham bethought himself that there is a kind of animal phosphorescence which is so far as known entirely devoid of heat. This is the light observable in glowing summer seas, in fire flies, in decaying vegetation, or decaying flesh. Science has long known that the phosphorescence of the seas, of wood, and meat was from minute animal and vegetable organisms. He obtained a quantity of these from a piece of decayed meat, which he transferred to test tubes containing gelatine.

"The light these organisms produce is from oxidation," said Professor Gorham, "just as the heat of our bodies is from oxidation. It is a chemical action. I have been experimenting to find what materials would produce the greatest quantity of luminosity in these small bodies, and have now reduced their diet to three chemical salts, the principal being ordinary table salt or sodium chloride. Another of the salts contains nitrogen, which is esential to the production of light, and there is a little sulphur, which I believe could be eliminated without bad results."

The professor showed his flasks containing the organisms and from them proceeded a vivid greenish glow. The professor said he had taken several photographs by the aid of the light. His search is now confined to the discovery of the chemicals which will take the place of the organisms.

MURDERER KEITH IS HANGED.

Man Who Killed Nora Kifer Near Michigan City, Ind., Executed Shortly After Midnight.

Michigan City, Ind., Nov. 15, 1 a. m.—[Special.]—Joseph D. Keith was hanged here at 12:12 this morning for the murder of Nora Kifer, near Elberfield, in April, 1900.

Keith confessed that he committed the crime. The confession covers two closely written pages of typewritten matter and is addressed to Keith's wife.

Joseph D. Keith was a farmer in Warwick County. His relations with Miss Kifer were suspicious. On April 3, 1900, Keith sent her a note asking her to be at an old bridge that night. This is the last time she was seen alive. Her dead body was found two months afterward in a creek near Evansville, Ind. Later evidence was discovered that she was murdered near Keith's home and that the body was placed in a well, from which it was taken by Keith when he became alarmed at threats of search, and thrown into a creek many miles from the well.

Notes written by Keith in the girl's name after her death, telling her parents not to be alarmed at her absence, were instrumental in fixing the guilt on Keith.

An appeal to the Supreme Court failed and sentence was affirmed.

NORTH SIDE MUSIC HALLS PUT GUARDS AT THE DOORS.

Men with Stars and Clubs Stand on Watch to Keep "Suspicious Characters" from Entering.

The music halls of North Clark and North Wells streets last night put special policemen on guard at the doors. It was said that the purpose was to prevent "suspicious characters" from entering.

The special policemen are former members of the force and are said to be acquainted with nearly all of the criminals who have been congregating in the music halls. They have been given stars and are equipped with clubs. At the Chicago Music Hall, 104 Wells street, James Healy is on duty.

Inspector Heidelmeier is said to have convinced the proprietors of the necessity of putting the guards at their doors. The Inspector on several occasions has threatened to have their licenses revoked if any more trouble, such as that already exposed in THE TRIBUNE, occurred in their places. To prevent this, it is said, the proprietors held a meeting, and the plan of having guards at the doors was at once decided on.

Among the places where the guards are stationed are the following:

The River View, 1-3 North Clark street.
The Olympia, 15 North Clark street.
The Flora, 124 Wells street.

There are several music halls in the Larrabee Street Police District also, and Inspector Heidelmeier says he will endeavor to have the proprietors adopt the plans of the proprietors in the East Chicago avenue district.

"Bad men congregate in those places," he said. "We must control them."

GATHMANN GUN TEST AGAIN DELAYED BY COAST VESSELS.

Fleet of Schooners Still in Range of Big Artillery, but Wind Is Dying Down and Today May Witness the Trial.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—There was no test of the big Gathmann gun today. The gale from the northwest continued and this forced a number of coasting schooners to take shelter in the lee of Sandy Hook, where they would have been immediately in the line of fire, and where, if not hit by a projectile, they might have been struck and sunk by flying pieces of the plate.

General Miles and the other representatives of the army and navy had a stormy trip on the ordnance boat this morning. As soon as they found the condition of affairs at the Hook they returned to New York.

The wind is dying down tonight and it is hoped that early tomorrow the whole fleet of schooners may be able to get away from the vicinity, and thus permit Captain Babbitt, the commanding officer at the proving ground, to make the tests.

MANY ATTEMPT TO DESERT.

Soldiers of Twenty-eighth Infantry Ordered to Manila Object to Starting Without Getting Shore Leave.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Wholesale desertions of soldiers from the Twenty-eighth Infantry were attempted today. In the morning the First and Third Battalions of the regiment, under command of Colonel Hooten, arrived by train from Vancouver, Wash., and were marched direct to the transport Grant, which is scheduled to sail at noon tomorrow for Manila.

Just before leaving barracks in the North they were paid off, and they saw no prospect of getting ashore until Manila was reached. It was not long, therefore, before the more reckless began to slide down the mooring lines to the wharf, out of sight of the guard stationed at the gang plank. When this means of escape was discovered, guards with fixed bayonets were stationed all over the transport and outside the dock, and the men who had escaped were placed in the calaboose.

During the afternoon at least 200 other men of the Twenty-eighth managed to elude the guards by sneaking along the edge of the wharf on the opposite side from the Grant and making their escape.

Unless the men are rounded up early tomorrow morning it is probable the Grant will be delayed.

MILLS AS LABOR ARBITRATOR.

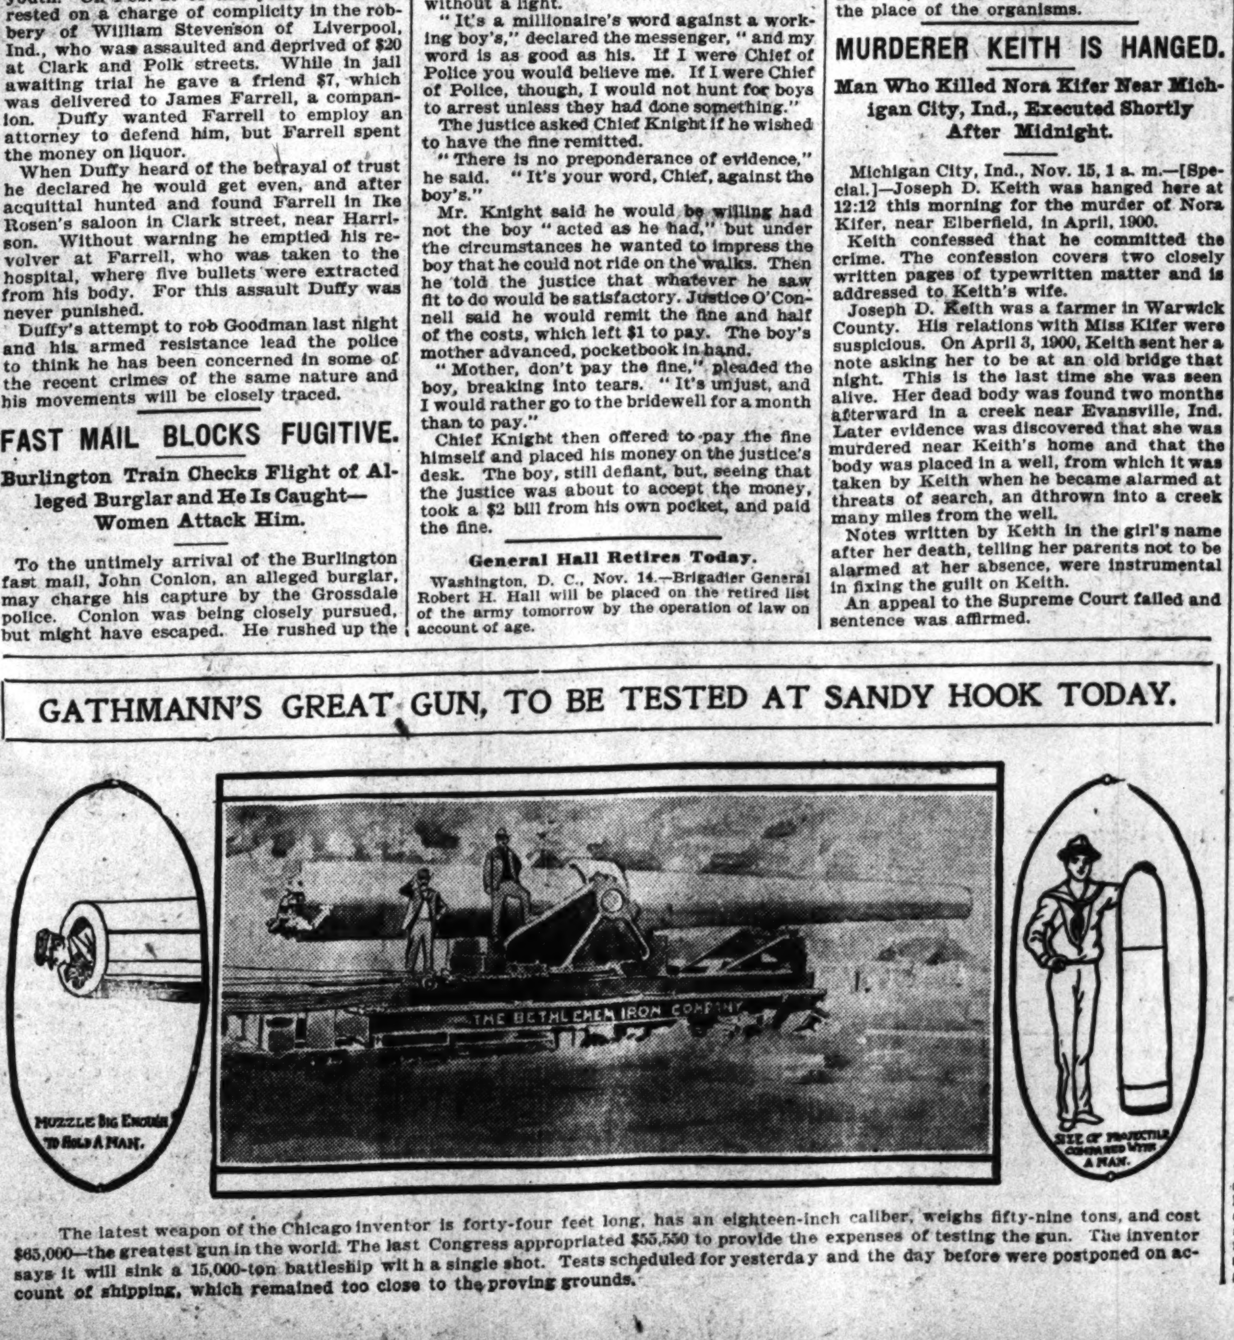
Carpenters and Their Employers Select Lawyer to Settle Any Disputes in the Future.

For the first time in years an umpire has been chosen by employers and employés to aid in adjusting differences. Luther Laflin Mills has been selected by the carpenters of the city and the Carpenters and Builders and the Masons and Builders' associations. For more than a year the committees were unable to agree on an umpire. The selection of Mr. Mills was not brought about by any pending differences or the likelihood of them arising, but simply to obviate any delay in the selection of an umpire should any difficulty occur.

Shot During a Quarrel.

Newman, Ill., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Fred England, living northeast of Newman, was shot this afternoon by Rober Hance during a quarrel. England was not disposed to have trouble, and made an effort to get away by starting to run through a cornfield. Hance told him to halt, and on his failure to obey the command pulled the trigger and sent both barrels of shot into his body. Hance gave himself up.

GATHMANN'S GREAT GUN, TO BE TESTED AT SANDY HOOK TODAY.



THE BETHLEHEM IRON COMPANY
MUZZLE BIG ENOUGH TO HOLD A MAN.
SIZE OF PROJECTILE COMPARED WITH A MAN.

The latest weapon of the Chicago inventor is forty-four feet long, has an eighteen-inch caliber, weighs fifty-nine tons, and cost $65,000—the greatest gun in the world. The last Congress appropriated $55,550 to provide the expenses of testing the gun. The inventor says it will sink a 15,000-ton battleship with a single shot. Tests scheduled for yesterday and the day before were postponed on account of shipping, which remained too close to the proving grounds.

SCORE RESCUED ON GREAT LAKES.

Two Vessels Are Wrecked and Life Savers Bring In the Drowning Sailors.

HARD FIGHTS IN GALES.

Nine Seamen Taken Off Boat at Port Hope, Woman and Eight Men at Ashtabula.

PICK UP THREE FISHERMEN.

Port Hope, Mich., Nov. 14.—In the northwest gale today the steamer Emerald became disabled by the breaking of its machinery when off this port. Deprived of its motive power the boat fell off into the trough of the sea and soon waterlogged.

Signals of distress were hoisted, and the life-saving crew from the Point au Barques station put out to the rescue. The heavy sea running made the task of taking off the crew of nine men a desperate one, but all were safely lifted aboard the lifeboat.

All were benumbed by the freezing spray which dashed over the wreck and would have been unable to hold out much longer. The shipwrecked crew were taken to the life-saving station, where they are now being cared for.

The Emerald was bound from Alpena to Detroit with a cargo of lumber at the time of the accident. No effort was made to save the steamer after the removal of the crew, and it is now drifting about Lake Huron, a dangerous derelict, its cargo of lumber and cedar in the hold keeping it afloat.

Schooner Wrecked on Erie.

Ashtabula, O., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The schooner F. M. Knapp, in tow of the steamer Nipegon, went ashore here at 7 p. m. after battling with the waves for seven hours.

The Nipegon, having in tow the schooners Melbourne and Knapp, left on Wednesday for Port Huron, but was forced to turn back for shelter. Arriving off here the tug Sumol attempted to take the Knapp in tow, but five lines parted. A northwest gale was kicking up a big sea and the schooner, dragging its anchors, drifted so far toward shore that it was impossible to run a line from the tug to it. An attempt was made to run a hawser to the schooner, but after several fruitless trials it became evident that nothing could save the boat from going ashore.

The life saving crew promptly responded to the distress signals, but owing to the position of the schooner, much time was wasted.

Crew Rescued on Life Line.

As the Knapp was two miles east of the life station, a team was brought into service to haul the apparatus down the beach. By the time the crew reached a point opposite the stranded vessel the sea was running so high that it was folly to man the lifeboat and the mortar was brought into play.

Six shots were fired before the rope finally fell over the Knapp's stern. The first person brought safely to shore was Mrs. Abraham King, wife of the Captain and owner of the boat. The crew of eight men followed, First Mate Frank Olson being the last to leave the deck. Captain King left the schooner at Detroit and it was being sailed by Olson.

The boat is pounding hard, and unless the gale goes down before morning it will be a total loss. The Knapp was built in 1867 and is of 380 gross tons burden.

Three Fishermen Rescued.

Menominee, Mich., Nov. 14.—The schooner Three Sisters, in command of Captain Louis Larson, arrived here this morning having on board three brothers named Simansky who were found clinging to the stakes of their pound nets ten miles north of here last night.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR SEE CRISIS IN WAR ON TRUSTS.

General Master Workman Simon Burns Urges New Law in Congress and Denounces American Federation.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 14.—At the national convention of the Knights of Labor this afternoon General Master Workman Simon Burns submitted his annual report, which consisted largely of an attack on the American Federation of Labor. The General Executive committee and Secretary-Treasurer Hayes also reported.

Hayes recommended that the order secure the introduction in Congress of laws to control the trusts. He said: "Organized labor must prepare for the gigantic struggle that is fast approaching, when the existence of their organizations will be at stake."

General Master Workman Burns in his annual message said: "The first great struggle between organized labor and a great trust was between the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers and the United States Steel companies. The steel companies were victorious because of the treachery and failure of organized labor to do its duty. The Amalgamated association expected at least the friendship of the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor. They received nothing but deception and opposition. It is a question if the Amalgamated organization would have entered the contest under the circumstances if it was not for the promises made and relied upon it by the members of the American Federation of Labor.

"The great combinations of capital known as 'trusts' should receive the careful consideration of all wageworkers, the merchant, business-man, and particularly the voter. The argument made that they are a help financially to the wageworker is denied by many, and I agree with the number that say they are injurious and will grow more so as they grow older.

"If the government does not interfere, restricting and controlling trusts, those large combinations of capital will control the government and the people."

ARMED GUARDS GO OUT ON BURLINGTON NIGHT TRAINS.

Discovery of Dynamite and Masks Near Lincoln, Neb., Leads to Extra Precautions by Railway Officials.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 14.—Local officials of the Burlington admitted tonight that since the first of the week their night trains leaving Lincoln have gone out with guards armed with repeating rifles. These comprise two or more guards on the train between Lincoln and Pacific Junction, Ia., of the Chicago-Denver main line, and two between St. Joseph, Mo., and Aurora, Neb., of the Black Hills night express.

This precaution was taken following the discovery last Sunday of twenty-six sticks of dynamite, together with a number of masks, hidden under a bridge just outside the city.

Sunday night three men attempted to board the express car as the train pulled out of Lincoln for the East, but they were driven off. Monday the same three men were at Ashland, and an effort was made to arrest them, but they disappeared. A watch has been kept on the bridge where the dynamite was stored, but no one has come to claim it.

Hold Up Guthrie Mail.

Guthrie, Ok. T., Nov. 14.—The stage and mail coach running between Marlow and Bailey, Ind. T., was held up yesterday by highwaymen. Mail pouches were rifled and the passengers and driver robbed of all cash and valuables.

COL. J. H. MAPLESON DIES IN LONDON.

Famous Impresario and Operatic Manager Passes Away at His Home.

FOUND MANY GREAT STARS

Began Successful Career Forty Years Ago and Always Opposed High Prices.

POPULAR IN TWO COUNTRIES.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Colonel J. H. Mapleson, father of Colonel Henry Mapleson, the operatic impresario, died in London today of Bright's disease.

Colonel Mapleson was the oldest operatic manager in point of service, and was almost as well known to American music lovers as to English. He began his career forty years ago as manager of the Lyceum in London, and was the friend, manager, and counselor of most of the operatic stars of the first magnitude, not to speak of a great number of singers whose names are familiar to operagoers of two generations. He was blessed with a greater proportion of operatic successes and popular artistic triumphs than fell to the lot of most of his contemporaries of nearly a half century. He was particularly successful at the Academy of Music in New York, which he held for several seasons, with Campanini, Christine Nilsson, Gerster, Galassi, Del Puente, and Minnie Hauk.

Early Triumphs in New York.

That was twenty-five years ago and "Aida" and "Carmen" were novelties that met with triumphs night after night. Critics have since declared that Italian opera such as is demanded and maintained in Europe has not been heard in America since Mapleson went back to England. His career at the Academy of Music is referred to as "the Mapleson régime." The beauty, fashion, and wealth of New York attended the Academy productions, and the reasonable prices which Mapleson maintained filled the house every night. There was not the specter of financial defeat to hover over every performance as in present day opera. Prices were low as compared with the prices of the last few years and the management prospered with full houses. When other managers began to raise prices Mapleson kept his at the old scale and declared he was an impresario conducting operatic performances for music lovers and not as a speculative plunger.

Always Seeking Talent.

Colonel Mapleson was credited with a genius for discovering fresh talent. His policy was to engage voices, not reputations, and he never paid extravagant salaries. Jean de Reszke sang for him thirty years ago, but did not get the $2,000 a night which he commands today. Campanini also practically received his operatic introduction through Mapleson, remaining with him until tempted by the high salary offered by Abbey.

This policy not to pay extravagant prices for his talent made it possible for Mapleson to allow the music-loving public to hear his singers at a reasonable outlay, but it robbed him of many of his stars after he had brought them to great heights in popular favor.

Singers Tempted by Others.

Patti, and all the other [illegible] from him Campanini, [illegible] of expense to the directors of the Metropolitan Opera-House or the normal prices paid to artists. The result was $7 for a seat at the Metropolitan and $100 for a box for each performance. Abbey gave each of the De Reszkes $2,000 a performance, Melba and Calvé $1,500, Plançon and La Salle from $500 to $700. Mapleson made no attempt to keep the singers tempted by Abbey, saying he preferred to give the general public such singing as he could at prices which they could afford.

Singer in His Early Days.

At 20 Mapleson was a student at the Royal Academy in London. While studying he appeared in public as a singer and for a time played on the viola in London theater orchestras. He became assistant to E. P. Smith at Her Majesty's Theater, and when Smith in 1861 abandoned Italian opera Mapleson took hold of the Lyceum and began his career as manager. He opened at the Lyceum on June 5, 1861, and ten days later produced Verdi's "Ballo in Maschera" for the first time in England. A year later he transferred the scene of his operations to Her Majesty's Theater and superintended the début of Trebelli in England. In 1868 the burning of Her Majesty's Theater drove him to the Drury Lane Theater. A year thereafter he became associated with Guy, a coalition that lasted two seasons, Mapleson returning to Drury Lane in 1871. In 1877 he reopened Her Majesty's Theater and remained manager of that house to his death. He toured the United States a number of times, the last time in 1897.

Father of Colonel Henry Mapleson.

Colonel Mapleson had one son, Henry Mapleson, born in 1851, who of late years has assisted his father in directing opera in London and is President of the International Society of Music. He is a Colonel of the British army reserve, like his father, and is well known as a writer on musical and dramatic subjects.

Raw cotton fabrics weighing eighty grammes or more per square metre will now pay from fifty to sixty marks per metric hundredweight. Grease will pay from six to ten marks per metric hundredweight. Rice for the manufacture of starch will be reduced from six to four marks per metric hundredweight. Rough hickory handles will be reduced from eight to three, and the finest and lightest shoes will be increased from 120 to 180 marks per metric hundredweight.

Horses under 2 years of age will pay ten marks and those over 2 years will pay twenty marks per head. Photographic paper will uniformly pay twelve marks and varnish seven marks per metric hundredweight.

OLDER THAN BRONZE AGE.

Recent Discoveries Seem to Prove That Stonehenge Was Built Before 1500 B. C.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 14.—A striking discovery has been made during excavations which were necessary to raise one of the monoliths in the famous prehistoric group at Stonehenge into an upright position.

The men engaged in the work have found numerous neolithic implements which evidently had been used in cutting and squaring the stones, and, when blunted, had been turned into the bedding on which the stones are supported.

The discovery is held to prove that the unique spectacle of Stonehenge is anterior to the bronze age and that the structure still visible was certainly built before 1500 B. C.

POLITICS LIVELY IN HAVANA.

General Maso's Candidacy for the Presidency Taken Seriously by Friends of Estrada Palma.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

HAVANA, Nov. 14.—The doubt which existed as to General Maso's bona fides when he published his recent manifesto regarding the Presidency is growing less. He has again stated that he intends to run for the office. The official element and the other supporters of Estrada Palma are bestirring themselves.

General Gomez, presiding at a meeting of Palma's supporters, said the contest would be a keen one.

Señor Quesada, who is campaigning for Palma, is credited by the Lucha with urging Señor Palma's cause by saying things against the Americans, though Palma is looked upon as an instrument of the policy of the American government.

It is claimed by some that General Maso represents the anti-American sentiment. By the tone of the Spanish newspapers he seems to have their support. The cry of the Masoists, however, is at present against the Cuban officials. Fernando de Castro says that [illegible] Americanizing tendencies will support General Maso.

The commission appointed by the Ayuntamiento to report on the offer of Colonel Michael Dady to reduce his bid for the paving and sewering contract for $5,702,086 has drawn up a report favoring the acceptance of the bid.

Civil Governor Nunez, who presides at the sessions of the Ayuntamiento, said he considered that the report should not be read until the minutes of the meeting at which the contract was awarded to McGivney & Rokeby were approved. The report was therefore laid on the table.

The defendants in the Havana postoffice fraud cases have been granted an extension of ten days in which to file their answers to the charges of the fiscal.

American Girl Remanded to London Hospital for Two Weeks Pending Report on Mental Condition.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Miss Vanderbilt Wackerman was brought before the magistrate at Bow Street Police Court today with a view to his directing an inquiry into her mental condition. Her demeanor in court was quiet. The magistrate prepared his decision and confined himself to making the customary order that Miss Wackerman be detained under medical supervision for a fortnight, after which date the doctor's report will be submitted to him.

FIERCE TRIBAL WAR IN MOROCCO

Benmisara Natives Raze Mesmuda Villages and Carry Eighteen Girls Into Captivity.

TANGIER, Nov. 14.—Fierce fighting has occurred between the Benmisara and Mesmuda tribes, resulting in the killing of many on both sides.

The Benmisaras razed a number of villages on the plains and carried off eighteen Mesmuda girls.

They had been threatened by the Sultan with punishment for abducting a Spanish boy and girl, and took this method of demonstrating that they were prepared to fight any force that might be sent against them.

ROSEBERY TALKS OF POLITICS.

England's Former Premier Declares Political Parties Must Sink Their Identity in Great Emergencies.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Lord Rosebery, speaking tonight in Edinburg, said he did not intend again to try to secure a reform of the House of Lords, as this was not a task for an individual, but one needing a national impulse.

"I would like to see," he continued, "an experiment for a year of a government formed entirely of business-men, such, for example, as Mr. Carnegie and Sir Thomas Lipton, instead of politicians.

"I would ask you, Are we getting our money's worth for the money spent? We are beginning to learn the lesson that great measures must in future be carried more by the harmony of contending parties or by the agreement of belligerent politicians than by the overpowering ascendency of any one faction in the country."

Continuing, the speaker said he blamed no party and blamed no government, but saw around him questions demanding solution and a general apathy and impotence to deal with them. Political parties, he said, must on occasions be willing to sink their differences and forget who was in power and who would get credit for the carrying out of measures if they wish those measures to be carried out.

BRITISH GALES STILL CONTINUE.

Thirty-four Vessels Wrecked and Death List Reaches One Hundred and Ninety.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 15, 3 a. m.—Disasters along the coast are reported almost hourly. The gale continues and the death list already sums up to 190. Thirty-four vessels have been completely wrecked.

The most notable disaster reported today was at Yarmouth, where the Caister lifeboat was manned to go to the assistance of a smack in distress. The heavy seas made it extremely difficult to launch the boat. At last when it had been got afloat its crew failed to put it about quick enough and the boat was dashed violently ashore, capsizing in shallow water, where the crew were held prisoners under their own boat.

Three men were dragged out almost lifeless and nine others were drowned. When the lifeboat was wrecked a man named Haylett, whose two sons, a grandson, and a son-in-law were imprisoned under the overturned boat, was dragged from under and saved.

Lloyd's agent at Kingstown, Ireland, telegraphs that the revenue cutter Flora has been totally wrecked. The crew was saved.

A dispatch from Saltburn, Yorkshire, says the Norwegian bark Erratic has been wrecked off that place. Eight of the crew were drowned.

From wreckage seen in Belfast Lough today it is supposed that the fifty-nine-ton collier White Abbey has been lost and the crew of nine drowned.

SPAIN FACES A NEW ERA.

CLOSE OF THE REGENCY TO BE MARKED BY UNIQUE BOOK.

Former Members of the Ministry and Prominent Public Men to Unite in a Review of the Kingdom and Its Army, Navy, Politics, Art, Letters, Science, and Industry—Notable Indication of an Intellectual Revival in the Historic Peninsula.

[Copyright: 1901: By the New York Tribune.]

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 15, 3 a. m.—The close of the Regency of Spain will be commemorated by a unique literary work, written by former members of the ministry and prominent public men. Señor Moret, Minister of the Interior, and Carmen Sylva will deal with the personality of the Queen Regent; Silvela will discuss the Regency's relations with the political party and Pi y Margall, republicanism. Villaverde will take up finances; Cervera, the navy; Lopez Dominguez, the army; the Duke of Tetuan, international relations; Gamazo, judicature reform; and Sanchez Toca, commerce. The most interesting chapter for Americans will be that on the colonial disaster from the pen of Señor Maura, late Minister of the Colonies. Socialism will be jointly discussed by Professor Azcarate of the University of Madrid, and Pablo Iglesias, a labor leader well known in England. Clericalism will be treated of by Pidal, Spanish Ambassador at the Vatican, and Canolajas, leader of the anti-clericals. The merchant marine will be considered by the Marquis of Camillas, and education, agriculture, industry, art, letters, and Africa have been assigned by the Ministers to well known Spanish writers.

This literary enterprise, which will be carried out with the coöperation of leading men of all parties, is a notable sign of an intellectual revival in the historic peninsula. Spain, instead of being ruined by the loss of her colonies and the war with the United States, has been benefited by deliverance from ruinous economic conditions. The close of the Regency and the opening of the new reign may mark the beginning of an era of progress and prosperity.

Series of Royal Journeys.

Next year will probably witness a series of royal journeys in the United Kingdom. The world wide empire has already received the heir to the throne and Wales and Cornwall will be honored by special journeys and festivities. The state entry into Edinburg, a project which the court has deferred but not abandoned, and the King is expected to visit Belfast, Dublin, and the south of Ireland after coronation.

Following the example set when the King returned from his Indian tour in 1876, the corporation of London has decided to entertain the Prince and Princess of Wales at a dinner in Guild Hall on Dec. 5. Since the death of Victoria no member of the royal family has publicly visited the city, and the hope is general that their royal Highnesses will proceed to Guild Hall in state.

New Departure at the Savoy.

The Savoy Theater has tried the experiment of substituting two pieces nightly for the comic opera with which it has been identified for many years. A musical score has been supplied for "Ib and Little Christina," originally produced by Martin Harvey. The new departure probably marks the permanent transition of the Savoy from comic opera to musical comedy. Sales at Christie's were resumed yesterday for the holiday season. The late Cosmo Monkhouse's collection of Oriental and old English porcelain was auctioned off sluggishly at fair prices with a few pieces of decorative furniture.

PRESIDENT Y. W. C. A. BOARD OF MANAGERS.

MRS. CHARLES HOWE

Mrs. Charles Howe was elected President of the Board of Managers of the Young Woman's Christian association yesterday. Mrs. O. B. The treasurer reported that $7,000 had been paid off on the mortgage in the last year. The Board of Managers will try to have the mortgage raised by subscriptions, which, they say, will remove their only burden. The receipts for the last year were $78,202 and the disbursements $77,552.

BRIGAND CAMP NOW LOCATED.

Consul Dickinson Reports Discovery of Lair of Miss Stone's Abductors.

LIKELY TO BE FREE SOON.

RANSOM MAY BE REDUCED.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Miss Ellen M. Stone, the American missionary, is not only alive and well but the brigands' lair where she is held captive has been located.

This good news came to the State department today from C. M. Dickinson, the United States diplomatic agent at Sofia, Bulgaria, who is negotiating with the brigands for the release of Miss Stone and her companion, Mme. Tsilka.

Mr. Dickinson also sent information about the chances of securing the freedom of the two women which is of such an encouraging character that the prospects that they will soon be restored to their friends appear to be good.

Mr. Dickinson says in his dispatch that the place where Miss Stone has been located is in Bulgarian territory. It is probably not far from Sofia, as there has been little delay in the exchange of communications between the brigands and their agent, who is negotiating with Mr. Dickinson. He is not trying to drive a bargain with the brigands as to the amount to be paid for Miss Stone's release. The State department is willing to hand over the full amount of the ransom fund collected in this country, which now aggregates $60,000, believing that humanity demands the prompt release of the American missionary and the Bulgarian lady who is with her.

It is understood, however, that the brigands have not demanded the entire ransom fund, and the difficulties in securing the release of Miss Stone have arisen from other causes. At this time the prospects of her liberation are brighter than ever before.

Bulgaria Urged to Act.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 14.—In view of the obstacles placed in the way of Consul General Dickinson by the Bulgarian authorities regarding the ransom of Miss Stone Spencer Eddy, Secretary of the United States Legation, visited M. Gueschoff, the Bulgarian agent now here, and made strong representations in which he urged that Gueschoff telegraph his government to end the present state of affairs in the interest of a speedy solution of the matter.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Nov. 14.—Miss Ellen M. Stone and Mme. Tsilka are now said to be occupying a hut in a village of southern Bulgaria, in which they are closely guarded.

There is reason to believe that a conference of the secret committee, held at Dubnitz, favored a reduction of the ransom demanded and that as soon as it comes within the range of the funds at the disposal of Consul General Dickinson he is ready to seal the proposal.

Girls Anxious to Be Abducted.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—The Turkish government is much exercised over the report that two American girls, named Belauney and Stetson, have started for Turkey with the idea of getting captured by brigands in a manner similar to the case of Miss Ellen M. Stone.

The Turkish Legation here has received a dispatch from the official at Constantinople to investigate the matter, as it is thought the girls will pass through Paris.

A dispatch from Philadelphia, published on Nov. 2, announced that two girls, Kate Boyle and Flora Preston, had started for Macedonia with the idea of getting abducted by brigands. Possibly this was the origin of the Porte's perturbation.

First Sixteen Years Determine Structure and Physical Health.

If parents could realize what a crime they commit in permitting children to have heavy drugs during their early life, such drugs, for instance, as coffee, which stunts their growth, prepares them for dyspepsia and nervous wrecks, they would do anything, go to any amount of trouble and care, to change the methods and give their children the advantages that nature demands to produce perfect specimens.

A sixty-year-old woman writes: "My over-indulgent papa used to say, at the table, 'Why not let the child have what she likes; it won't hurt her any.' He referred particularly to my drinking coffee, which I was very fond of as a child. He honestly thought it didn't hurt me, for with his strong body, apparently without nerves, he was not consciously affected by coffee, but the effect on me—a bundle of nerves—was to develop restlessness and stunt my growth.

The first effect after drinking coffee was that of delightful exhilaration, and I felt courage and strength to attack almost any amount of active work, but in a few hours the reaction came, with misery in my chest, palpitation of the heart, and most unbearable pains in my stomach.

Finally my attention was called to Postum Cereal Food Coffee and we secured some of it. It was prepared according to directions, but breakfast being delayed, the Postum got an extra boiling, which developed all its virtues, and we all fell in love with it from the first moment. The change in our physical health, after drinking Postum, was something remarkable. We have as delicious coffee as anyone could ask, but it is a perfectly healthy coffee, and the more we drink of it, in reason, the better we are. I am satisfied that the increasing amount of heart difficulty of late years, among young people, is directly attributable to the use of coffee, and it is a great blessing to have so safe and delicious a food coffee as Postum. Please omit my name from publication." ——, East Brookfield, Mass. Name given upon application to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich.

A Tale of the First Crusade
By WILLIAM STEARNS DAVIS,
Author of "A Friend of Caesar." Illustrated by Louis Betts.
Cloth, $1.50.
The adventures of a young Norman cavalier, whose bride, a Byzantine princess, was stolen from him in Syria, and regained romantically at the siege of Jerusalem.
Full of striking contrasts, a strong and brilliant story of western feudalism, chivalry and devotion, of Oriental gold and glitter, and of a fanaticism both Christian and Moslem.
The title comes from the prologue, where the great Pope Hildebrand [Gregory VII.], while dying, calls on his followers to vow to go on the crusade when "God Wills It!" "Be this your battle cry, 'God Wills It!'—for when God wills, how may man or arch fiend hinder?"

The Real World

The chief woman in this new novel by Mr. Herrick is the daughter of an Ohio manufacturer, and the plot is developed through the story of a young man's life. The underlying idea is eternally old; that the world does not exist until created afresh for each person. SEE SCHEME TO ATTACK TARIFF.

Protectionists Fear Free Traders Will Run Reciprocity Convention.

DECIDE TO STAY AWAY.

Englishman Tells an Unusual Story of Fraud in Having Countryman Arrested.

GENERAL NEW YORK NEWS.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE,
New York, Nov. 14.

Fear Free Traders Will Run Convention.

Prominent protectionists in New York, Pittsburg and Philadelphia think they have discovered an attempt on the part of well known free traders to use the reciprocity convention, to be held in Washington on Nov. 19, as a means to break down the protective system and secure sweeping amendments to the Dingley tariff law.

It was announced today that as a result of the fear that the free traders would have things their own way, Charles A. Moore, President of the American Protective Tariff league, had decided not to attend the convention, and that all of the more prominent members of the league would purposely stay away from the meeting.

Mr. Moore said this afternoon:

"It is true that I had intended to attend the reciprocity convention and that I am not going," Mr. Moore paused an instant and then added, "I'm too busy."

Another protectionist said: "The protectionists have discovered that the free traders are rallying in great numbers for the convention, and they are not going to lend their presence to any gathering that is likely to be led into taking radical action along reciprocity lines. President McKinley meant reciprocity within safe protection bounds when he made his Buffalo speech. The free traders interpreted his remarks as an indorsement of their theories. They are planning to take advantage of the opportunity afforded at the convention to get through some radical resolution pledging the convention to the support of a free trade bill.

"The business condition of the country should remain undisturbed. The country is prosperous, the gold reserve is increasing, and the government is raising its revenues without distressing any branch of trade or commerce. Any radical step will disturb the prevailing conditions.

"The leading protectionists are not going into a movement that will tie their hands when they want to protest against unwise tariff tinkering."

Seth Low is going to Washington tomorrow to see President Roosevelt. After announcing this Washington trip Mr. Low said, with a laugh: "It may detract from the importance of this visit, in your opinion, when I tell you that I am going in response to an invitation which I received from the President before I was nominated." President Roosevelt and Mr. Low are warm friends.

Englishman Has Another Arrested Charging Fraud.

Odessa S. Elton, an Englishman, living at 375 Eighth avenue, caused the arrest of a fellow-countryman in Broadway on Wednesday, and in the Center street police court today told a remarkable story of an extensive fraud which he alleged the prisoner committed in London early this year. The prisoner says he is Louis Francis. He is 39 years old and is living at 576 Lexington avenue. He declines to talk about himself or his record. He is charged with sharing in the embezzlement of £24,000 in London last April.

This is the story as Elton told it in court today:

"The middle name of this man is Francis, but his full name is Louis Francis Schuppisser. In Camden Town, London, under the firm name of Louis Francis Schuppisser & Son, he and his brother, Charles E. Schuppisser, had a piano manufactory. Last spring they failed, after having secretly removed the greater part of their stock. There were many small creditors. Three of these, utterly ruined, committed suicide.

"The brothers disappeared, but Charles was subsequently convicted on the charge of embezzlement. I was a representative of the firm for three years. At the time of its dissolution £80 were due to me. This man Louis, it was learned, escaped from his London home in a hospital ambulance, crossed the channel to Havre, and took passage to New York in La Bretagne. This afternoon I saw him here and had him arrested."

Judge McMahon, in General Sessions, denied today the motion of Edward G. Glennon, warden of the West Thirtieth Street Station, to dismiss the indictment charging him with neglect of duty. Glennon urged that the indictment was found on illegal and insufficient evidence. Glennon has a motion pending in the Supreme Court.

Plan Combine of Printing Press Makers.

According to authorities in the printing trade, plans to combine the makers of printing presses have been brought nearly to fulfillment. The scheme was broached long since. Now, however, seven manufacturers are understood to have given options on their plants. An eighth has named a price at which he will sell, and although the offer has not been formally accepted, it seems to be expected that the deal will be closed soon.

If the plans are carried out the combination will include the Cox Duplex and the Huber works, the Miehle Printing Press & Manufacturing company, the Potter Printing Press works at Springfield, Mass.; the Campbell Printing Press & Manufacturing company, the Goss Printing Press company, the Whitlock Printing Press & Manufacturing company, and Walter Scott & Co.

The capitalization of the company has not yet been decided finally. Preliminary figures are variously stated at from $12,000,000 to $20,000,000.

The famous Hope diamond may not after all be brought to the United States, although it has been bought by an American firm from Lord Francis Hope. Simon Frankel of the firm of Frankel & Co. of 68 Nassau street, who personally negotiated its purchase, cabled his firm from London today that he is negotiating for its sale with an Englishman.

Prepare to Bury President of Hobo Club.

Funeral services over the body of Captain William H. Baker, better known to the members of the Hobo club, of which he was President, as "Old Boiled Shirt," will be held on Saturday at Bacigalupo's Chapel, in Mulberry street. Not only will every one of the fifty members of the Hobo club attend, but many members of the profession in Brooklyn, Jersey City, and The Bronx will be there, for "Old Boiled Shirt" was well known in all of those places.

Captain Baker was killed by a street car. Baker was more than 70 years old, and has been known to the Bowery as a song peddler for twenty-five years. His hair and beard were white, but he was straight as an arrow. He always wore a well ironed shirt, hence his name.

He had, what in the eyes of the hobos, was an enormous fortune, perhaps $10,000 or $15,000. In spite of his wealth he lived in a cheap lodging-house.

The Hobo club has been in existence for five years. The organization took place in a Bowery saloon, where "Old Boiled Shirt" and some companions were gathered for a drink.

The Hobo club started with a membership of thirty-eight. Dues of two cents a day were assessed, and the membership was in-

Python Eats Young Alligator.

The largest of the three pythons in the Central Park menagerie felt hungry early this morning. Uncoiling itself from around the top of the tree trunk in its cage in the monkey house it crawled over toward the tank of water where three young alligators were lying asleep and swallowed the largest one, which measured two feet eight inches. The snake was eight feet long. The swallowing process occupied an hour.

Jake Cook, the keeper of the monkey house, entered the building as the snake was completing its meal. He reached the cage in time to see the saurian's tail still twitching as it disappeared from view.

The keeper knew he could not rescue the victim without damage to the python, and pythons are more valuable than alligators, so he notified Superintendent John B. Smith of the menagerie. Mr. Smith ordered the other two 'gators taken from the cage lest the snake swallowed them also.

It is now definitely known that the Rev. Dr. Poindexter S. Henson, who last Sunday resigned the pastorate of the First Baptist Church in Chicago, will begin his work at the Hanson Place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, to which he has been called, on Jan. 1.

Foundrymen Close Meeting at Gilsey House.

The fifth annual convention of the National Founders' association came to a close at the Gilsey House today by the election of the following officers: President, W. D. The foundrymen of Cleveland and Lorain presented Mr. Penton with a costly chest of flat silverware, together with a bound volume of original letters from the foundry firms of Cleveland, paying tribute to Mr. Penton for his service in connection with the great Cleveland molders' strike of 1900-'01 and crediting his efforts with bringing the strike to a successful termination.

Peddler's Wife Inherits Fortune of $500,000.

Mrs. Peter Koster, wife of a peddler, whose home is on People street, West Hoboken, is heir to $500,000, left to her by her grandmother, who died in England a short time ago. Mrs. Koster was notified of the legacy by a firm of English lawyers. She was informed that the money was left to her and a similar amount to a brother, who had been missing for several years. She was told also that it would be necessary to prove definitely what had become of her brother before the estate could be settled up finally. Mrs. Koster wrote to friends in all parts of the world asking about her brother. He was located in Hamilton, Ont., on Monday. The brother and sister have arranged with Councilor E. J. Wicheld of Hoboken to go to England next month to complete arrangements for having the fortune transferred to them.

The board of managers of the American Sabbath union held a meeting today, at which they unanimously declared against any less stringent laws against the opening of saloons on Sunday than now exist.

Wonders What Became of the $4,000.

A business-man who thought before election that it would be advisable to enjoy the favor of Tammany tells this story. He sent a check for $6,000 to the campaign fund. A few days later the business-man met a Tammany Hall man, not the one to whom the check had been made payable, but one who had access to the fund books.

"Ah," said the Tammany man. "I see you are with us this year. I saw your name down for a $2,000 subscription."

"Two thousand, did you say?" asked the business-man.

"Yes, $2,000. It was generous. We won't forget you."

Helen Gould Is Cheered at Y. M. C. A. Jubilee.

Miss Helen M. Gould was accorded a hearty reception at the jubilee dinner of the International committee of the Young Men's Christian association of North America, which was held at the Waldorf-Astoria tonight. She occupied a box in the grand ballroom of the hotel and the applause came when W. B. Miller in his report of the Y. M. C. A. work in the army and navy, said: "To that noble woman whose name is on every tongue, who gave the association hall in Brooklyn, too much praise cannot be paid."

F. C. Moore of the Boston association spoke of the work the young men of the association were doing for the moral and political regeneration of cities.

Dr. Lucien C. Warner, chairman of the International committee of the Y. M. C. A. of North America, presided at the dinner and there were about 500 diners and guests.

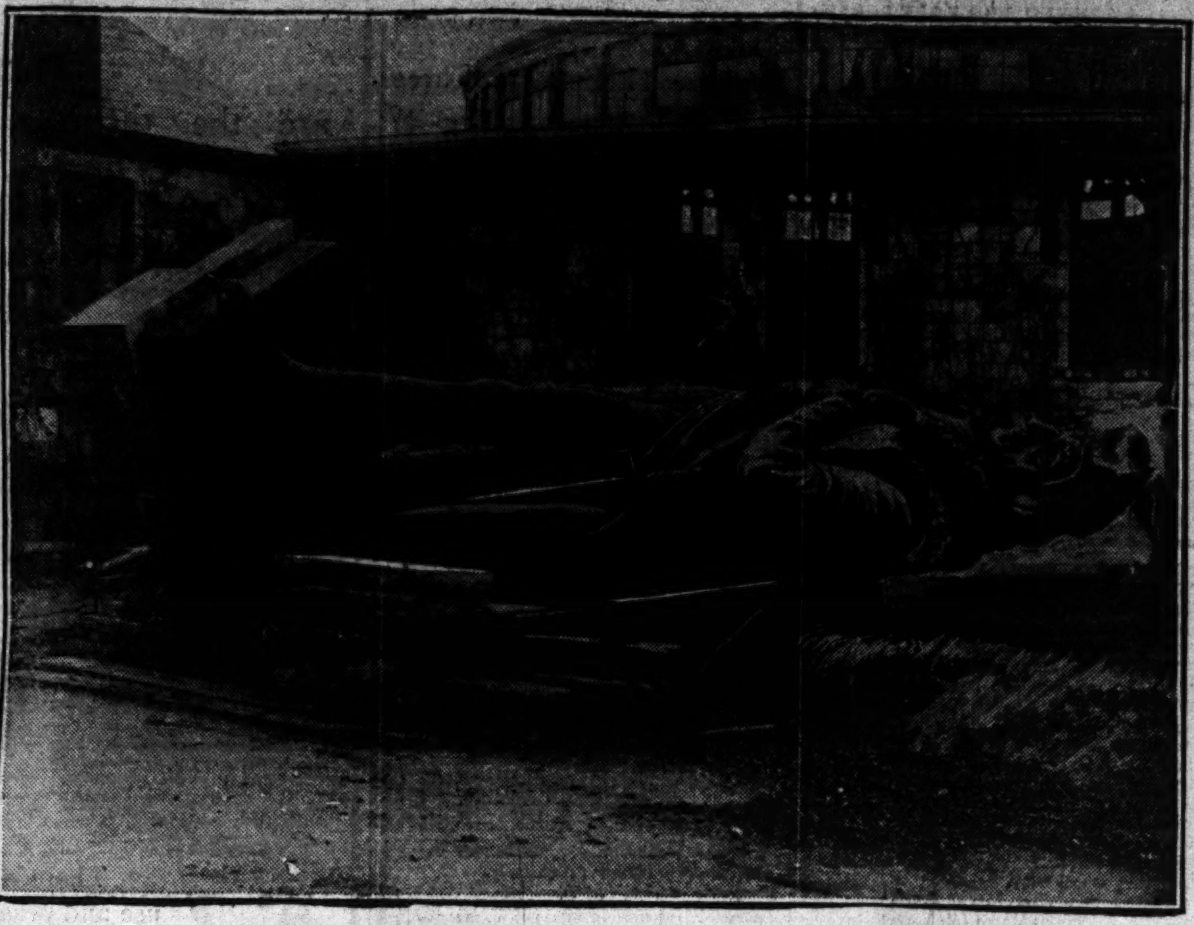
TREASURE THE SOUTH PARK BOARD SAVED FROM THE MELTING POT.



[From a photograph taken for THE TRIBUNE.]

Christopher Columbus, still flat on his back and as grim as ever, held forth as usual yesterday in Washington Park and seemed not the least disturbed over the effort to convert him into a mass of molten bronze. Members of the South Park board, who suspected that President Charles L. Hutchinson of the Art Institute had some ulterior motive when he asked for the big counterfeit, still seemed inclined to believe that Christopher was a valuable asset. None of them, however, could propose a way by which he could be transformed into anything particularly useful or beautiful. The mice and crickets continued to hold carnival in the big statue's interior, and now and then some stranger would give the bronze figure a fleeting glance, shudder, and pass on.

SARAH GRAND ON "MAN"

ENGLISH LITERARY WOMAN LECTURES ON THE OPPOSITE SEX.

At the Outset She Has Some Harsh Things to Say About the Sons of Adam, but Toward the End She Says Something About "Growing Wings"—Her Guiding Principle Is Laid Down—Some Pointed Aphorisms Provoke Laughter.

Mme. Sarah Grand, the English writer, made her first public appearance in Chicago as a lecturer last night in the Fine Arts Hall. She was greeted by a large audience, which paid her the compliment of following her with the closest attention for nearly two hours while she discussed "Mere Man." The gentler sex was largely in the majority and manifested a keen appreciation of the thrusts she directed at the masculine world, yet the men present went away feeling as thought they had got off lightly after all.

Aphorisms of the stamp familiar to the readers of Mme. Grand's writings were thickly strewn throughout the lecture. Some of them provoked laughter from the men and some of them made the women a trifle uneasy for a moment. It was remarked that her last words, as she bowed herself off the stage, contained a reference to "men with growing wings."

From an English Viewpoint.

Mme. Grand apologized at the outset for the limitations governing her knowledge of "mere man." She stated that she would discuss men from an English standpoint, for the sufficient reason that she knew absolutely nothing about American men. This put the male portion of the audience in such a good humor that some of the men laughed in delightful anticipation of hearing their Anglo-Saxon brothers flayed while they escaped. In the end it was discovered that English and American men were all the same to Mme. Grand.

"I give forth my subject with a gasp," said Mme. Grand, after she had removed with much deliberation a pair of long gloves and given the women a chance to admire her costume. "I know in my heart that man born of woman must be something more than a huge joke, and I therefore approach my subject carefully and prayerfully."

Speaking of the origin of the epithet, "mere man," the lecturer disclaimed with sarcastic emphasis that she was in any way responsible for its origin.

"I decline to call a man any names I have not already called him," she said with a broad smile. "I do not believe any woman originated the epithet. No woman ever originated anything. I read this in a newspaper."

Discusses Man's Moods.

Mme. Grand then went into a discussion of man's moods, treating him from four standpoints, which she distinguished as his worst mood, his best mood, his origin, and his destiny. She began his worst mood with the announcement that she was anxious to get it over as soon as possible. Some of the things she said in discussing his moods were as follows:

"Sovereign woman is the uitlander of society and man is her Boer."

"My guiding principle is never to do anything for myself when I can find a nice man to do it for me."

"In bygone days man was his own German Emperor."

"If you would know the little faults of man, look for those you see in a woman."

"Man is apt to be all talk."

"We respect men, or at all events, we prefer to treat them as if we respected them."

"Trifles make up the sum of life, and the hand of death is weighted by them."

"The worst of mere man is his slavishness."

"Man reads the newspapers to get ready-made opinions."

"The best of mere man is that he knows what is wrong with him."

"His moral courage is the glory of mere man."

Man on the Up Grade.

Mme. Grand became serious toward the close of her lecture, as she considered the future. The grave question, she said, was whether man was progressing or whether he developed the best in him ages ago. She reached the conclusion that he actually showed signs of progression since the days of Adam and Eve. Parenthetically, she remarked:

"As a short story the Garden of Eden was exquisite, but unfortunately it was made a serial and ruined."

From a moral standpoint Mme. Grand looked upon man as traveling the up-grade. The days were past, she said, when immortality was considered the stamp of genius. In conclusion, she distributed the following epigrams:

"Love, learn, and teach; it is upon the right application of these three words that the destiny of man depends."

"Byron's earthly blunders were held to have helped his heavenly muse."

"When genius is divorced from morality one wing is broken."

Verdict Against Bishop Kozlowski.

A verdict for $467 was given by a jury in Judge Post's court yesterday against Bishop Anthony Kozlowski of the Polish Catholic Church of North America. J. Oelzewski, who figured in the recent conspiracy case involving Bishop Kozlowski, was the plaintiff. He alleged that the money was due for goods furnished St. Anthony's Hospital, Robey and Franklin streets, and also for a fair given for the benefit of that institution in May, 1900.

CHILD TAKES FATAL SLIDE

FALLS FROM BANISTER IN THE HALF ORPHAN ASYLUM.

Mabel Boker, 9 Years Old, Dies While at Play in the Burling Street Refuge and Is the Second of the Inmates to Meet a Violent Death During the Last Five Months—Matron Says Accident Could Not Be Foreseen—First Victim Killed by Trolley Car.

The second fatal accident to occur at the Chicago Nursery and Half Orphan Asylum, 179 Burling street, within the last five months cost the life yesterday of Mabel Boker, aged 9 years.

The child, who had been in the institution since last spring, was sliding down the banister descending from the third to the second floor, when she fell to the floor. Death resulted almost instantly.

The only witness of the accident was a visitor, who was seated in the reception hall opposite the foot of the stairway. It was visitors' day at the asylum, and, according to the matron, Mrs. C. M. Geldman, the older children are allowed to roam through the building at will on such occasions. Mabel, with a score of more of other girls, was in the playroom on the second floor when she announced her intention of going up-stairs. The children are not permitted to ascend to the third floor without permission, but the child disregarded the rule. According to Matron Geldman there was no caretaker in the room at the time.

"The girls' playroom adjoins my room," explained the matron, "and there never is a caretaker stationed there. The caretakers are located down-stairs in the boys' playroom and up on the third floor."

Once at the top of the stairs, the child seized the banister and started to slide down. The rail curves sharply after leaving the third floor, and the descent is abrupt. According to the only witness to the accident, the child lost her hold on the polished rail as she was half way between the two floors and, suddenly turning over, was plunged to the floor.

The visitor notified the matron of the accident and Dr. A. C. A. Gaul of 165 Center street was summoned, but the child died before he arrived.

"While the accident is most regrettable, it hardly could have been foreseen," said Matron Geldmen. "Children are allowed to go up and down stairs in private homes, and the chances of accident are no greater here than there. We have four caretakers in the institution and 170 children, so it is impossible to keep a close watch on all the children all the time. Children of 2 and 3 years of age are not permitted to approach the stairs alone, but of course the older ones are."

Charlie Johnson, the first victim, met death under the wheels of a passing trolley car last Fourth of July. He was playing with a number of companions in the yard adjoining the asylum. An attendant was in charge. It is said that the gates were locked, but that the boy, who was 7 years old, climbed unseen over the fence. The car struck him as he was attempting to place an explosive cap, which he had picked up, on the track.

ARRESTED ON ARSON CHARGE.

William Morriss Accused of Imperiling the Lives of a Score of Negroes.

William Morriss was arrested yesterday on the charge of attempting to set fire to a tenement house at 5541 Jefferson avenue, in which twenty negroes were housed. Persons in the tenement building assert that Morriss, who lived there also, moved out his property early on Wednesday afternoon. It is said that he had been having trouble with his wife, who left him to share the room of another woman in the building. She was not in the tenement when the fire started, but the police say Morriss did not know of her absence.

JURY OF NO AID IN TAX CASE.

Austin Avenue Property Owners Fail to Secure Further Reduction in Their Special Assessments.

Property owners interested in the Austin avenue special assessment case did not fare any better before a jury than they did before the court. The latter allowed a reduction of 16 per cent, which also was the amount awarded by the jury in the County Court, after a two days' hearing of the evidence. The principal fight was on the expert witnesses offered by the city, who admitted they were paid $25 to testify against the property owners. The Taxpayers' association says it was able to secure but one property owner on the jury of twelve.

Establishment of First Wireless Telegraph Line.

President Roosevelt expected to send by wireless methods the first message between the original Morse terminals. A telegram from New York, dated Nov. 14, reads as follows: The first line of wireless telegraph on land for commercial purposes is now being established between Baltimore and Washington, D. C. A force of men is engaged on the work, which is now well under way in both cities. It was between these two points that the first line of Morse telegraph was established. It is expected by the wireless telegraph people that the first message over their Baltimore-Washington line will be sent by or to President Roosevelt. It was stated today at the office of L. E. Pike & Co., the financial agents of the Federal Wireless Telephone and Telegraph company, that as soon as the line between Baltimore and Washington is in operation the work of establishing lines between other cities would be pushed as rapidly as possible.

LEGAL FIGHT TO SAVE MOLINEUX.

Struggle to Gain Freedom for Man Under Sentence of Death Begins.

MOVE TO END THE CASE.

Attorneys for the Accused Ask That the Indictment Be Dismissed.

CHANGE IN COURT'S DECISION

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Two ex-Governors of the State of New York, both eminent lawyers, met in a great legal struggle today before Judge Newburger in the Court of General Sessions for the freedom of Roland B. Molineux, the convicted murderer of Mrs. Kate J. Adams, now in the Tombs awaiting a new trial granted by the Court of Appeals.

Ex-Governor Frank S. Black, for Molineux, moved the dismissal of the murder indictment. Ex-Governor and ex-Senator David Bennett Hill, for the State, opposed the granting of the motion.

During the arguments it developed, to the surprise of the spectators, that the Court of Appeals, ten days after the decision granting Molineux a new trial was published, had decided to revise the original opinion, and did so, making several excisions in the text. The revised decision is regarded as much more favorable to the prosecution than was the first and published decision.

Evidence Declared Incompetent.

In support of his motion to set aside the indictment ex-Governor Black contended that the evidence presented to the grand jury upon which the indictment was found related chiefly to Henry Crossman Barnet, and that the Court of Appeals had declared that this evidence and the letters signed "H. C. Barnet" were incompetent.

Replying to this, ex-Governor Hill declared that the Court of Appeals had ruled that only evidence relating to the death of Barnet was inadmissible.

"If this indictment is based in whole or in part upon the Barnet evidence, we hold the indictment cannot stand," said Mr. Black. He then read an affidavit of Mr. Weeks, in which the latter declared from conversation with certain witnesses who appeared before the grand jury it was his belief that the grand jury must have found the indictment on this Barnet evidence.

Ex-Governor Hill's Reply.

Ex-Governor Hill began his reply immediately Mr. Black closed. He said:

"In the first opinion of the Court of Appeals which Justice Werner wrote it was held that forgery could not be proved as a motive for murder. When the court saw the blunder this was stricken out.

"Justice Werner confused the Barnet letters (those signed H. C. Barnet) with the Barnet evidence. In the first opinion the ruling was: 'The Barnet letters should not have been received for any purpose.' In the revised opinion this is stricken out."

"The Court of Appeals anticipated this motion," continued the ex-Governor. "After calm deliberation they revised their opinion. If they had wanted to exclude the Barnet and Cornish letters they would not have said so originally and then stricken the statement out. The Court of Appeals laid down no rule for their exclusion on another trial. The rules they did lay down do not render [illegible]"

HEAVYWEIGHTS FIGHT TONIGHT.

Jeffries and Ruhlin Meet in the Mechanics' Pavilion at San Francisco.

SCHEDULED FOR 20 ROUNDS

Indications Point to a Big Crowd—Both Men Fit—Jeffries a 2 to 1 Favorite.

CLERGYMEN ENTER PROTEST

[BY GEORGE SILER.]

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Everything is in readiness for the big heavyweight championship battle between Jim Jeffries, holder of the title, and Gus Ruhlin, the Ohio giant, tomorrow night.

The Mechanics' Pavilion, where the event will be held, is in shape to receive what undoubtedly will be the largest and best paying crowd that ever attended a fight in this city. Manager Jim Kennedy has arranged the price of seats so as to accommodate 450 more persons, all of which he says will be occupied. In fact, he fears there will not be seats enough to satisfy the demand, as delegations from all parts of the State are pouring into town and they want the best money can purchase.

At noon today all the $20 seats, with the exception of one, had been sold, and that one choice seat is being held out for a millionaire oil man from Bakersfield, Cal.

Fight Is Well Advertised.

There may have been fights more interesting than this; fights that have stirred up every live man in this city, but there has never been a contest so extensively advertised throughout the State. Every township in California has been plastered with paper calling the attention of the country folks, miners, sports—in fact, every one—to tomorrow night's mill. Los Angeles, Jeffries' home, sent in a delegation today of 150, with several trains yet to be heard from.

Harry Corbett's place on Ellis street, where the tickets have been placed on sale, has been packed almost to suffocation by an eager crowd, pushing, hauling, jostling, and wrestling one another to secure tickets. What the receipts will be cannot be foretold, but the management believes it will be between $25,000 and $30,000. This in New York, Chicago, or in any city in the East or in the middle West, would not be a large sum at prices ranging from $2 to $20, but here, with the facilities limited and with no large cities or other States to draw from, a $25,000 house is considered enormous. The banner event in this city, from a monetary viewpoint, was the Fitzsimmons-Sharkey fight, when the receipts footed up something less than $22,000.

How the Purse Is Divided.

The fighters tomorrow night will receive 62½ per cent of the gross receipts, of which 75 per cent will go to the winner and 25 per cent to the loser. Figuring on the basis of a $25,000 house the winner will receive for his share $11,719 and the loser $3,906. Add to this his share of the profits derived from the pictures of the contest, the winner will have a neat sum of money for his night's work.

The fight is scheduled for twenty rounds, but I doubt if there is a man in America interested in the fight who believes it will go to the limit. Nobody here thinks it will, still all hope to see the men [illegible] each other through ten rounds at least. Both men are in the pink of condition, and with the contest but twenty-four hours away, they are careful to the extreme to avoid any accidents, such as may come to them through overexertion. They have tapered down their work by degrees and their exercises during the last two days has been of the mildest form possible. Short jaunts on the road, intermixed with light indoor work, such as skipping the rope, shadow boxing, and using light dumbbells at top speed, has been their general routine, and today was no exception to this rule.

Betting Is Light.

Jeffries is, of course, still the heavy favorite, the quotations today being 10 to 4½ in his favor, and little money going on at that price. Those that favor the champion are holding back, thinking the figures will gradually work up to 10 to 7, and as they are in the majority but little money is being wagered. Zeke Abrams registered a few bets at 1 to 2, the largest being $500, but thinks the boys will loosen up tomorrow.

Managers Billy Delaney and Billy Madden met today and arranged all the minor details, such as appointing ticket takers, watchers, and selecting quarters for their respective fighters. The electricians have adjusted their lights and have made all other preparations necessary to taking the pictures of the contest. In fact, everything is in apple-pie order for the big battle.

Think the Champion Should Win.

Every one, with the exception of Madden and Ruhlin, those who have trained with Gus, and their most intimate friends, thinks Jeffries' victory is a foregone conclusion. Even those that have and are taking the short end of the betting lean toward the champion and are simply betting on Ruhlin because they think the price is out of line and also that the unexpected may happen. Jeffries, on past performances, certainly looks the best, and I might add that his weight, strength, tremendous hitting power, and his enormous capacity for punishment make him appear a sure winner.

Of course, each man figures he will be returned the winner and both talk of their excellent condition, cleverness, and punishing abilities as proof positive they will take down the long end of the purse.

"If I get beat," said Gus, "I'll have no excuse to offer through lack of condition," and Jeffries voices the same.

Where Jeffries Excels.

In regards to weight, height, and science there is little to choose between them. The champion, however, has the bulge on Gus because of being built on stronger and sturdier lines, and also in coolness and steadiness when in ring action. He showed this in his contests against Fitzsimmons, Sharkey, and Corbett.

Gus, on the other hand, is eager to slash away when within hitting distance, and is more apt to flail away regardless of results when pinked hard. It is his disposition. He cannot dodge it. This was shown conclusively when he fought Peter Maher twenty rounds to a draw, and also when he defeated Jim Jeffords. Figuring on past performances, as stated above, Jeffries looks the best. He has never met with defeat—in fact, has never been toppled over. His victories over Fitzsimmons, Sharkey, and Corbett stand out in strong contrast against Ruhlin's defeats by Sharkey and Fitzsimmons.

Madden, in speaking of Ruhlin's condition for his fight with Bob, says his protégé had engaged in nine fights within a year of that battle and that the sap had been taken out of him through constant training. That might be so, and probably was, as Gus went all to pieces after fighting two rounds, but the defeat is marked against him nevertheless. Throwing all their victories and defeats to the winds, the line the short-enders are doping the fight on is the drawn battle Jeffries and Gus fought here about four years ago, which, at the end of twenty rounds, was decided a draw. Ruhlin in that fight stabbed Jeffries repeatedly with straight lefts and had all the better of the earlier rounds. In fact, he looked all over a winner, and with the odds against him as at present. Jeffries warmed up to his work about the fifteenth round, and with terrific body punches had Gus distressed, and although Jeffries knocked him down and almost out toward the close Gus staid the limit and secured a draw. Both men have improved since then, but judging from their performances Jeffries has made the most progress. He has done, among others, Peter Jackson, Bob Fitzsimmons, Tom Sharkey, and Jim Corbett—all good men—while Gus' best was his fierce twenty-round slugging contest with Maher and his defeat of Tom Sharkey. Jeffries is still unbeaten, and that is why he is such a top-heavy favorite over Gus.

Plans of the Fighters.

The big fellows are as dumb as oysters regarding their plan of battle, but Madden today said he had been advising Gus not to rush and to avoid mixing matters as much as possible, and to depend upon winning the championship and all the money and glory which goes with it by straight left-hand punches, intermingled with straight rights whenever the opportunity presented itself. Madden figures that, fighting along these lines, Gus will score more than enough points to be proclaimed champion at the end of the twentieth round. It might be well to add here that if Jeffries finds himself being outpointed he will rush to close quarters and wipe out Ruhlin's points with a knockout.

To my way of thinking I do not look for the fight to go to the limit, and, like thousands of others, will be surprised to see Gus win.

Jeffries Bets on Himself.

Jeffries is so confident of winning he drew $2,000 out of the bank today and sent De Witt Vancort, boxing instructor to the Olympic Athletic club, around the sporting resorts to place it at the best price obtainable.

Al Smith bet Adolph Spreckles $500 against $250, which at the present writing is the prevailing price.

Ministers Seek to Interfere.

A group of ministers of the gospel has been striving all day to induce the officers of law to interfere and stop the mill, but they have received no encouragement. Tonight they paid their respects to Major James D. Phelan, and there received the same information which was imparted to them by the District Attorney and Chief of Detectives Seymour. They have been apprised that while a State law prohibits prize fighting a local ordinance countenances boxing exhibitions held under the auspices of an incorporated club, and that the latter measure precludes all possibility of the city fathers stopping the fight at this juncture. The police, if they believe the mill to be brutal and therefore beyond the pale of a legitimate exhibition with gloves, may enter the ring and stop the bout after it starts, but not before.

RECORDS OF THE TWO FIGHTERS

Jeffries Has Yet to Taste Defeat, While Ruhlin Has Met Reverses—Champion Is Two Years Younger.

Jim Jeffries, the present champion, was born in Carroll, O., in 1875, and is therefore two years the junior of Ruhlin, who was born at Canton, O., but is of Swiss extraction. Pugilistic "dope" points strongly to the retention of laurels by Jeffries, who has never been defeated, while Ruhlin has experienced a number of defeats.

The champion's best fight was the one in which he won his honors from Fitzsimmons in eleven rounds. Ruhlin's best performances are a knockout of Sharkey in fifteen rounds and his battle against "Fitz." Although beaten, Ruhlin had a decided shade in the first round, when the bell found Fitz on the matting and the spectators were putting on their coats with exclamations of sympathy for the "Old man of the ring." Fitz recuperated rapidly and turned the tide with a body blow in the second round. After that Ruhlin weakened, although the third and fourth rounds were desperate, with both having a chance. Here are the records of the two men:

Hot Springs Betting on the Fight.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—For the first time on the eve of a championship contest the Hot Springs sporting colony is manifesting little or no interest. Only a few small wagers have been made on the Jeffries-Ruhlin contest, with the odds in favor of the champion at 2 to 1. On the strength of a letter from George Siler, who is now in 'Frisco, advising a local friend that Ruhlin is in good condition and to take the Ruhlin end, a prominent room man has offered $500 to $1,000 on Ruhlin, but has found no takers.

BOUTS FOR AMATEUR BOXERS.

South Side Clubs Will Hold First Show Tonight—Entries for Five Different Classes.

The opening boxing show to be given by the South Side Associated Clubs will be held at Alderman Carey's Watita League Hall, Halsted and Forty-seventh streets, tonight. The program consists of several bouts between amateur boxers in five different classes, as follows:

Max Winkler and Joseph Wynn, Delaware, A. C.; James McKillop, Fifth Ward A. C.; Thomas Scully, West End A. C.; and James O'Connor, Morgan A. C., at 105 pounds.

John Dilley, South End club; Caspar Malezska, Delaware A. C.; Philip Tormey, Fifth Ward A. C.; Gilbert Denormandie, Pioneer A. C.; R. Gentleman and M. Hogan, Morgan A. C., at 115 pounds.

Michael Oswald, Pioneer A. C.; M. Gossie, Morgan A. C.; and Andrew Koldoff, Dvorak club, at 125 pounds.

Joseph M. Abraham, Quo Vadis A. C.; C. Casey and G. Hollis, Morgan A. C., at 135 pounds.

C. McKillop, Morgan A. C., at 145 pounds.

The entries in the different classes will be matched against each other until they are reduced to the finals. George Hilton has been appointed referee, and the judges will be Richard Farrell and Cornelius McCarthy. Returns will be received from the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight.

McCoy's Little London "Ad."

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Nov. 14.—"Kid" McCoy announces he will challenge the winner of the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight for $10,000 a side. While he prefers to take on the winner of the above combat, his offer is open to all the world, including Fitzsimmons, Corbett, and Sharkey. McCoy says he has grown considerably and will now box close to 175 pounds.

Notes of the Pugilists.

Ole Oleson and Joseph Leonard of Buffalo will fight at South Bend tonight. The winner will meet Tommy White at Erie, Pa., on Nov. 30.

The gates are to be reopened in Wisconsin to the fighters. The latest haven reported is Appleton, where Manager Moore is figuring upon matching Martin Duffy against Otto Sieloff or some other 135-pounder. Bouts before Milwaukee clubs are being promoted regularly and the cloud brought on by the Root-Carter fight seems to have blown over, for the present at least.

Morris Rauch and Billy Rotchford will meet in a fifteen-round contest tonight under the auspices of the Olympic Athletic club of St. Louis. Three weeks ago the featherweights went through six rounds at the Chicago Athletic association, which were adjudged in favor of Rotchford. The latter showed himself the superior boxer after the two initial rounds. In these Rauch floored his heavier opponent and had him all but out, when the gong sounded for the end of the first round. After this the South-Sider's poor condition told and Rauch's friends will be sadly disappointed if he is unsuccessful in reversing the tables tonight.

Sale of Harness Horses at Yards.

The fourth day of the sale of harness horses at the Union Stock-Yards was attended by another large crowd. Seventy-five head sold for a total of over $17,000. The highest priced horse was Red Wood, a 4-year-old gelding, who went to Oscar Ames of Wheaton, Ill., for $400. The only other one that brought over $300 was Sandy Boy, another 4-year-old gelding, that went to J. Smith of Chicago for $325.

Columbus Driving Park Burns.

Columbus, O., Nov. 14.—The grand stand and betting shed at the Columbus Driving Park burned early this morning. The fire is believed to have been incendiary. The loss is $25,000; insurance, $15,000.

FORLORN HOPE OF THE MAROONS

Chicago's Plucky but Crippled Team Leaves for Michigan This Morning.

STAGG IS CONSERVATIVE.

Hardly Expects to Score, but Hopes to Hold the Wolverines in Check.

BADGERS BAR SCHREIBER.

Coach Stagg's maroon remnants, twenty-three in number, will leave for Ann Arbor this morning, where Yost's Wolverines, whose goal line is yet to be crossed this season, promise to offer unhospitable entertainment tomorrow afternoon.

Chicago students will gather in mass-meeting this morning at 9:30 o'clock to give a loyal sendoff to what appears a forlorn hope. It is probable the team will be drawn to the Sixty-third street station of the Michigan Central in a 'bus with students between the shafts. While the most enthusiastic can see nothing but a Michigan victory ahead, there is a wish to show appreciation to the plucky but most crippled team which ever represented the maroon in a big game.

Stagg takes along enough men for two squads, and the entire aggregation will stop over today at some small town near Ann Arbor, which the coach refuses to disclose, and will there engage in signal practice and a light scrimmage this afternoon. The team will move on Ann Arbor on Saturday morning. The projected excursion of students fizzled out, and not more than a score of maroon sympathizers will avail themselves of the $7.50 rate.

Maroons' Probable Lineup.

The probable lineup of the maroons tomorrow is: McNab, right end; Kennedy, right tackle; Beddall, right guard; Ellsworth, center; Knapp, left guard; Flannagan, left tackle; Speik, left end; Garrey, quarter; Maxwell, left half; Strauss, full; Horton, right half.

The other men who will make the trip are: Perkins, Fairchild, Conrad, Jennison, Granberg, Magee, Laird, Peacock, Cooke, Witt, Leet, and Harper. Captain Sheldon will not be able to go. He sits up a little each day, but his physicians peremptorily forbid any attempt to see the game. Atwood, the regular full back, is also too sick to be taken.

Stagg kept his two squads on the field last night until after 7 o'clock and at the end spoke of the situation as follows: "I do not expect Michigan to run up an overwhelming score, but at the same time they may do so. If we had our regular backs in the game for defensive work I should feel fairly well satisfied with the line as it played today. I think it will show a good defense. But to keep a team from running up a big total we must be able to hold the ball ourselves and make some advances even if it serves no other purpose than to take up time. It's a question whether we can do that. We cannot hope to do better than break even on an exchange of punts, for Sweeley is a good kicker.

"Horton may not last a full game. It is doubtful whether Perkins can even go into the lineup. Maxwell's experience is limited and Strauss plays in his first big game. I wish we had either Perkins, Atwood, or Sheldon in good condition. Cook's faculty restriction [illegible] line, Flannagan going out to tackle and Knapp to guard. The latter has improved some since the Beloit game, where he was hardly a success. We intend to fight hard, but the outlook is far from rosy, and I am not prepared to predict that we will score."

Comparatively few Michigan men will make the trip today, the crippled condition of the maroons auguring so poorly for a hard contest. As a matter of fact, Michigan would prefer to see the maroons in better condition, as the honor of victory is much lessened by the unfortunate chain of circumstances which has deprived Stagg of so many men.

Wolverines Practice in Snow.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—In the first flurry of snow of the season the Michigan squad turned out to the usual early secret practice this afternoon. Coach Yost found the ground unfit for fast scrimmage work, however, and only signals were run through. Of late this part of the varsity's curriculum is one of the most important, as Yost is spending a large share of his time in getting the list of signals which the Michigan men are expected to know by heart in well-oiled condition. Yost claims the men have over sixty plays in their répertoire. Of these a large share are on the trick order, and as the Chicago sleuths have attended all the games played so far by the Wolverines Yost has let go some of the most easily solved and replaced them by others that are said to be more devious. Forrest, the husky tackle recently raised from the ranks of scrubdom, and Jones, who has been trying at the full back position, are still being spoken of as strong probabilities in their positions. At all events the Michigan "left wing" will be reinforced in the best manner possible under the circumstances.

Inglis to Be Umpire.

Manager Baird reports the official choosing of Inglis, coach of the Ohio Medical School, a Washington and Jefferson College player, as umpire on Saturday. Stagg would not consider Baird's suggestion of Hoagland, Wrenn, and half a dozen others for the place, and finally the Michigan manager acceded to Inglis. Hayner of Lake Forest will referee.

WISCONSIN BARS SCHREIBER.

Badger Guard Will Not Be Allowed to Take Part in College Athletics in the Future.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Earl S. Schreiber of Madison, right guard on the Wisconsin football team, baseball player, and all-round athlete, was disqualified from all future participation in college athletics by the Athletic Council at a meeting held this noon on the charge of professionalism.

Schreiber was charged by Minnesota with playing baseball at Mineral Point last summer for a purse of $75, but was exonerated on this count. A few days ago evidence was received by Faculty Director of Athletics Slichter that Schreiber had coached the Mazomanie High School team in the fall of 1899.

At present it is impossible to predict who will take his place. Webster, Deering, Westcott, and Holstein are the four men from whom the choice will be made. Webster seems at present the most likely of the bunch, as he has the advantage of the experience gained in several of the games early this season. Each of these men was given a trial at this afternoon's practice.

The Gophers will arrive at Madison early tomorrow and are expected to bring between 2,000 and 3,000 supporters. Already large numbers of the alumni are flocking into town. All the hotels are filled and the churches in town are arranging to feed the crowds which are expected.

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The Gophers were given their last practice today before leaving for the field of battle. The work lasted for only an hour, but was fast and the plays were well executed. The second team played some of the Wisconsin formations, but the Minnesota defense was strong and the line held well.

The men are in splendid physical condition and are eager for the fray. Schacht has recovered from his injury and may play at left tackle. Otherwise Aune will play that position and Hoyt will take Aune's place at end.

Excursion to Madison Tomorrow.

An excursion train to the Minnesota-Wisconsin game at Madison will be run by the Northwestern road tomorrow, leaving at 9 a. m. Tickets, $4 each, will be on sale at Spalding's today.

ELIS CHEER THEIR TEAM.

GATES OPENED FOR LAST SCRIMMAGE BEFORE GAME.

Undergraduates March to Field, Singing Football Songs, and Encourage Eleven for Battle with Tigers—Wilhelmi Will Not Be in the Lineup—Princeton Engages in Signal Practice with Regulars All Back in Place—Goes to New York Tonight.

Reports received last night from the Captains of the two teams indicated that tomorrow's lineup in the Yale-Princeton game at New Haven would be as follows:

	Yale.	Princeton.

R. T.	Hogan	Pell [C.]	L. T.

F. B.	Weymouth	Sheffield	F. B.

Yale substitutes—End, Rafferty; tackle, Kunzig; guard, Johnson.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—With the cheers of 800 fellow-students ringing in their ears, the Yale varsity this afternoon lined up for its last scrimmage before the Princeton game.

To give the kickers a rousing sendoff at their last practice, the students from every department of the university formed in line at the old Yale fence and marched to the field, two miles distant, singing the new football songs and cheering for every member of the team. At the field they sang and cheered throughout the practice. Five hundred spectators occupied seats at the field, although the thermometer was below the freezing point and snow flakes flitted through the air. Every rush and every fine point of defensive play was cheered to the echo, and the entire practice was a token of the loyalty the college is showing toward the team.

Over the enthusiasm of the scene arose the specter of Yale's cripples. Wilhelmi, Gould, and Goss were still unable to play and did not appear in the lineup. Of Wilhelmi, Captain Gould made the following statement tonight: "An examination of Wilhelmi's injured knee proved that it was hurt last Saturday much worse than was at first supposed. It is in bad shape and indications now are strong that he will not be able to get into the game Saturday. We plan to put in his place at left half back Johnny Hart."

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Princeton's varsity had a short fast signal practice behind closed gates this afternoon. All the regulars were in the lineup for the first time since last week. Mills' and Dana's weak ankles continue to improve fast, and today, with the aid of strong supports, they were able to go through the drill with fairly good speed and quickness.

McClave was at right half again and he got away better than he has at any other time this year. His long rest has apparently done him good. Sheffield was at full back, and it is definitely settled now he will start the game instead of McCord. Sheffield has a weak knee, but it was firmly encased in a support, and he got into the play with a rush that ought to cause lots of trouble for the blue. Foulke was at left half and his work was also good. In fact, the back field got off with more snap and uniformity than it has shown in a long time.

Tomorrow they will have another signal drill practice, but at 6 o'clock they will leave for New York, where they will spend the night at the Murray Hill Hotel. They will not leave for New Haven on their special train until after 10 o'clock. Recitations on Saturday will practically be suspended here, for almost the entire undergraduate body will make the trip. The number of tickets sold here is considerably larger than in 1899.

HOLLISTER SHIFTS THE TANDEM

Fleager, Davidson, and Stratford Played Behind the Line Against Scrubs—Trick Plays for Beloit.

Secret practice was the order of the day at Sheppard Field yesterday, and no one save members of the regular and scrub teams were admitted to the grounds. It is rumored Hollister will resort to a new series of trick plays to win the game against Beloit tomorrow. Hollister succeeded in outwitting members of the scrub team by several mysterious new plays yesterday and large gains were repeatedly made by the regular eleven against the seconds.

Owing to the fact that the purple coach has been easing up on his men for the last few days the practice was fast, and all of the men seem to be gradually resting off their staleness. It is doubtful if Johnson will be able to go in against "Brother Jack's" protégés, but while the team will be weakened by the loss of Johnson, all of the men seem to be confident of winning.

Fleager, Davidson, and Stratford were played in the tandem against the scrubs yesterday, and although the purple coach has not yet decided upon the lineup of this team against Beloit, it is understood these men, with Booth at quarter, will constitute Northwestern's back field.

HIGH SCHOOL GAME TOMORROW.

Feeling Runs High at Englewood and Hyde Park Over the Football Contest—Several Cripples.

The football season in the high schools is approaching a climax, and the usual intense partisanship is manifested by the supporters of the leading rivals for the Cook County championship. When Hyde Park and Englewood meet for their annual game at Marshall Field tomorrow afternoon the noise will make the ordinary college game seen there seem tame by comparison.

When the Englewood team went out to practice last night it was accompanied by a band of 200 rooters, who kept up a continuous yelling throughout the entire practice. This is only a sample of the feeling at the two schools. Plans are being made to have the Englewood supporters march to the game tomorrow in a body, accompanied by a band.

A mass-meeting of the Hyde Park scholars was held on Wednesday afternoon to stir up enthusiasm over the contest, Principal French being among those who made addresses. At another mass-meeting to be held this afternoon the final plans for "rooting" will be completed. Englewood supporters are also to meet this afternoon. A large attendance of alumni is expected at tomorrow's game.

Englewood will be in desperate straits to win tomorrow's game, inasmuch as defeat will put the team out of the running for the championship race, it having been defeated by North Division last Saturday. Hyde Park will have a long string of defeats at the hands of Englewood to wipe out as an inducement for effort.

Hyde Park has a better showing than its rival's on the season's record. The Hyde Park boys' goal line has not been crossed this year, while Englewood has been scored upon by Evanston and defeated by North Division.

Several players of the Englewood team are slightly crippled. Maxwell, the big guard, has been out of the play for two weeks with a sprained ankle and it is doubtful if he will last the whole game, although he is determined to play. There will be no danger of parental interference in Maxwell's case, as his father says the giant guard "will have to go in the game, leg or no leg." Short, right end, is also laid up with a "charley-horse," but he will play at least a part of the game.

On the Hyde Park side, Pegues, right half back, has water-on-the-knee, and will not be in the contest. His place will be taken by Austin, subhalf last season, who has played well this year. Pierce will not be in his old place to guard, as the coaches have decided to play Hunt, who showed up so well in the Evanston game.

The Englewood team will be weaker in kicking and in substitutes, while Hyde Park is strong in both these branches. Eckersoll of Hyde Park is the best punter in the high schools, and the team has substitutes galore. Englewood's subs are all light.

Despite these apparent handicaps, and the fact that Hyde Park on paper looks like a comparatively sure winner, the feeling at the Englewood school is fine, and yesterday not a scholar could be found at that institution who thought Hyde Park had a chance to win the game.

KING PINS LOSE BY RAILROADS.

Englewood Rollers Take Three Straight Games in Regular Series.

MARGINS ARE NOT LARGE.

Browning's Stars Register Clean Sweep from Foresters in Unity Match.

SCORES IN OTHER LEAGUES.

Englewood rollers last night won three straight games from the King Pins in the Englewood league, the latter team getting an unusually large number of railroads. The winners had margins of 73, 16, and 42 pins. In the Unity league, Browning's Stars made a clean sweep from the Foresters, the losing side being in poor form. Scores:

DETROIT CLUB FINALLY SOLD.

Passes Into the Control of S. F. Angus, E. H. Doyle, James McNamara, and Frank C. Cook.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The baseball tangle in Detroit was unraveled tonight when the announcement was made that James D. Burns had sold his stock and interest to a syndicate for $12,000 and that in all probability the equity in the club held by Manager George T. Stallings would be sold to the same men. The syndicate is composed of S. F. Angus, E. H. Doyle, capitalists; Attorney James McNamara, and Frank C. Cook. The four will hold equal shares in the club, and the only outside stock will be that of John B. Fitzpatrick, who can either sell or stay in.

In this connection it is stated Frank Dwyer, the ex-pitcher of the Cincinnatis and later an American and National league umpire, is to be manager of the team. He is held in esteem by President Johnson, and it was expected he would be in the American league last season, but there was some hitch. It is probable John B. Fitzpatrick of the Avenue Theater will be the business manager.

Lajoie Case Is Appealed.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The Philadelphia National league club has appealed the Lajoie case to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania. The Supreme Court will not sit until January, but a strenuous effort will be made to have the Appellate Court change the position with regard to baseball contracts taken by the Court of Common Pleas.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The Boston American league club today signed George La Chance of Waterville, Conn., to play first base next season. La Chance was under contract to the Cleveland club, which released him for a fair consideration. Freeman will be played in the outfield.

Beat Freshmen in Annual Game at Marshall Field—First Year Men Able to Score Once.

The freshman and sophomore class teams of the University of Chicago fought out their class rivalry on the gridiron yesterday afternoon at Marshall Field, the sophomore eleven running up 27 points to their opponents' 5. E. J. Eldridge, the full back on the freshman eleven, broke his collar bone early in the game and his name swelled the list of football cripples who are under the care of a university doctor. Rush Medics and P. and S. Play Today.

Rush Medics and the Physicians and Surgeons College football teams will line up for their annual struggle this afternoon at the Gaelic grounds, Ogden avenue and Rockwell street. Several of the old players will be in the lineup of both teams and a hard battle is anticipated. Fred Hayner and D. Jackson of Lake Forest will officiate. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Yale Favorite in the Betting.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—There was more betting on the Stock Exchange today on the Yale-Princeton and Columbia-Cornell games on Saturday. Yale fanciers offered $1,000 to $800 on their team, and this amount was covered by Princeton partisans, being split up into several lots. The betting was 100 to 70 on Cornell beating Columbia. About $800 was invested on Cornell at these odds.

Hatley Defeats Peterson.

Duluth, Minn., Nov. 14.—William F. Hatley won the match with H. Peterson of Fargo in the Northwestern billiard tournament tonight by a score of 300 to 213. Hatley's highest run was 46 and his average over 10. Tonight Hatley will play Spears here and then go to the Twin Cities, where the contest will be closed.

Will Revise the Athletic Rules.

The Northwestern University Athletic association took steps yesterday to revise the athletic rules of the institution. Professor White, President of the Athletic Board of Control, assisted by four students of the university, one to represent each class, will take the matter in hand. The rules have not been revised since 1894 and many articles have grown out of date and useless. At the annual meeting of the Tennis association John M. Frey was elected manager of the tennis team to succeed J. T. Ling.

Bowler Wins at Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 14.—Jimmy Bowler of Chicago won the fourth night's racing and the special prize for leading in the greatest number of mile sprints. Bowler had to battle for every mile with Walthour, who lost the race by but half a length in the best finish of the week.

Score in the Walking Match.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 15.—At 12:30 a. m., the end of the fourth day in the walking match, the score was: Cavanaugh, 367 miles 1 lap; Barnes, 332.3; Dean, 317.1; Shelton, 314.10; Noremac, 280.10; Hegelman, 267.16; Loeslein, 262.1; Day, 236.4; Barclay, 234.5; Kid West, 216.16; Miller, 154.17.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—[Specia The appearance of James T. Jeffries at Oak land today eclipsed the interest taken in th mediocre racing provided by the program. Princess Titania took the last race handily and burnt up a lot of wise money bet on Cousin Carrie, who lost the place to Narra G.

The cards at Oakland continue to be cheap. The bookmakers are getting rich and the crowds beginning to increase. Among the prominent arrivals from the east were Jockey Spencer, who is under contract to ride for Burns & Waterhouse; former Jockey Joe Scherer, who rode last summer in Germany and is now a heavyweight. Former Plunger Tim Murphy and Al Morrisey, who won $40,000 this season on New York tracks, will tackle the game here. Henry Flitner, a partner of George Rose, is due tomorrow from New York.

A cablegram from the French Jockey club to President Williams confirms the ruling off of Owner "Boots" Durnell, who used to ride his own horses. The stable now here belonging to Durnell will not be permitted to race.

MICHAELS PUTS UP POOR RIDE.

Allows Keynote to Beat The Puritan at Bennings—Pigeon Post, Who Raced in Chicago, a Good Thing.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—As the class of horses engaged in the different events at Bennings today was fair, the sport was of the interesting kind. Four favorites and a second choice won purses and sent the crowd home in good humor.

Although five ran in the first race it was considered a two-horse affair, as Keynote and The Puritan outclassed the others. Until near post time it was 8 to 5 and take your pick between them, and then came a plunge on Keynote so that he closed the favorite at 6 to 5. He won the race, but it was only because of the indifferent ride Michaels gave The Puritan. It was expected the stewards would call Michaels up for an explanation, but this they failed to do.

A real good thing was cut loose in the third race, which was won by Pigeon Post. His price fell from 30 to 1 to 10 to 1. Pigeon Post had to be ridden hard in the final strides to win by half a length from Lady of the Valley.

JEFF ON LOSERS AT RACE TRACK.

Champion Pugilist Takes an Afternoon Off to Visit Oakland.

SPORT OF POOR CLASS.

"Boots" Durnell, Ruled Off in France, Will Not Be Allowed to Run String.

ONE FAVORITE IS FIRST.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The appearance of James T. Jeffries at Oakland today eclipsed the interest taken in the mediocre racing provided by the program.

Jeffries trains near the track, and took a day off to look over the ponies before he goes into the ring. The giant lounged around all day, lost a few bets, and was followed by an eager crowd every step he took. Not less than a thousand men patted him on the back, told him how they hoped he would win, and pointed out what an easy thing he will have with Ruhlin on Friday night.

The racing was of the cheapest variety. Favorites went down again in a row, only one gathering anything. Ramesis, belonging to Green Morris, was for some inconceivable reason, unless it was because O'Connor had the mount, made an odds-on favorite over a seedy lot of maidens in the first race. He isn't worth $4. Jacqueminot, a well bred trick from Jennings' bunch, won in hollow fashion from Cathello and Rosarie.

Scallywag beat Mrs. Brunell, the warm tip, in the second race in a drive. Parsifal was third.

The five 2-year-olds in the third never saw which way Glendenning, the 1 to 2 favorite, went. He won pulling up a block in front of Commissioner Forster, who ran for a good commission from the Schorr stable.

Lizella, one of the best Morello mares left, found easy work in taking the measure of the even money shot, John McGurk, in the fourth. She ran a good race and was well handled by O'Connor. Old Free Lance beat the others.

Mortgage was a receding favorite in the fifth, but Billy Moore came home on the bit. The Singer and Senator Matts both beat Mortgage, who will prove a gold brick for the next month.

Princess Titania took the last race handily and burnt up a lot of wise money bet on Cousin Carrie, who lost the place to Narra G.

The cards at Oakland continue to be cheap. The bookmakers are getting rich and the crowds beginning to increase. Among the prominent arrivals from the east were Jockey Spencer, who is under contract to ride for Burns & Waterhouse; former Jockey Joe Scherer, who rode last summer in Germany and is now a heavyweight. Former Plunger Tim Murphy and Al Morrisey, who won $40,000 this season on New York tracks, will tackle the game here. Henry Flitner, a partner of George Rose, is due tomorrow from New York.

Bradley's and Other Race Horses Are Shipped Away for the Winter—Derby Winner a Cripple.

The exodus of horses from Chicago began yesterday, when nine carloads were shipped out of town. The largest shipment was made by S. C. Hildreth, who sent two carloads to Memphis, where they will winter. In the Hildreth consignment were McChesney, Rolling Boer, Federal, Vulcain, Hermencia, and several other good handicap horses. Accompanying Hildreth's horses was a carload of animals belonging to M. H. Tichenor & Co. The Hildreth and Tichenor cars were sent by express.

The other horsemen who shipped were as follows: J. B. Lewman & Co., one car to Louisville; Allie Gates, one car to Toronto; J. T. Stewart, one car to Paris, Ky.; W. S. Barnes, one car to Lexington, Ky.; R. Bradley, one car to Washington, D. C.; C. B. Campbell, one car to Minco, I. T.

There was one absentee in the consignment sent away by R. Bradley, and that was Robert Waddell. The famous Derby winner was too sick to be taken away from Chicago, and as a result will be left to winter in Chicago. The shoulder which was wrenched or broken—the exact nature of the injury has not yet been determined—in Waddell's last race at the Lakeside track has not shown any great improvement, and the horse may never be able to face the starter again.

Games in the Billiard Tournament.

Three games were played yesterday in Mussey's billiard tournament. Adams [50] defeated Thomas [50] by a score of 50 to 44 and Metcalf [40] defeated Irwin [40] by 40 to 38. In the night game Burns [50] met his first defeat, losing to Fuller [38] by a score of 38 to 34. This afternoon Knight [50] will play Irwin [40] and at night Adams [50] will meet Metcalf [40].

Benefit to Eugene Carter.

Eugene Carter, the billiardist, is sick at his home on the North Side. A benefit will be tendered him tonight at Green & Catton's, on Dearborn street. Lew Shaw will give an exhibition of fancy shots.

LEADER IN BAZAAR OPENED AT THE COLISEUM.

MRS. LAWRENCE J. REED

Bazaars great and small, charity sales, and church receptions at charitable institutions made yesterday a busy day for the members of many denominations. From Englewood to Buena Park and from 9 o'clock in the morning until the bells in the Coliseum sounded midnight some religious gathering was in progress. It was a bazaar day. Among the larger meetings were the following:

St. Vincent's bazaar at the Coliseum.

Visiting Nurses' association's doll bazaar at the Auditorium.

St. Bernard's bazaar at Englewood.

Champlin Home for Boys' fifth annual reception and opening of Home for Working Boys at 513 West Adams street.

Lake View Presbyterian Church bazaar at residence of Mrs. J. B. Waller.

Most of the gatherings were for the purpose of raising funds to continue the work of the organizations. At the Auditorium the members of the Visiting Nurses' association expect to clear at least $5,000 from the sale of the toys. The women who are promoting the St. Vincent's bazaar hope to double that amount, while the purpose of the reception at the Champlin Home was for the purpose of arousing interest in the movement to give working boys food and a homelike lodging at a nominal price.

With throngs that passed back and forth before many gayly decorated booths, with music, the whirl of wheels of fortune, and hundreds of fancy costumed women, the St. Vincent's bazaar opened at the Coliseum. It will last for ten days and the proceeds will go toward the St. Vincent's Infant Asylum at La Salle avenue and Superior street.

Mrs. Lawrence Reed, chairman of the West Side churches, had spent much time and care on her department. It had a "Gypsy camp" and a "Rebecca's well," where lemonade was sold and where a sign announced that any of the girls within would kiss whoever was willing to pay five cents. Into this bower "Jimmy" Quin started, but was rescued by his wife. Later in the evening he induced Mayor Harrison to try his luck. The Mayor entered, but when he came out he would not tell what happened. On the east side of the hall was the cigar booth, where Mrs. Frank O'Connell had twenty-five of the pick of the West Side girls to help her. Back of the booth was an Oriental smoking den.

The bazaar was opened by Bishop Muldoon. He was introduced by Edgar O. Brown, chairman of the committee in charge. Speeches were made by Mayor Harrison and Father Sherman, S. J.

On Sunday sacred concerts will be given.

At the Turner Hall at Division street and California avenue the women of St. Mark's Roman Catholic Church held a bazaar yesterday afternoon and evening. Miss Duffy was in charge of the young women's booth. Miss Mary Tansy was in charge of the children's booth, and the married women's booth was cared for by Mrs. Johnson.

Over at 513 West Adams street the fifth annual reception of the William Raymond Champlin Memorial Home for Boys was held under the direction of the superintendent, the Rev. John M. Chattin. The gathering was given added interest, as it marked the opening of the Working Boys' club, which will occupy the building next to the present home. This new home was made possible by a gift of W. O. Carpenter of $1,000. It is a three-story building and the basement will be used for studyrooms, the first floor for living-rooms and parlors, and the third for sleeping-rooms. It has been fitted out with modest furniture and is meant to accommodate boys over 14 years of age. Over seventy boys now live at the home.

In the old Waller homestead at Buena avenue and Sheridan road the women of the Lake View Presbyterian Church opened a sale yesterday. Mrs. James B. Waller was the hostess.

LOEFFLER A PEACE AGENT

DELAY IN CLASH BY DEMOCRATIC FACTIONS PROPOSED.

City Clerk Suggests That Election of Officers of County Committee Be Postponed Until After Primaries Next Year That Voters May Pass on Merits of the Row—Says Danger of Party Split in Campaign Would Thus Be Avoided.

City Clerk Loeffler, with a view to avoiding an immediate outbreak of the row which is making trouble in the ranks of the local Democracy, proposed yesterday that the election of officers of the County committee be postponed until next year after the primaries had been held and a new committee selected. Under the constitution the election should be held next month.

Mr. Loeffler's argument is that an election held at this time would result in a fight and perhaps split the party, which would end all chance of Democratic success in the fall elections, while if the contestants fought out their troubles at the primaries first it would be given to the voters to decide which faction they desired in control of the party.

Thinks a Fight Certain.

"If the election is held next month there is sure to be trouble," said the City Clerk. "The fact that there is a dispute as to who are entitled to vote at the election would of itself bring it on. Take those twenty-eight members elected from the country districts, which the committee afterwards cut down to six. These men were elected at a regular county convention, and the committee is subordinate to a convention and had no right to review its work. Yet it was done. It is a sure thing that Gahan, as chairman of the committee, will recognize the right of the remaining twenty-two to vote, while their names will not be on the roll of the committee as prepared by Secretary Burke."

City Hall May Agree.

The City Hall faction may be willing to agree to this proposal, as in case of a split in the party resulting in two committees and two conventions it is sure to get the worse of it. The State committee then would decide which was the regular organization, and John P. Hopkins is chairman of that committee, and his friends control it.

There was a meeting of the Presidents of the Democratic ward clubs and the ward officers of the Carter H. Harrison league at Democratic headquarters last evening. They arranged for a series of ward dances during the winter to hold the members together.

Tilden Democrats Organize.

The Tilden Democracy of the Eleventh Ward organized last night in Bohemian Turner Hall, Ashland avenue and Eighteenth street. The following officers were elected:

President—John F. Joyce.
Vice President—William J. Krueger.
Secretary—Peter Knolla.
Treasurer—James Schruta.

Republican Club Ticket.

In the Thirty-fourth Ward last night the Seventh Precinct Republicans selected the following ticket to be voted for at the election next Tuesday evening in the hall at West Van Buren street and Forty-third avenue:

President—S. M. Gunderson.
Vice President—Ora Chapin.
Secretary—Edward A. Schreiner.
Treasurer—Wilson Brook.

President Makes Appointments.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—The President today made the following appointments: Edwin N. Gunsaulus, Ohio, Consul at Toronto, Ont., Canada; William L. Sewell, Ohio, Consul at Pernambuco, Brazil; William Haverstick, Wisconsin, General Inspector, Treasury department; Jesse M. Lee, Colonel, infantry; Henry Wygant, Lieutenant Colonel, infantry; Zeran W. Torrey, Major, infantry; Blanton Winship, First Lieutenant, infantry; Harry A. Eberlee, Assistant Surgeon of volunteers, rank of Captain; Lucien G. Heneberger, Medical Inspector; Harold H. Haas, Passed Assistant Surgeon.

BAZAAR FOR NURSES OPEN

FAIRYLAND SCENE IN THE AUDITORIUM BANQUET ROOM.

First Night of the Benefit Proves That the Efforts for the Great Charity Have Not Been in Vain—Opportunity Presented to Buy Anything from a Box of Candy to a Life-Size French Doll—Mrs. Houghteling in Charge.

"Buy your Christmas presents now," was the invitation to which the visitor to the Auditorium last evening responded. As a matter of course, the visitor parted with his money for anything from a box of candy to a life-size French doll.

It was a fairyland transformation in the banquet-room, where the big bazaar for the benefit of the Visiting Nurse association was opened, and Mrs. James L. Houghteling and her corps of assistants saw there the result of weeks of labor. Booths were presided over by beautifully gowned society women, young girls in peasant costumes vended their wares successfully in the crowd, and in and out flitted the uniformed nurses for whose work among the sick and the poor the bazaar was brought about.

On entering the banquet-room the first thing seen was an alluring grotto where pretty maidens in Kate Greenaway costumes offered chances at a grabbag. Miss Margaret Winterbotham was in charge and wore a huge bunch of violets pinned on her bright flowered gown. Miss Mary Otis was in green, with big apron and mob cap. Miss Helen Lord wore a red skirt, with white bodice and big straw peasant hat. Miss Ethel King and Miss Fanny Caruthers were also costumed in Kate Greenaway fashion.

International Doll Show.

The international doll exhibit was another center of interest. This came from Boston and was loaned for the occasion. There were black dolls and brown, a doll sent by Queen Lil of Hawaii, and a Christine Neilson doll in Swedish costume. There were also queer little Oriental dolls, Russian dolls wrapped in furs, and some mummy-like objects said to be dolls 200 years old.

Prettier and more tempting were the modern dolls which filled to overflowing the booth where Mrs. George Payson and Mrs. Hugh McBirney presided, assisted by Mrs. Dunlap Smith, Mrs. R. R. Cable, Mrs. Clifford Payson, Mrs. Wilmerding, and Miss Rew. A big visiting nurse doll, in uniform, satchel in hand, occupied the place of honor.

Everything pertaining to a doll wardrobe, and her tea things, and toys were for sale.

A booth that began with a rushing business was in charge of Miss Bertha Dibblee. Every conceivable kind of dainty neckwear is offered at bargain prices, so said the saleswomen, who were Mrs. Joseph Coleman, Mrs. Bertram Winston, Mrs. Bruce Clark, Mrs. William Odell, and Mrs. C. P. Richardson

Bright Colors at Bag Booth.

One of the prettiest features was the bag booth, which is a riot of color, with the dainty little bags of bright colored silks and satins and the big, useful bags for laundry and slippers in equally bright cretons. Débutantes for salesgirls added to the attractiveness of this booth, which is in charge of Mrs. Henry Hooper, with Mrs. Hempstead Washburne. Assisting them last evening were Mrs. Stephen S. Gregory, Mrs. Hull, Mrs. William Le Moyne, Miss Madeline Noyes, Miss Eva Waller, Miss Agnes Street, and Miss Elise Chew.

The adjoining booth, where everybody stopped, was the candy booth, made attractive with dainty little bonbons and the bigger boxes tied with bright ribbons. Mrs. A. E. Leicht presides here, and making the sales with her last evening were Mrs. F. Madlener, Mrs. Carl Gottfried, Mrs. John A. Lynch, and Mrs. Bowes.

Articles for Babies.

Mrs. A. A. Carpenter has charge of the baby articles booth. She will have a corps of helpers, last evening her assistants being Mrs. G. A. McKinlock, Mrs. John Crerar, Mrs. Russell Tyson, Miss Edith Hoyt, and Mrs. Kate Lancaster.

Though a few articles it would be hard to class as "useful," a pair of embroidered satin slippers, for instance, found their way to the table, the utility booth in the main is true to its name, and manifold useful articles were offered for sale by Mrs. Russell Winterbotham, Mrs. D. G. Hamilton, Mrs. Eugene Lancaster, and Mrs. John Gray Jr., Miss Booth acting as treasurer.

Rooms for Refreshment.

And when all the booths had been visited, their contents admired, and the sellers praised for their ability to drive bargains, a resting place was provided for the package-laden visitors, where they could divest themselves of whatever ready cash they might have left after the round of the booths.

The Dutch chocolate and Russian tearooms were at the farthest end of the hall, and the young women serving, with Miss Adele Barrett at their head, wore either the Dutch peasant girl costume, with its white headdress, or the graver colored costume of the Russian peasants. The decorations of the rooms were arranged by Mr. Twyman. Besides Miss Barrett, the young ladies who waited on the tables were Miss Hamilton, Miss Hall, Miss Larned, Miss Seaverns, Miss Patterson, and Miss Waller. Mr. Lowe acted as treasurer in the tearooms.

The bazaar will be opened this afternoon at 1 o'clock and continue throughout the evening. Tomorrow it will be open all day and in the evening. Several hundred people attended the opening last night.

NEWS OF THE THEATERS.

First Ballad Concert.

That song composers know no sentiment other than love would seem to be proved by the majority of vocal concerts given in Chicago or elsewhere. Fortunately a rumor that there is here and there a member of the guild who on rare occasions has felt an emotion distantly akin to envy or jealousy, frees the class as a whole from the accusation of being entirely devoid of all the stronger and fiercer feelings common to average mortals. It was this rumor alone, however, that made this more consoling estimate possible to any one who spent yesterday afternoon at the first Summy ballad concert, for out of nineteen songs the program contained, seventeen were devoted to love. The eternally feminine in its eternal loveableness was the sole thing in this wide world, it seemed, that was worth singing about. It is true, one or two daring song-creative spirits did venture out into the springtime, or the fields, or the forests, but She was sure to put in an appearance before the flight out-of-doors was ended, and then love and devotion were unavoidable.

Love and devotion are beautiful things, however, and it were ungracious, perhaps, to grumble at a surplus of the beautiful. The audience that filled Music Hall seemed in nowise to object, and, as the concert was given to please that audience, cavilling were out of place.

Of the seventeen love songs heard the most pleasing and the best made musically were Louis V. Saar's "Come, Let Us Go," Clough-Leighton's "Two Roses," Arthur Nevin's "In Dreams," F. L. York's "Among the Clover," Hubbard W. Harris' "The Mountain Has a Flower," and Mrs. Beach's "Year's at the Spring."

The vocalists were Mrs. Genevieve Clark Wilson, soprano, and Holmes Cowper, tenor, both of whom gave of their best abilities to make the afternoon enjoyable and entertaining. Otto Pfefferkorn was the solo pianist. His playing of five original compositions intended for use in teaching, was satisfactory, but the pieces themselves were out of place in public. Herman Diestel, 'cellist, and Walter Spry, organist, played obligato solos in two of the selections.

COMBINED ROADS NAME DIRECTORS

Northern Securities Company, Just Formed, Holds Its First Election.

BOARD WELL DIVIDED.

Arrangements for Direction of Burlington Interests Under Another Scheme.

SHARES TO BE LISTED SOON.

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—The shareholders of the $400,000,000 Northern Securities company, which was chartered in New Jersey last Wednesday for the purpose of holding the capital stocks of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern railroad companies, met in this city today and elected the following Board of Directors:

John S. Kennedy,
George F. Baker,
D. Willis James,
George W. Perkins,
E. H. Harriman,
James Stillman,
George C. Clark,
James J. Hill,
Robert Bacon,
Samuel Thorne,
Daniel S. Lamont,
Jacob H. Schiff,
W. P. Clough,
Nicholas Terhune.

How Board Is Divided.

It is stated that James J. Hill will be the President. Five members of the board, the Messrs. Hill, Kennedy, Clough, Nichols, and Terhune, are either directors or officers of the Great Northern railway system, and Colonel Daniel S. Lamont is a close friend of Mr. Hill.

The Union Pacific interests are represented in the new board by E. H. Harriman, Jacob H. Schiff, and James Stillman, and the Morgan interests by George F. Baker, Robert Bacon, and George W. Perkins.

The preponderance of membership in the Northern securities directorate was conceded to Mr. Hill because the Great Northern stockholding interest in the new company will be much larger than that of the Northern Pacific.

All persons chiefly concerned declare, however, that the purpose of this big corporation is unity of interest and not division of interest. Mr. Harriman authorized the statement that the directors were not named as so many for the Union Pacific, so many for the Great Northern, and so many for Northern Pacific, but rather to form the strongest and most harmonious combination possible, representing the joint interests involved. Both Mr. Hill and Mr. Harriman say that so far as they can see all cause for dissension and jealousies between the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, and the Union Pacific interests has been eliminated.

Voting Scheme for Burlington.

There is good authority for the statement that the Union Pacific party will hold one-half of the voting power in the management of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, through the medium of a voting trust. The stringent railroad laws of the Western States render it impracticable for the Union Pacific Railroad company to appear as part owner of the Burlington. A member of the Harriman syndicate said that questions pertaining to distribution of traffic had entered largely into the settlement of the Northern Pacific-Burlington controversy. It is believed by the parties to this settlement that some of the most troublesome traffic questions of recent years have been amicably disposed of.

Makeup of C., B. and Q. Board.

One of the controlling powers of the Burlington system said this evening that there was no occasion for any further delay in the official announcement of the new board, which is composed as follows:

Francis W. Hunnewell of Boston.
George H. Harris of Chicago.
Charles E. Perkins of Burlington.
E. H. Harriman.
Jacob H. Schiff.
George J. Gould.
H. McK. Twombly.
Robert Bacon of New York.
James J. Hill.
James N. Hill of St. Paul.
J. Malcolm Forbes of Boston.

Union Pacific People Satisfied.

There is much conjecture in Wall street regarding the net cash benefits that will accrue to the Union Pacific interests from their dealings in the Northern Pacific stock. The impression that the amount approximates $15,000,000 prevails widely, and the Union Pacific people make no denials, but smilingly assent that they are "perfectly satisfied with the financial outcome."

The entire holding of stock in the new Northern Securities company will, it is said, be a free asset of the Union Pacific system. Members of the Harriman syndicate say that the Union Pacific's holding of Northern Securities stock will reach $90,000,000.

Good Trading in New Shares.

Wall street curb brokers began trading today in the proposed new securities. About 500 shares of the Northern Securities stock were sold "when issued" at from 110 to 110½.

In view of the sale on the Stock Exchange of 11,800 shares of Great Northern preferred at prices ranging from 199¾ to 197½ and recovering to 198¾, there was much inquiry regarding the officially announced proposition to turn all of the Great Northern stock over to the Northern Securities company at $180 a share.

The rumor of the street regarding this matter is that the valuable assets held in the treasuries of the different companies forming the Great Northern system will be distributed either as a cash dividend or in the shape of new Great Northern stock. If new stock is issued it will go into the new holding company at 180 with the present $125,000,000 of outstanding shares.

Russell Sage Sees Danger.

Russell Sage was quoted today as scenting danger in the railroad combination growing out of the Northern Pacific settlement. Here is what he was quoted as saying:

"The danger lies in the effect it will have upon weaker lines. It will compel them to struggle harder than ever to get along, and one of the weapons in the possession of the weaker lines is an appeal to the State Legislature.

"The roads in the combination run through nineteen different States and Territories, and the promoters of it have to look out for adverse legislation from any or all of nineteen State governments. A combination of this sort throttles competition and the people don't like it."

Government Can Have Property.

One of the men concerned in the merging of these great railroad interests said today:

"Some people have made the point that the government of the United States should take over all the railroads after they had been brought as closely together as possible. We, for our part, would be perfectly willing to turn over to the government the securities of all the railroads we control on the same terms on which the government now buys its own bonds."

FAIL TO AGREE ON "Q" DETAILS.

Evidence That the Magnates Are Not of One Mind as to Traffic Management.

Another adjournment of the Burlington stockholders yesterday and the hasty departure for New York of President Harris furnished indication that Hill, Harriman, and the other big railroad magnates have not arrived at a definite conclusion regarding the future management of the road. The stockholders' meeting terminated exactly as did the one of a week ago. Adjournment was taken after a few minutes' deliberation until Nov. 21. No action of any kind was taken.

The hitch which prevents immediate action by the stockholders is believed to be mainly in regard to the management of traffic affairs. Mr. Hill is understood to be determined to have Darius Miller, Vice President of the Great Northern, made traffic director not only for the Great Northern and Burlington railroads but also the Northern Pacific, and Mr. Harriman, it is said, wants a traffic director not quite so closely related to Mr. Hill.

It is generally understood that the Baltimore and Ohio soon will change its route into Chicago from South Chicago to Sixteenth street. Arrangements are being made to use the Pennsylvania tracks for that distance. The change will have the effect of shortening the route seven and one-third miles and to save twenty-five minutes' time for its passenger trains on entering and leaving. It is not likely, however, that this change will carry with it a discontinuance of its use of the Chicago Terminal Transfer company's Grand Central Passenger Station.

The last of the big freight engines being built by the Baldwins for the Milwaukee and St. Paul has left the shops in the East. Two have arrived and are being prepared for service. The nine Atlantic type passenger engines, included in the same order, will begin to come soon and will be placed in service between Chicago and the Twin Cities. The switch engines that have been building during the summer at the company's Milwaukee shops are all in service, and the machine and boiler shops have begun work on six new ones to be still larger. The 1,500 cars commenced last spring are about completed and work is being started on another lot of the same size. With these new additions to its equipment the company expects to be in a position to handle promptly and expeditiously all traffic that may come to it.

ROADS FACE A CAR FAMINE.

Railroads, Notwithstanding Increased Equipment, Are Unable to Handle Their Business.

Notwithstanding that all the big railroad systems East and West have almost doubled their locomotive and car equipment during the last three years, shippers all over the country are complaining of their inability to get cars enough to handle their business promptly. There is scarcely a road in the West that does not complain of a great shortage of cars. Railroad men estimate that from 10,000 to 15,000 cars are needed for immediate use by the various roads centering in Chicago.

This condition of affairs is said to be due to the unusually heavy merchandise traffic westward, and live stock, coal, and lumber are moving in such enormous quantities that it is impossible to tell how many cars are needed from day to day.

Western roads express the belief that the present congestion will soon be removed, as grain traffic eastward is growing lighter and mercantile business will drop off during the winter months. In a month or two the heavy live stock shipments will also cease.

The shortage of cars on the Eastern roads is said to be due almost entirely to heavy business locally between interior points. The local traffic is much more remunerative to the Eastern roads than the through business because rates are from 10 to 25 per cent higher. In consequence they give the local traffic the preference.

Contagious Blood Poison

There is no poison so highly contagious, so deceptive and so destructive. Don't be too sure you are cured because all external signs of the disease have disappeared, and the doctor says you are well. Many persons have been dosed with Mercury and Potash for months or years, and pronounced cured—to realize when too late that the disease was only covered up—driven from the surface to break out again, and to their sorrow and mortification find those nearest and dearest to them have been infected by this loathsome disease, for no other poison is so surely transmitted from parent to child as this. Often a bad case of Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula or severe skin disease, an old sore or ulcer developing in middle life, can be traced to blood poison contracted in early life, for it remains smoldering in the system forever, unless properly treated and driven out in the beginning. S. S. S. is the only antidote for this peculiar virus, the only remedy known that can overcome it and drive it out of the blood, and it does this so thoroughly and effectually that there is never a return of the disease to embarrass or humiliate you afterwards.

Like Begets Like.

The Sin of the Parent.

SSS cures Contagious Blood Poison in any and all stages; contains no mineral to break down your constitution; it is purely vegetable and the only blood purifier known that cleanses the blood and at the same time builds up the general health.

Our little book on contagious blood poison is the most complete and instructive ever issued; it not only tells all about this disease, but also how to cure yourself at home. It is free and should be in the hands of everyone seeking a cure. Send for it.

Mandel's editorial comment.

Friday, Nov. 15th, 1901.

Our advertising pages do not tell the whole story of the wonderful advantages afforded from making your purchases at Mandel's. It would take too many pages to do that. Our business is merchandising, and from the top to the bottom of this great store, on every floor, in every section, and upon every counter, every business day in the year, there are other bargains that you might deem as good or better than those advertised. The items selected are simply those which, in our judgment, we think will be of interest to you, either from the point of novelty, quality or economy.

Our basement is Chicago's busiest bargain mart. No one questions that.

This store is regarded as the best equipped organization of its kind in America. The credit for which rightfully belongs to the discriminating buyers of Chicago.

We never reach the goal of our ambition. The fact that we can serve you better than any other house in Chicago does not satisfy us. If there's a possibility of doing better, we want to do it. That's why you notice little improvements here every day.

Falsehoods in advertisements are the winding sheets that bury a merchant in oblivion.

Envy is the canker of honor. That's why some houses stoop to misrepresentation. They are envious of our remarkable growth.

Æsop tells us of a fly that sat upon the axletree of a chariot wheel and said, "What a dust do I raise." That's the way with some merchants who wait for Mandels to do and then try to imitate. They imagine they are receiving credit for originality.

Accessories to Thanksgiving dinner

Pretty things for the Thanksgiving dinner at Mandel's. Not things to eat, but dishes, for, after all, half the joy of the festive board that traditionally groans with the delights of the palate lies in the pretty elegance of the serving, doesn't it?

All the novel and effective accessories for the table at Mandel's.

The artistic dinner table, like the beautiful home, depends for its charm in a very large measure upon the unique additional pieces which supplement the bare necessities to give luxury and picturesque effect. To the well appointed table these accessories are essential.

Imagine the richness of charm imparted by a set of wee, little individual olive or almond dishes in the newest Bohemian glass, all the pure crystals with heavy, beautiful traceries in gold, or the picturesque beauty of a large round tray in the same glass and gold effect for nuts or fruit.

Footed nut dishes in Limoges, Japanese and others of the finest wares with heavy open-work lacy edges, mayonnaise boats in effective novelties of many colors and patterns.

The novel French combination dish, the cabarette with two or three compartments, one each for cheese, olives and crackers, or nuts, raisins, sweets and the like.

Oyster cocktail glasses and sherbet cups in the finest, daintiest glass, and many rare tintings and patterns.

Liquor sets in rich American cut glass of every choice sort for creme de menthe and all the finest drinks.

Whatever you may want for the perfection of your Thanksgiving service, come to Mandel's and you'll find it.

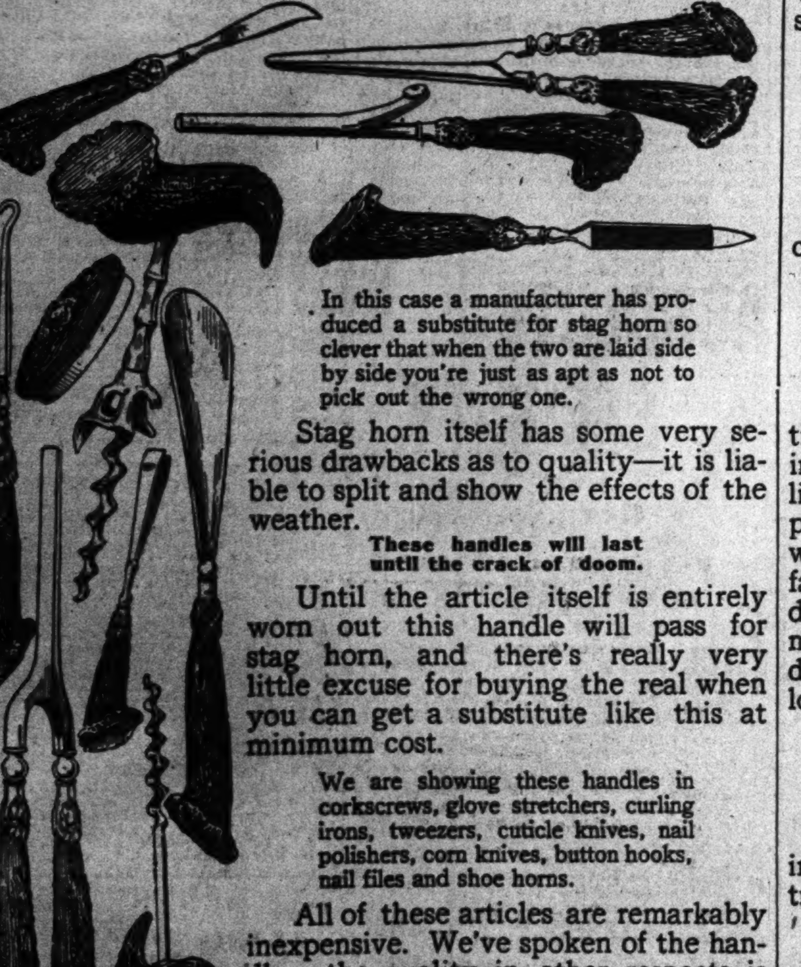
They are imitation stag horn—the silver is real.

There are clever people in the world who can imitate almost anything. The trouble usually is that the imitation is either worthless or costs more than the genuine article.



In this case a manufacturer has produced a substitute for stag horn so clever that when the two are laid side by side you're just as apt as not to pick out the wrong one.

Stag horn itself has some very serious drawbacks as to quality—it is liable to split and show the effects of the weather.

These handles will last until the crack of doom.

Until the article itself is entirely worn out this handle will pass for stag horn, and there's really very little excuse for buying the real when you can get a substitute like this at minimum cost.

We are showing these handles in corkscrews, glove stretchers, curling irons, tweezers, cuticle knives, nail polishers, corn knives, button hooks, nail files and shoe horns.

All of these articles are remarkably inexpensive. We've spoken of the handles—the quality in other respects is just what you find in high-grade implements of this character.

One of the surprising features of this ware is the low price. You'd hardly believe it possible to sell them at the prices we quote.

Cuticle knife, single handle, hair curler, nail file, nail polisher, shoe horn, button hook, tweezers or corn knives, at 45c.

Double-handled glove stretchers, hair curlers, corkscrews in two styles, at 95c.

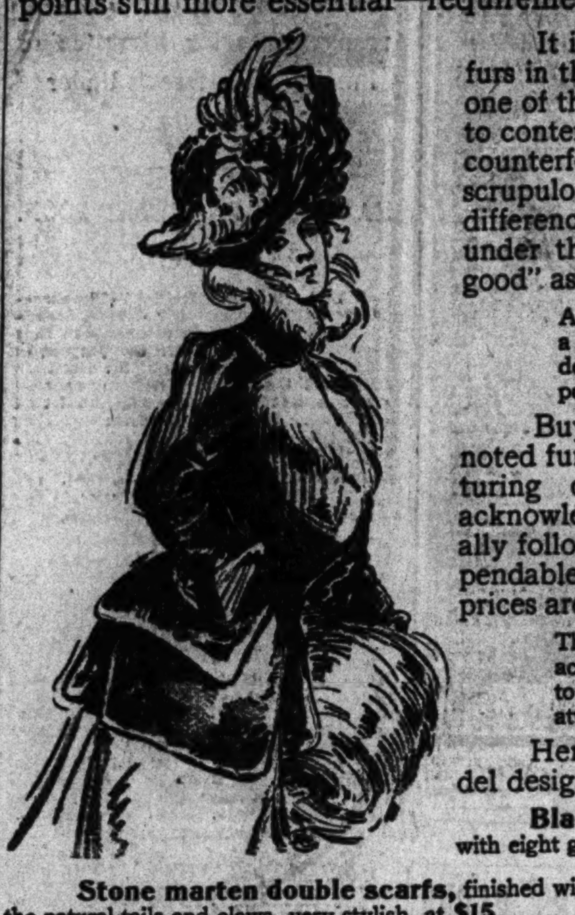
Facts for fur buyers.

While the style of a fur garment is a very important matter, there are other points still more essential—requirements that should receive first consideration.



It is a well-known fact that there are more spurious furs in the market than there are real fur garments, and one of the worst contingencies legitimate fur houses have to contend with is the fact that good furs are now artfully counterfeited, and untutored buyers who deal with unscrupulous merchants believe all they say and accept the difference in price as a mark of saving, because they are under the impression that they are receiving "just as good" as an honest dealer charges a little more for.

A good rule to go by when buying furs is to deal with a reputable house, one that you have complete confidence in, and buy on their representation instead of depending on your own knowledge.

Buying skins, as we do, direct from trappers and the noted fur centers of Europe, running our own manufacturing department—employing artistic designers of acknowledged ability and the best skilled labor—it naturally follows that our fur garments are of the highest dependable character, faultlessly fashioned, and that our prices are absolutely the lowest quoted.

The Mandel styles have those indescribable style characteristics that instantly proclaim them to be superior to all the fur fashions of the day; distinguished, rich attributes that at once appeal to correct dressers.

Herewith we introduce a few of the exclusive Mandel designs:

Black marten cluster scarfs, extra quality, ornamented with eight genuine tails, $10.

Highly instructive books

for the little ones.

Do you ever have to look about for something to entertain the children with when you give them a picture-book—a book with large, flashy pictures, plain, pretty lettering and interesting stories?

That's the sort you'll find at Mandel's.

They've just come—all new, all pretty, all entertaining, all instructive.

For that's one of the features of the Mandel children's books, their instructiveness. The chattering little youngster when he's laughing over the long neck of the giraffe, or the comical jingle on the droll twirl of the pig's mite of a tail, will not be thinking of anything else but his own fun.

But, nevertheless, he's having a glimpse into zoology, and when he goes over the bright, jolly pictures of Uncle Sam's navy and the sailors he'll only be thinking of the ships, but still how wise he's growing on the very important phase of the national life.

And when the pictures are about the flowers, it's a homeopathic dose of botany, and when they're about wonderful places or people, he's having a taste of biography and travel.

The tintings of the pictures are lovelier this year, brighter, yet more delicate than ever before, with a finer luster. The jingles are more melodious and more rollicking, the subjects are more various.

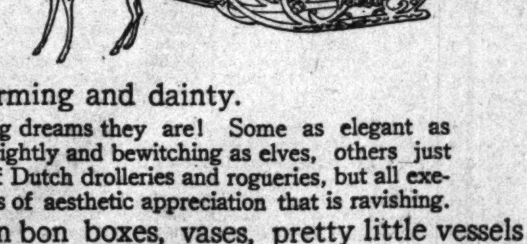
The chill winter days to be spent in the house are coming. Among the Mandel children's books you'll have the problem of amusement delightfully solved.

Antique silver cabinet pieces.

Main floor, north center aisle.

Rich and new novelties for whist parties, drawing-room cabinets and gifts at bargain rates at Mandel's.

They are irresistible German ideas of silver beauty in wee things and the work of peasant silversmiths far away from the marts of the towns and all workshops, out in the quiet woodland villages whither the silver is sent to be wrought out into prettiness.



Isn't that a beautiful poetry to bring into the drudgery lives of the European rustics—the working with silver, fashioning with this delicate, precious metal all their fairest dreams of what is lovely, graceful, charming and dainty.

And what fascinating dreams they are! Some as elegant as queens, some as sprightly and bewitching as elves, others just seductive morsels of Dutch drolleries and rogueries, but all executed with a fineness of aesthetic appreciation that is ravishing.

Antique silver bon bon boxes, vases, pretty little vessels in full sail, chairs, tables, cabinets, rockers, go-carts, cherubs, trays, beds and many other conceits.

Sugar sifters, trays, loving cups, pitchers, steins and creamers—a remarkable collection—specially priced at 2.50 and 1.50. Others up to $50.

MAKE PLANS TO ORGANIZE HOUSE

Speaker Henderson Will Meet Lieutenants and Discuss Affairs Today.

CHANGES IN THE SENATE.

Committees Must Be Rearranged and Illinois Gets Two Important Posts.

NEWS OF NATION'S CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.

Plans for Organization of the House.

An informal program for the organization of the House of Representatives will be mapped out after the arrival of David B. Henderson tomorrow, who will be Speaker of the next House. Representatives Hopkins, Cannon, Payne, Dalzell, and Gen. Henderson's other lieutenants have already reached the city and will confer with Mr. Henderson about the organization.

There will be no contest for the Speakership, nor for the offices of the House, and it is quite certain that, almost without exception, the old officers will be reëlected. The caucus for the nomination of the Speaker and other candidates will be held probably on the night of Nov. 30, and the caucus nominees will be elected when Congress assembles.

Representative Richardson of Tennessee will be the Democratic nominee for the Speakership, but, as is well understood, this is an empty honor, which at the same time carries with it the leadership of the minority.

So few changes will be made in the personnel of the House committees that the Speaker will have no difficulty in filling the vacancies and announcing the appointments before the Christmas holidays instead of afterwards, as has been the custom.

One of the important vacancies to be filled is the chairmanship of the Committee on Militia, made vacant by the defeat of Colonel Marsh. If precedents are followed this chairmanship will be given to Representative Burleigh of Maine.

Committees of Senate Must Be Reorganized.

The Senate, being a continuous body, is already organized, Senator Frye of Maine having been elected President pro tempore at the last session to continue during the pleasure of the Senate, and the sergeant-at-arms, secretaries, chaplains, and other elective officers having a like tenure. Owing to the large number of Senators who retired last March a general reorganization of the committees will be necessary, as nothing was done in this direction at the special session in March.

The Senate selects its own committees, the party in power assigning the majority places and the opposition the minority. The Senate then adopts the lists as submitted. A few committee chairmanships are also assigned as a matter of courtesy to the oldest ranking minority Senators, so that they will have clerks and consultation rooms under their control.

The Republicans are in a large majority in the Senate, and they will, of course, reorganize the committees to suit themselves, and as this is done strictly according to the rule of seniority of service, it is easy to figure out just who will get the vacant chairmanships.

Illinois Gets Two Important Chairmanships.

Illinois will secure the chairmanship of two important committees. The most important of these is the chairmanship of Foreign Relations, which will go to Senator Cullom, who is the ranking Republican on the committee after Senator Frye, who prefers to retain the chairmanship of Commerce. Mr. Frye will be the Pooh Bah of the Senate again, as in addition to being chairman of Commerce he will be acting Vice President of the United States, ex-officio, and will occupy the Vice President's chamber and be entitled to such honors and emoluments as are attached to it. He will not have any extra duties by reason of this office, however, because the only duties of a Vice President are to preside over the sessions of the Senate.

The other important changes in the Senate committee chairmanships include the promotion of Senator Mason of Illinois to be chairman of Postoffices and Postroads in place of Mr. Wolcott of Colorado; Senator Elkins of West Virginia to be chairman of Interstate Commerce in place of Mr. Cullom; and Senator Stewart of Nevada to be chairman of Indian Affairs in place of Mr. Thurston of Nebraska.

Mr. Stewart came back into the Republican fold, from which he strayed in pursuit of free silver at the last session. His colleague, Mr. Jones, is now a Republican again, although this fact may not put him back on the Finance committee, which he left when he became a Populist.

Improvements Are Made in the Capitol.

During the long recess of Congress, many changes and improvements have been made in all parts of the Capitol, a general system of repairs, refurnishing, and redecoration having been in progress. Everything has been completed in first-class order except the work of putting the new roof on the Supreme Court chamber. Work was delayed owing to the failure of contractors to supply material, and the court is occupying the room of the Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

The Supreme Court Justices will continue to occupy the committee-room for a week after the meeting time of Congress, at which time the court will adjourn until after the holiday recess, when the court chambers will be ready. On the day that Congress meets, Dec. 2, the court will listen to arguments in the case of Captain Oberlin M. Carter.

Boutell Favors Repeal of All War Taxes.

Representative Boutell favors the repeal of all the war taxes. In discussing this subject tonight he said: "There are two good and valid reasons why the tax which creates this surplus should be removed. First, because of pledges given by Republican party leaders at the time the tax was imposed that it should be done away with as soon as the war was over, and, second, because so large a surplus will tend to create a spirit of extravagant and reckless appropriations.

"During the debate in the House at the last session, when a portion of this tax was removed, I took the position that it should all be taken off, a third at a time, the last being removed on Dec. 1, 1901. My estimate at that time of the surplus which would be created has been borne out by present conditions almost to the dollar.

"The question which confronts us now is whether we shall increase our expenditures or decrease our revenue by reducing taxation? The large balance in the Treasury and constantly increasing surplus are, of course, an invitation to large, unusual, and extravagant appropriations. In this connection it seems to me that the wise and business-like course to be pursued is to immediately reduce taxation.

In this connection it seems to me that the wise and business-like course to be pursued is to immediately reduce taxation.

"When the war revenue act was passed in the spring of 1898, we, as representatives of the people, promised that as soon as the war was over its emergency tax should be repealed. It is now three years since the war closed, and, so far as I am concerned, I feel strongly that we should keep our word to the people."

Program of Legislation in Senate.

So many Senators have been in Washington of late talking with the President about his message that there has been an interchange of opinion as to what the immediate program of legislation will be in that body. It is now generally understood the first day's session will be devoted to the reception of the President's message, and as soon as that is disposed of the President will send in the Nicaraguan Canal treaty.

The committee reorganization will be perfected as quickly as possible, and the Senate will then at once begin to hold daily executive sessions and continue to do so until the treaty is disposed of.

The pending reciprocity treaties with France and other countries will not be ratified, except possibly those with Nicaragua and Ecuador, which are of no special importance. Some have died by limitation of time and the others will be allowed to die a natural death.

Expect Speedy Action on Isthmian Canal.

Every indication points to speedy action by Congress in providing for an isthmian canal as well as a Pacific cable. Representatives Hepburn of Iowa and Sherman of New York had a conference with President Roosevelt today, and as a result of his talk Mr. Hepburn announced that immediately upon the assembly of Congress he would reintroduce the bill providing for the construction of a Nicaraguan canal which passed the House last winter, but was sidetracked in the Senate. It will be amended to meet the provisions of the new treaty with Great Britain.

In addition to this determination to secure speedy action, the treaty between Great Britain and the United States providing for the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty and clearing the decks for the construction of the canal has been put in regular form by Secretary Hay and Lord Pauncefote, and the British Ambassador is now waiting authority from his government to affix his signature to the convention. This authority is expected hourly, and after it is signed by the representatives of the two governments there is scarcely any doubt but that it will be ratified by the Senate, as the treaty was drawn after the members of that body were consulted.

Representative Hepburn told the President that his measure undoubtedly would command a large majority in the House. The same is equally true of the Senate, and while there is considerable opposition on the part of the railroads to the measure, it is generally believed it will be adopted by the upper branch of Congress without much delay.

Does Not Want the Tariff Disturbed.

Representative Long, a member of the Ways and Means committee, agrees with his Eastern colleagues as to the wisdom of leaving the tariff question alone, fearing that the business conditions of the country may be disturbed by amending the tariff law. Representative Long conferred with the President for a short time today, and they discussed the tariff and other questions which are now attracting the attention of the public.

After leaving the White House Mr. Long said: "I believe that any attempt to lower the tariff duties on particular schedules, such as proposed by Representative Babcock, would lead to a general revision of the tariff. My people are not in favor of such an action. There is, however, a strong sentiment in favor of reciprocity in our section of the country."

May Enlarge Ways and Means Committee.

There is some discussion in favor of enlarging the membership of the Ways and Means committee. The friends of this scheme say an amendment will be introduced providing for increasing the membership of this important committee by two members, making the total nineteen. If a resolution of this character is adopted, it is claimed the advocates of high protection will demand that the Speaker appoint two men who are in accord with the ideas of the Eastern members of this committee and opposed to those advocated by Representative Babcock, who favors reducing or removing the duties on articles made by the trusts.

Babcock's Views on Tariff Revision.

Representative Babcock, whose ideas on tariff have precipitated a general discussion of the tariff question, referring to his proposal to admit free of duty trust made goods said: "My idea as to tariff revision is simple. It is this: Where by changed conditions tariff duties have become exorbitant, far beyond the needs of protection, I would put them where they would protect labor, but not to a point that would create a monopoly of trade and raise prices to consumers. In other words, if it costs $1 to produce an article abroad and $1.40 to produce it in this country I would favor a 50 per cent duty to protect our workmen, but I would not favor a duty of 200 per cent, which would simply afford a margin for increasing the price to our own consumers.

"There is no departure from Republican protective tariff principles in that. I am as ardent an advocate of the Republican doctrine of protection to American industries as there is in this country. The question this Congress will be called upon to answer is, Will it permit a tariff duty to remain in force so as to enable a trust to pay dividends on watered stock?

"I want to give the small manufacturer all the protection he needs. These small concerns, legitimately capitalized, can pay dividends with a rate of tariff upon which the steel trust would have to pass its dividends on its common and preferred stock."

Mrs. Roosevelt Entertains Informally.

Mrs. Roosevelt entertained by invitation about twenty guests from resident society of Washington this afternoon. She was assisted in receiving by Miss Hagner, her private secretary, and the affair was quite informal. Mrs. Roosevelt has taken this method of meeting her old friends made during several years' residence in Washington and of making new friends.

The Friday afternoon receptions have grown almost too large to be managed in an informal way, and it is likely that the one of tomorrow will be the last for the present. About 200 guests called last Friday, many more than was expected, making it impossible for Mrs. Roosevelt to personally more than meet any one of them.

The guests were received in the red parlor this afternoon, and Mrs. Roosevelt was prettily gowned in a soft black silk, with white lace, a light blue stock.

President's Daughter Guest of Honor.

Miss Alice Roosevelt was guest of honor at a dinner given by her aunt, Mrs. Cowles, wife of Commander Cowles of the navy. Among the guests, all of whom were selected from the younger set of girls, with whom Miss Roosevelt has been associated since her return to Washington, were Miss Root and Miss Margaret Hitchcock. Among the men present were Señor Riano, First Secretary of the Spanish Legation, Mr. Alex. Kean, and Mr. Bonaparte.

Miss Alice Roosevelt was also the guest of honor at a luncheon given by Miss Bessie Ashton of Massachusetts avenue, daughter of Mr. J. Hubley Ashton, a well-known attorney. Miss Ashton, like Miss Roosevelt, is a débutante of this season, and the party was further enlivened by three or four of the other buds of this season and several of the girls who made their début last season.

One of the most interested spectators of the football game between the West Point and Annapolis cadets will be President Roosevelt. The game will be played on the Franklin Field gridiron, Philadelphia, on Nov. 30. The President has decided to attend the game and will leave here on the morning of Nov. 30 and return immediately after the contest.

GHETTO PLOT IS TOLD IN COURT.

Boys Admit Conspiracy to Kill and "Captain Jim" Is Held for Trial.

GIRL ACTS AS ACCUSER.

Revelations of the Gang Taken to Emphasize Need of Home for Delinquents.

TUTHILL MAKES PLAN TODAY

Practical corroboration of Judge Richard S. Tuthill's contention that thousands of boys are going to ruin in Chicago every year because they are not being properly cared for was furnished in the Harrison street police court yesterday morning.

The nine boys who, under the alleged leadership of "Jim" Kolis, a 21-year-old Bohemian youth, planned to take the life of Truant Officer Francesca Capparelli because he forced them to go to school were arraigned before Justice Prindiville. "Captain Jim," as he is known to the boys, was held to the Criminal Court under bonds of $600 to answer a charge of conspiracy to commit murder.

Seven members of the "gang" were released, to be watched by probation officers, and two more, "Sollie" Cohn and Isaac Kahn, were remanded to the Children's Detention Home at 233 Honoré street, to appear before Judge Tuthill in the Juvenile Court.

"Captain Jim" Defiant.

"Captain Jim" was sullen and defiant when he faced Justice Prindiville. At first he denied that he knew any of the boys under arrest, but finally he acknowledged the acquaintance of "Sollie" Cohn, the boy who was detailed to go to a down-town store and steal the revolver with which Capparelli was to be murdered.

The principal witness was Katie Kahn, who divulged the plot to kill the truant officer. She stated that she had heard "Captain Jim" threaten her father's life, and also heard him say that Capparelli would have to be put out of the way, as he interfered with the "gang's" reign of crime.

Boy Tells of Plot.

Young Cohn, so small that he was carried to the bench by Attorney J. J. McManaman, sat on the rail and told his story to Justice Prindiville.

"'Jim' told me to go to Rothschild's store," he said, "and take Ike Kahn. He told us to steal a revolver. When we got to the store we couldn't take anything because a man was watching us. He put us on the elevator and sent us down-stairs, and said if he saw us in there again he would have us locked up.

"When we went back to the Captain and told him he was mad, but said he'd give us another trial and if we got the gun he'd give us money, but we didn't get it. We used to steal lots of times. We took lead pipe and other things, and then we'd sell them and divide the money. Jim was mad at Capparelli and said if he made Charley Meyers go back to school we'd have to kill him."

"I heard Jim say he was going to kill my father and Mr. Capparelli because they made him go to school," said 13-year-old Katie Kahn. "He said they would not let the boys and him steal horses and wagons and other things, which they sold to junk dealers."

In connection with the arrest of "Captain Jim's" gang of boys the authorities have started a crusade against the junk dealers who buy the plunder gathered by them on their pilfering escapades. Detective Sergeant Davidson was detailed to assist Truant Officer Capparelli in running down such dealers. Late in the afternoon L. Kroot, a junk dealer at De Koven and Clark streets, was placed under arrest. He was implicated in the story told by "Sollie" Cohn. It is said other arrests will be made.

Emphasizes Boys' Home Need.

Persons interested in Judge Tuthill's plan to found a home for delinquent boys of Chicago see in the "Captain Jim's" gang additional argument in favor of the project.

Judge Tuthill himself returned from Minneapolis last night and today will confer with Samuel W. Allerton and E. G. Keith with reference to a definite plan of action for raising the necessary funds to found the home. William D. McKey of the firm of McKey & Poague, real estate dealers at 125 Dearborn street, yesterday turned over to the Judge ten shares of stock in the Columbian Exposition company, the dividends from which are to be applied on the fund.

"The small stockholders are the ones we are anxious to reach," said Mr. Tuthill, "as it is possible for them to insure the establishment of this home. The arrest of the boys who threatened the life of a truant officer is but one of the incidents that come under my notice constantly, and that is why I am so much in earnest in this matter. It should not be delayed a single day."

Bryan Favors Idea.

"This certainly is a practical illustration of the conditions that Judge Tuthill is seeking to remedy," said Thomas B. Bryan, a member of the directory of the World's Columbian Exposition company. "There can be no question about the urgent need of such a home as he advocates, and I think no time should be lost in establishing it. I have talked to a number of the stockholders entitled to dividends from the World's Fair surplus fund since it was suggested that this money should be converted to this purpose, and most of them are in favor of such a plan. It is unfortunate that some of the money already has been pledged to other institutions, but there is yet enough remaining to insure the success of Judge Tuthill's project if it could be turned into this channel."

Only Hope for the Boys.

Discussing the arrest of "Captain Jim's" gang, Chief Probation Officer T. D. Hurley said:

"This case demonstrates the necessity for such an institution as is advocated by Judge Tuthill. Such plots are being hatched among boys in this city every day, and until we have a place where boys can be sent and removed from the evil influences with which they are surrounded there is little or no hope of materially bettering their condition.

"The John Worthy School serves a purpose, of course, but it does not even approach the requirements. In the first place, it is always overcrowded, and its facilities at best are limited. The average stay of a boy in this home is sixty days, and nothing permanent in the way of character molding can be accomplished in such a short time. The result is that whatever good is done the boy is counteracted as soon as he goes back to his old associations. He may know a little more, but he uses this knowledge for evil purposes.

"The John Worthy School is nothing more than an annex to the bridewell. It is a city workhouse, and where boys have any sort of a home we do not feel like keeping them there any longer than necessary, but with an institution such as Judge Tuthill proposes we could take a boy in hand, give him something to do that will interest him, and virtually mold his character in a wholesome, healthy environment."

Resolutions on W. H. Russell's Death.

At a special meeting of the Drainage board yesterday a resolution on the death of William H. Russell, former Trustee of the Sanitary District of Chicago, was adopted. Mr. Russell was a member of the first Board of Trustees of the district.

EXTRA! TEACHERS' PAPER

FEDERATION BULLETIN WILL BE ISSUED TODAY.

Miss Goggin to Conduct a "Solemn Thoughts" Department and Miss Haley the Tax Column, There Being Eighteen Editors in All — Makeup Man Makes a "Bull"—Purpose of the Journal Set Forth—Vindication of Public School Spelling Hoped For.

The first issue of the Teachers' Federation Bulletin will appear today. Miss Goggin and Miss Haley, who have become familiar figures on the platform, will appear in the new rôle of editors. Miss Goggin is editor of the "Solemn Thoughts" column, while Miss Haley will have charge of the "tax" department. Other members of the board of directors of the federation serve in editorial capacities, so that in all the Bulletin has eighteen editors.

Miss Goggins' illness has caused the "Solemn Thoughts" column to be rather limited this week. There is a story from her school-room about "Johnny," who was taking a lesson in geology.

"A stratum," explained the teacher, "is a layer of anything. Can some one give me an example?"

"I know," answered Johnny. "It's a hen."

Another "Solemn Thought."

Another solemn thought concerns "the changes which time hath wrought." Miss Goggin seems to have had in mind chiefly the changes which a girl's first name has undergone. She clings to the good old name of "Catherine," while time, she says, would have made it "Kathryn." But while time has been working with Miss Goggin's first name, fate and fortune have refused to change her last name, in spite of the fact that she has had more proposals than any other woman on record.

The joke column is short in the first issue, but promises to increase as the paper gets older. The "makeup" tried to improve the humorous features by including an announcement of a federation reception under the "Solemn Thoughts." The teachers have had various struggles with compositors and printers. The spelling in the new journal is a special matter of pride, as it is hoped to refute the charge that there are no good spellers in the Chicago schools..

Purpose of the Paper.

The purpose of the federation in issuing the Bulletin is stated in the following introductory editorial, said to be from the pen of Miss Goggin:

"The large membership and important work of the Chicago Teachers' federation has made it seem necessary that it should publish its own official organ. Every teacher realizes the great number of notices which require attention weekly and often daily, how little time can be given to each, and the difficulty in large schools of referring to any notice which has been once circulated.

"In order that all possible aid to efficiency may be given by its members, federation notices will hereafter appear in the Bulletin, which will be sent to the home address of members. In this way all can be kept accurately and authentically informed on federation matters and also on subjects of interest to them as citizens as well as teachers."

Miss Haley's article on the "tax" situation is explanatory of what the federation intends to do in the future. Miss Haley will sign all her articles, and says she accepts no responsibility for the literary features of the magazine. The identity of the literary editor is kept a secret. There are numerous literary features, all well chosen for the class of readers to which the Bulletin is intended to go. The teachers have secured 3,600 subscribers, and were obliged to turn away advertisements in their first issue.

Want Normal Extension Bureau.

At a meeting of the Central Teachers' council yesterday a resolution was adopted asking that a normal extension bureau be provided for by the superintendent of schools. Superintendent Arnold Tompkins of the Chicago Normal School proposed that the teachers in the schools might be having the benefit of normal training. The normal extension bureau will provide for meetings of teachers in various parts of the city and send out members of the normal school faculty to lecture to them.

WILL FIGHT "L" STAND GRANT.

Fruit Dealers Protest Against Contract John Refakes Is Seeking with the City.

Decided opposition is manifesting itself to the passage of the ordinance giving to John Refakes the right to build and maintain fruit stands under the stations of the Union Loop, on payment to the city of $9,120 a year.

The Greek fruit dealers who will be injured in business by the new arrangement are banding together to fight the ordinance. They say they have paid license fees, have invested money in their places of business, and have worked hard to establish custom.

Supporters of the ordinance, however, say that the present street venders pay only $3,000 into the City Treasury yearly.

Dr. Hirsch Lectures Tonight.

Dr. Emil G. Hirsch will hold services and lecture this evening at Temple Israel, Forty-fourth street and St. Lawrance avenue.

WANTS A WORLDLY SCHOOL

PROF. LAUGHLIN DOUBTS VALUE OF THE CLASSICS.

In a Lecture on "The New Education" to University of Chicago Students He Contends That the Colleges of the Future Must Teach Their Pupils to Make Their Way in Fields of Commercial Industry—Old Systems Said to Be Inadequate.

A plea for a form of education which will fit young men for positions of trust in the commercial world instead of an education calculated to make school teachers and ministers was made yesterday by J. Laurence Laughlin in a lecture delivered on "The New Education" at the University of Chicago.

The lecture marked the opening of the course of talks by men of affairs before the new college of commerce and administration, which lately has been added to the curriculum of the university.

"The traditional college education of the past has been suited for little else in a practical way than its training for the ministry and the professor's chair," said Mr. Laughlin. "The old and established colleges did not play their part in fitting students for the great administrative work of the world. When I left Harvard I was as ignorant as a babe of the affairs of commerce.

"The training that the classics give in school may accentuate literary appreciation, which is merely the clothes to the man. The world of affairs demands a greater education. Neither the form of education which fits a man for war, for the law, or for the ministry, has as much to do with the immediate and general welfare of the country as instruction that would enable a man to plan the laying of a railroad.

"The old style teachers do not seem to be able to understand that modern science might give as good mental training as old classics. Graduates have found that teaching in other schools was the occupation to which they were fitted, and the returns from teaching were too meager to compare with the possibilities offered in trade and industry."

The "new education" was characterized by Mr. Laughlin as a form of instruction that would teach a man not only the technical part of business, which might be learned by practical work, but would enable the graduate to solve commercial problems, which confront men of affairs every day.

"The colleges which undertake to fit men for the world of affairs do not lower its standard," he said, "nor will they be submerged by a swarm of men whose commercial aims will make them disregard the cultural. The class which will be attracted will inject new life into the body of university students over the country."

DOCTOR DETAINED BY POLICE.

Held as the Result of a Young Woman's Death—Both from Garden City, Kas.

Dr. R. E. Gray of Garden City, Kas., is a prisoner at the Maxwell Street Police Station on serious charges. Miss Erma Brown, also of Garden City, died at an early hour this morning at the County Hospital as the result of an operation, and Captain Wheeler says he will charge the doctor with responsibility for her death. Detectives are searching for a young woman who acted as nurse to Miss Brown during her stay in a hotel at 165 Clark street. The authorities also are contemplating the arrest of Clarence Faulk, said to be the son of a minister in Garden City, but who is said to be in Preston, Kas., where he has a retail store.

Miss Brown came from a prominent family in Garden City, and for some time was society editor of one of the local papers there. Faulk was also popular in the town, and Dr. Gray was considered one of the leading citizens.

Dr. Gray and Miss Brown disappeared from Garden City on Nov. 3. Reaching Chicago, the young woman registered as Mrs. D. H. Richart at a hotel in Clark street. Dr. Gray also registered at the same hotel, and the unknown friend who acted as nurse accompanied them. The woman's condition became serious, and on Wednesday Dr. Gray sought to secure her admittance to the Presbyterian Hospital. It was refused, however, and he took his patient to the County Hospital, where the doctors immediately declared she had been subjected to an operation which probably would result in her death.

Dr. Gray asserts that the young woman received injuries by falling down a flight of steps. Miss Brown, however, sent for Mrs. Imogene Huey, wife of a lawyer and a former resident of Garden City. To her the patient made statements which resulted in Mrs. Huey appearing at the Maxwell Street Station yesterday and signing her name to the complaints against Dr. Gray. The physician, who is held in bonds of $10,000, says he was graduated from Rush Medical College in 1885.

STUDY TO HEAD COLLEGES

CLUB AT UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO TO TAKE NEW COURSE.

Members Will Fit Themselves to Be Presidents and Deans by Giving Special Attention to Matters Pertaining to Administrative Methods for Big Institutions of Learning—Dr. Harper and Professor Harry Pratt Judson Will Explain Policies of Local School

Graduate students of the University of Chicago are pursuing a line of work which may fit them to fill positions as Presidents and deans of colleges. A score of students, of whom a few are young women, yesterday organized the Administrative club and will make a study of the method of conducting a large university. The intention of many of them to occupy positions in other colleges is given as a reason for their course.

The Administrative club was formed at Cobb Hall in the afternoon and President Harper made a short address. In considering the administrative methods employed in universities the students will delve into the study of the policy at the institution which they are attending. President Harper and Dean Harry Pratt Judson will at times address the club on this subject.

Study University Rules.

The work of the first year as planned at the meeting yesterday will include a study of the rules and constitution of the University of Chicago. The minutiæ of university government, the duties of heads of departments, the scope and policy of the different colleges, and the relation of the college to athletics and other outside work in which the school is involved will be considered, and the wisdom of the different methods of university government will be discussed in open meetings.

Taking Special Courses.

The membership of the club includes a number of graduates of other colleges who have come to the university to specialize in particular branches of work before accepting positions in other institutions of learning. The majority of the members are planning to fill places as teachers, and the administrative problems which they may be called upon to face as professors in other schools will, it is thought, be more easy of solution after taking the course they have mapped out.

The officers of the club are:
President—Mayo Fesler.
Vice President—G. F. Reynolds.
Secretary—C. M. Gould.

FOR LIBRARIES IN SCHOOLS.

Board of Education Submits Plan to the Library Trustees—New Lake Front Defense Plan.

Superintendent Cooley and Trustee Mark of the Board of Education appeared before the Library board yesterday and offered to set aside space in ten school buildings in different sections of the city for reading-rooms providing the library will furnish the books and necessary attendance. Superintendent Cooley suggested also that a room in the Public Library Building be set aside for use as a reference library for public school teachers. Both propositions were referred to a committee for consideration.

School Trustee Mark said that the opening of reading-rooms in the schools would keep many children off the streets at night.

Despite the objection raised by Trustee Kuflewski the board decided to continue its policy of sending all its wornout books to the county penal institutions.

A letter was received asking the board to assist in the organization of a Lake Front Protective association. The object of the proposed organization is to determine what class of buildings, if any, should be erected on the lake front. No name but that of the association, 6 East Washington street, was signed to the letter. The Secretary was instructed to obtain further information.

HARVARD MAN IN AN ELOPEMENT

John Pulz Jr. Weds Miss Anna E. Roehrs of Fort Wayne, Indiana, Here.

John Pulz Jr., a Harvard student whose home is in New York City, yesterday secured a license to marry Anna E. Roehrs, the 19-year-old daughter of a Fort Wayne (Ind.) expressman. Pulz is 21 years old. Yesterday a Fort Wayne paper received a telegram signed by Pulz saying he had eloped with the girl. They met ten weeks ago in Indianapolis, and Pulz followed the girl to Fort Wayne.

New York, Nov. 11.—[Special.]—John Legget Pulz, a young Harvard man, son of John T. Pulz of 529 Madison avenue, is out West somewhere and is expected back in a few days.

RAID ALLEGED POLICY SHOP.

Maxwell Street Police Arrest Four People at Blue Island Avenue and Polk Street.

The inaugural raid of the winter season on the policy shops that infest the Maxwell street district was made by the police yesterday. In a small store conducted by James H. Hansen at Blue Island avenue and Polk streets the proprietor, his wife, and three players were taken. The patronage of the place, as in many similar resorts, was confined principally to women and children, wagers of any amount above one cent being taken.

Archbishop Ireland in Chicago.

Archbishop Ireland passed through Chicago last night en route to his home in St. Paul after an Eastern trip. He declared his trip to be of a personal nature and refused to talk of it. "I know nothing of Father Crowley's case," said the Archbishop when asked for an opinion on the Chicago diocese's controversy. "I have nothing to say in regard to the matter."

MORAN ARRAIGNS 'PHONE COMPANY

Attorney Closes Arguments Before Judge Tuley in Struggle Over Rates.

DECISION IN TEN DAYS.

Lawyer Holds It Is Corporation's Duty to Maintain a Modern Service.

CITY'S TERMS IMMATERIAL.

Judge Tuley will give his decision within the next ten days on the petition for an injunction against the Chicago Telephone company filed by the Illinois Manufacturers' association. The arguments in the proceedings closed yesterday afternoon, the closing speech being made by Attorney Thomas A. Moran, his contention being that the City of Chicago has the right to regulate the prices charged by the telephone company for its service, and that the rate prescribed by the ordinance could not be changed by any special contract.

Attorney Moran insisted that the ordinance was to be construed by the court regardless of the opinions of former Corporation Counsel Beale and the present Corporation Counsel, who had given opinions totally at variance on the question whether the ordinance constituted a contract or was a law in itself. He declared that the city cannot be estopped from enforcing the $125 rate for a business service simply because the City Electrician entered into a contract to pay the telephone company $175 a year for the same service.

Patrons Forced to Pay More.

"The city contracted for telephone service as a private corporation, or as an individual," said Attorney Moran, "and the acts of an official of that corporation are not in question. It is nonsense to talk about a contract. It is contended by the defendants that the patrons of the telephone company signed their contracts with a full knowledge of the law, but this I deny. The patrons did not know that the law fixed the rate for service. They knew only that they were paying $125 a year for service, and that that service was good for nothing. They were told that it would be impossible for the company to give them satisfactory service over the grounded wire circuit, and that their only recourse was to pay $50 more and get the metallic circuit.

"This case is one of the utmost importance," continued Attorney Moran, as he discussed the bearing of the case on corporations generally. "It presents a question whether corporations of all kinds shall obey the law, and there is no remedy except in the courts. Legislatures, taxing bodies, and city Councils too often represent these public corporations instead of the people. If your Honor denies the relief prayed for in this petition every patron of the Chicago Telephone company will either be coerced into paying the $50 additional for a satisfactory service or face the alternative of having his telephone taken away from him."

Company's Duty to Patrons.

It was contended by Attorney Moran that the telephone company owed the duty to its patrons of keeping abreast with the progress of the art of telephony, and that it was bound to give a satisfactory service under the terms of the ordinance, no matter whether this required the installation of a copper metallic circuit at an additional expense to the company.

"Why, your Honor," said Mr. Moran, "if this company is entitled to charge additional rates for improving its service, there is no limit to the price it might impose upon its patrons. It might add a screw to the telephone and then raise the price to $250 a year if this is to be the construction of the ordinance under which it is operating."

SEEKS LIGHT ON 'PHONE DEALS.

Stockholder Charges Manipulation of Stock and Asks for a Receiver for Central Company.

Alleged manipulation of Central Union Telephone company stock by the American Telephone and Telegraph company, and the direction of the former company's business for the sole benefit of the American company forms the basis of a petition filed in the Circuit Court yesterday. The petitioner is Charles H. Beers, one of the stockholders of the Central company, and he asks the courts to appoint a receiver and have the rights of the minority stockholders in the concern adjudicated.

According to the petition the stock of the Central company amounted to 69,630 shares of $100 each on Aug. 26 last, of which amount the American company owned 35,246. It is further set forth that if the business of the Central company was "honestly and capably managed the company would pay large dividends."

The petition sets forth that the American company has by its dominating influence in the Central company caused the latter to enter into contracts for the rental of telephone instruments to be furnished to the Central company at exorbitant rates, in many cases approximately closely to the sum for which such instruments could have been purchased outright by the Central company.

On Oct. 10 last, it is asserted, the American company and certain stockholders of the Central company caused the stock of the latter concern to be reduced from 69,630 shares to 34,815 shares. On Oct. 17 following, the petition says, the same stockholders caused the stock to be increased to 100,000 shares, to allow the American company and other large stockholders to secure a more absolute control. The present cash value of the property of the Central company, the petition states, is $16,000,000.

In addition to asking for a receiver the petitioner appeals to have the defendant companies produce in court evidence regarding the contracts existing between the two concerns, and give a full account of all the business of the Central company. The courts are also asked to restrain the companies from making any further contracts or carrying out existing ones for the furnishing of material and instruments by the American company, and also from expending any more money for improvements.

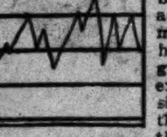
WHEAT HAS FAIR RALLY.

FIRMER CABLES AND BULGE IN CORN ARE FACTORS.

Shipments of Low Grade Wheat from Northwest to Southwest for Feeding Attract Attention — Over Half Advance Lost on December Liquidation and Late Break in Corn—Oats Sell at Highest Price on Crop on Good Cash Demand.

Wheat seemed for half the session determined to rise above the depressing influence of large primary receipts. Encouraged by greater strength at Liverpool than the moderate advance here Wednesday had given them reason to expect, and by a sharp bulge in corn, the bulls took hold of the market again, and with a good general commission demand, showing a continuance of the keener public interest in the fortunes of wheat, they were able to secure an advance of ¾-⅞c. In the end pressure of elevator offerings from the Northwest, liquidation by longs, and short selling by traders who believe there is still too much December liquidation to be gone through with to make a bull market possible for a time, took the edge off the buying enthusiasm, and less than half the early gain was retained. At that wheat, with its net advance of ¼-⅜c, held better than corn, the late slump in which was largely responsible for the easier tone in wheat at the close. December was at times 3⅝c under May and there was changing on a large scale at 3½-⅝c difference. The December range was from 72¼c to 72⅝c, the close at 72⅛-¼c. May sold from 76¼c to 75⅝c, and closed at 75⅝c, or ⅝c above the previous close.



Dec. Wheat Range.

Shipping Wheat Southwest.

A new argument, or the reënforcement of an old one in favor of an advance in wheat, was furnished by the report from Minneapolis of the sale of 15,000 bu low grade spring to go to Kansas City for feeding purposes, the price at the shipping point being 60c. The shipment of wheat to the section which raised the biggest crop in its history drew attention more forcibly to the extent to which it is being substituted for short crop and high priced corn. Another illustration of the same situation was furnished in the report from Gretna, Neb., that corn had been sold there at 60c to go West, while wheat was bringing 55c.

Flour exporters reported the strongest foreign demand and best acceptances in months, while the local shipping demand for wheat, particularly the hard winter, showed some improvement, sales being 215,000 bu. St. Louis reported sales of 300,000 bu to Mexico. The seaboard reported sales of 192,000 bu and clearances were 431,733 bu. There were renewed cable advices of unfavorable weather in Argentina. The bear factors were the steady pressure of long December and the receipts, 735 cars, in the Northwest, to 339 a year ago, and 1,081,198 bu at primary points, compared with 719,219 bu last year. The conspicuous selling of December was by Barrell, accumulations of which delivery by that house was on a scale to excite comment on the recent advance. It was supposed to be for Wall street interests and New York advices were that Wall street was changing December to May there on a large scale at 1⅞c difference. There was no corresponding buying of May here. McReynolds, Schwartz-Dupee, and Patten were large buyers of May; Peavey, Carrington, and Cudahy brokers were sellers. The Liverpool advance in futures was ½d to ⅝d, with spot steady to ½d higher. London was ⅜d to 1d higher and Paris steady to ¼c lower. English country markets were up 6d.

Big Trade in Corn.

A sharp advance at Liverpool, a good cash demand, and still greater difficulty in getting new supplies West made a strong corn market early, prices up nearly 1c and the trade immense. Profit-taking on a large scale and loss of confidence on the part of some of the latest buyers caused a reaction, and closing prices were only ⅛@¼c above those of the previous day. Not only the actual shipping business announced, but the claims of the big business which could be done to the Southwest if cars could be secured, influenced the early mood, one road alone, it was reported, having refused urgent pleas for 250 cars to go to Kansas City, enough to carry 250,000 bu. The December discount widened somewhat in spite of the talk of cash business, nearly 3c under May. December sold from 60¾-⅞c to 59½c, and closed at 59⅝c. May sold at 63⅛c and closed at 62⅞-¾c. The receipts were small, only 104 cars, with 2 contract, and only 95 were estimated for today. Country offerings in Illinois were curtailed by the advance. Little was bought west of the river, Texas bids being still 4c over those from Chicago. Primary receipts were 262,266 bu, to 584,303 bu a year ago. Shipping sales of 500,000 bu, part done late the day before, were reported, and 80,000 bu were worked for export at the seaboard. Clearances were 36,449 bu. Schwartz-Dupee and Bartlett-Frazier led in the commission buying of May. Barrell and Harris were large sellers of December. Comstock bought early, but sold later. Provision interests were sellers. The Liverpool advance was ¾-⅞d on futures, ⅝d to 1d on spot.

Oats Make Record Prices.

The bullish tone in oats was continued yesterday, record prices on the crop being reached, December selling at 40c and May at 41⅜c. These prices were from ⅛c to ⅜c higher than the closing of the day before, although before the close May dropped off ⅛c, December reacting only ⅛c. It was an active and broad market, some of the biggest commission houses in the trade being steady buyers early. This list included McReynolds, who is probably the leader, closely followed by Bartlett-Frazier, Harris, Chandler, and Canby. When the advance was well along McReynolds turned seller and checked the upturn. Receipts were 177 cars, of which 26 were contract. The seaboard cleared 38,000 bu. The cash market was ½c to 1c higher, with carlots in sharp demand, but not much business was done in round lots for shipment, the advance checking transactions. The July delivery, in which initial sales were made on Wednesday, ranged from 36½c to 38⅜c, closing at 37⅞c.

The provision list was inactive, moving barely 5c. There was a 2½c net advance in pork, while other product closed about with the day before. The demand was scattered and such strength as entered the market came mainly from coarse grains. Hog receipts were 34,000, with 27,000 estimated for today. The Price Current reports packing to date 575,000, compared with 490,000 the previous week and 415,000 a year ago. Cured meat shipments, 1,867,000 lbs, against 3,215,000 lbs last year. Lard shipments, 1,567,000 lbs, compared with 1,705,000 lbs a year ago.

Rye was moderately active and in good demand early, but subject to realizing sales later, which broke the price. December opened at 59⅝c, sold at 60c, back to 59½c, which was the bid price at the close. May opened at 63c, sold to 63¼c, off to 62⅞c, at which there were sellers at the close. The inspection for the day was 15 cars, 13 of them being No. 2.

Barley continues decidedly firm, lightly offered, and in excellent demand at ½c advance over Wednesday. The range on malting grades from 56c to 60c, with screenings generally 50c to 56c. Most everything except very poor barley now goes into the malting grade.

The market in seeds was slow, March timothy selling at $6.15, with November quotably $6.15 to $6.20. Cash lots of clover were a shade easier, March was quotably $9.40, and December and November $9.15. Flaxseed was extremely dull, No. 1 Northwestern at $1.47 bid, December $1.46 asked, and May $1.47 flat. There were sales at this figure. Local receipts were 26 cars, Duluth reporting 255 and Milwaukee 84.

Trade Gossip on 'Change.

Estimated receipts for today are: Wheat, 70 cars, corn, 95 cars; oats, 155 cars; hogs, 27,000.

There was a membership sold yesterday at $2,650.

Cash corn in Kansas City yesterday was 68c per bu, and corn was on a shipping basis from Chicago to the Southwestern market.

Advices to Hulburd-Warren from southwestern Iowa are that there are more farmers in that section who are waiting to buy corn than there are who want to sell it.

E. R. Ulrich & Sons, grain dealers at Springfield, Ill., write J. F. Harris: "Receipts of new corn are practically nothing in our territory, excepting on contracts made several months ago. We have disposed of about 25,000 bu old corn—mostly to farmers—at our stations in the last two weeks at 60@63c per bu at our elevators, and we are now asking 65c per bu for old corn. We expect to have to ship in corn to some of our stations West and South of here to supply the demand within three or four months. The new crop will shell out in this territory probably 25 per cent of a crop."

"There is a healthy situation in oats," says Chambers, "a general demand which I expect to see continue. In the last two weeks New England buyers seem to have awakened to the fact that if they want oats they must pay the price, and they have been buying as though they were afraid they would not have another chance. This is the only market where the Easterners can buy oats, as the South is taking all the offerings from the West and from southern Illinois, and may continue to do so until spring. The result of the improved cash demand has been to push up the premium from 1c under May at the river a fortnight ago to more than 1c over May. The local situation is even more acute. The Eastern demand is so sharp that the receipts are not enough for local needs, without drawing on the through billed supplies, and full prices have to be paid for localizing them. City consumers are paying as high as 3½c to 4c over May a car for track use, an unusual premium."

The Cincinnati Price Current in its weekly crop summary says: "No material change in growing grain crops. Conditions generally good. More general rains needed before hard freezing."

The Orange Judd Farmer estimated the area of the corn crop for 1901 early in the season at 87,050,000 acres. It claims that 5,535,000 acres were abandoned, leaving 81,515,000 acres harvested. The yield is placed at 17.4 bu, or one bushel higher than the Department of Agriculture, and the aggregate at 1,418,849,000 bu, or 59,495,000 bu more than the department's figures.

The London Statist, in discussing the ups and downs of the outlook for the Argentine wheat crop, says: "A large Argentine crop has more terror for the American wheat-holder than perhaps any other circumstance, and it is partly the fear of this which has induced such liberal shipments from America during the last three months, and which have had so much effect upon prices. The absence of competition from Argentina in the early months of 1902 would probably lead to a considerable stiffening of prices on the part of American holders; but of this there are no present signs, the fact of the case being that there is so much wheat available in America this season that anything like a marked improvement might easily bring out overwhelming supplies if Argentina has anything like a fairly good crop."

ABUNDANT SUPPLY OF PRODUCE.

Plentiful Shipments, Good Demand, and a Steady Market the Features of the Day on South Water Street.

The general produce market was without flurries, receipts and sales being evenly balanced. The volume of trade is not so large as commission men had hoped for, but a marked increase is certain before Thanksgiving. Chickens and fowls were received in increased quantities over the few days previous, as also were turkeys. Some complaint is being made as to the condition of the latter, the drought in many turkey-raising localities having cut the feed supply short. For this reason many shippers are rushing stock into the market and the supply from now on is almost certain to be liberal. Cars protected from freezing being difficult to obtain is given as the reason for the falling off in the receipts of potatoes. This fact has caused a firm market, prices holding well at 75c to 80c. An increased demand for cranberries has moved quotations up a notch, $6.50 to $7.00 per barrel being the latest figures. Up until yesterday the receipts of Southern vegetables had been light, when a marked increase in the volume of shipments was noticeable. Prices held up well, notwithstanding the larger quantities offered, head lettuce bringing in barrels $3.00 to $4.00. Eggs were steady and apples firm.

NEW RECORD IN SHIP BUILDING.

Contracts for Thirty-one Vessels for Lake Traffic—Latest Provides for Big Steel Steamer.

All records for shipbuilding on the great lakes have been broken by the American Shipbuilding company, which has under contract thirty-one vessels to be delivered during the next season of navigation. The announcement of the latest contract was made by the company yesterday. It is for a big steel steamer syndicate, of which A. B. Wolvin of Duluth is President and Edward Smith of Buffalo is Vice President. The new boat will be 376 feet long over all, 356 feet keel, 50 feet beam, and 28½ feet depth of hold. It will cost about $280,000, and will be built at the yards of the company at West Superior.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 14.—Today's statement of the Treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $171,028,645; gold, $109,748,397; silver, $11,445,800; United States notes, $7,368,371; Treasury notes of 1890, $64,441; national bank notes, $6,948,653.

CALL MONEY IS FIRMER.

LOANS GENERALLY ARE MARKED UP IN NEW YORK.

Directors of Chicago Title and Trust Company Vote to Pay Off $300,000 Bonds on Jan. 1—Regular Dividends Declared on National Biscuit Stock—Sales Larger than for Same Quarter Last Year—Employes Buy Shares—Financial Topics.

The firmness in call money rates in New York yesterday attracted little money from Chicago. One local bank placed $1,000,000 there on call at 4½ per cent, but bids from the East failed to induce the banks generally to loan there. Country bank balances in some of the institutions have fallen off. The movement of currency to the interior, however, is about over.

Chicago bankers do not share the apprehensions of New York bankers regarding the money market. They think that as the movement of currency from the large centers to interior points began this year a month earlier than usual the return flow will set in that much earlier. A theory for the shifting of loans in New York was that it was done in order to modify an unfavorable bank statement tomorrow. A number of loans were marked up to 5 per cent, the ruling rate for the day being 4¾ per cent. Money closed at 3 to 3½ per cent and the last loan was at 3½ per cent.

It is estimated that from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 gold will go out tomorrow. Insurance companies, it is reported, have increased the amount they will care for on one steamer from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000. Demand sterling reached 487⅝ yesterday, which is the highest point at which it has sold this year. Gold shipments have had no effect in easing the market, indicating that the exports are made to meet loans maturing abroad.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remains unchanged at 4 per cent.

Pay Off $300,000 Bonds.

Directors of the Chicago Title and Trust company have voted to pay off the mortgage of $300,000 on the building in Washington street on Jan. 1. According to the terms of the mortgage, made by the old Chicago Title and Trust company before the consolidation took place, the bonds, which bear 4 per cent, may be redeemed on any interest day in sums of $5,000 and multiples thereof, or the entire loan paid at the option of the company.

No action was taken as to a dividend. The bonds will be redeemed from the surplus of the company, leaving profits available for a dividend should the directors decide to pay one in January, at the expiration of the first quarter of the new company.

Biscuit Sales Are Larger.

At the conclusion of the quarterly meeting of directors of the National Biscuit company yesterday at which the regular dividends on both classes of stock were declared, Chairman A. W. Green said the business for the quarter just closed had been good. Sales were larger than for the same quarter last year. The sales of package goods showed a gratifying increase. The profits, as compared with the same quarter last year, he said, were entirely satisfactory to the directors.

Chairman Green also announced that the number of employés of the company who are becoming stockholders under the installment plan inaugurated at the beginning of this year is constantly increasing.

The regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock will be paid on Nov. 30. The usual quarterly disbursement of 1 per cent on the common is payable on Jan. 15, 1902.

Financial Topics.

President Shaughnessy of the Canadian Pacific road is quoted as follows regarding extensions of the system: "Canadian Pacific has no important extension in prospect. We built 300 miles of new line this year and will probably construct about the same amount next year. Canadian Pacific has no intention of building a Hudson Bay line. I do not think that the present generation will see such a line built."

Considerable Monon stock has been acquired recently by Chicago commission houses.

Glucose stock was among the few issues that showed firmness in the New York market. The common advanced from 40¼ to 42½ and the preferred from 98½ to 99.

Two hundred shares of Mergenthaler Linotype stock have sold at 181 to 182½, the first transactions on the New York exchange since May 31, 1899, when an odd lot sold at 152.

Simeon B. Chapin wired his house here the following from New York after the close of the market yesterday: "Today's stock market was a disappointment to a large number of traders, who had looked for a bull market after the Northern Pacific announcement was made. It appears that the larger interests thought the best way to do was to shake out all the marginal accounts they could before starting an advance. This ought to be over in a day or so, when higher prices may be looked for with reasonable safety. I should consider the market a purchase on any further slight reaction. It is reasonable to look for other railroads, such as the Union Pacific, to be absorbed later on by the Northern Securities company."

The following was wired from New York: "It is said by interests close to Chicago Terminal that in any event no default upon the company's bonds will be permitted on Jan. 1 next. These interests further state that in any case there ought to be no difficulty about the bonds, which are well within the value of the property, no matter what the result may be to the stock of the company."

The $62,500 3½ per cent sewer bond issue of the Village of Sandy Hill, N. Y., was sold to W. J. Hayes & Sons of Cleveland, O., at a premium of $1,135.

The $15,000 3½ per cent ten-year highway registered bonds of Fall River, Mass., have been awarded to Estabrook & Co. at 102.851.

The American Linseed company has reduced the price of spot oil 5c a gallon, and, until further notice, will sell at 58@60c. No change has been announced in the price of futures.

The Grand Rapids Gaslight company reports for October sales an increase of 13.80 per cent; net earnings, 31.28 per cent.

The Mexican Northern railway has declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1 per cent, payable on Dec. 2.

Directors of the American Locomotive company have approved plans of engineers for improvements at the Schenectady and Dunkirk plants out of the $1,850,000 set aside for this purpose some time ago.

President E. V. Douglass of the Consolidated Lake Superior company, in his annual report, says: "The amount of net earnings which will be realized from June 30, 1901, to June 30, 1902, on the sale and transportation of iron ore from the Helen iron mine, alone will be sufficient to pay the entire preferred stock dividend of the company during the period named. This statement is based on earnings now being realized, without considering the increased value which will result from mixing the Helen ore with the high-grade Bessemer ore from the Josephine mine. The large earnings, therefore, which will certainly be derived during the same period of time from the steel works, government bonus, ground wood, and sulphite pulp mills, ferro-nickel works, sulphuric acid works, water power rentals, railway and steamship operations, timber sales, and the sales of ore from other than the Helen mine, will all be tributary either to surplus account or for dividends upon the common stock of your company."

American Malting Report.

The American Malting company reports for the fiscal year ended Aug. 31: Profits $721,977, from which deduct $17,727 for underlying mortgage interest, $240,000 for interest on mortgage bonds, and $80,989 for taxes, leaving a net surplus of $383,261.

The company received additional cash as follows: From sales of unused Western lands $13,154; from sale of unusued property in New York City $145,000; $50,000 was deducted on account of underlying mortgage and $500 for expenses, making total cash $107,654. Of this amount $101,800 was used to purchase $107,000 of the company's mortgage bonds, which were canceled.

In addition there has been paid off $115,000 underlying bonds. At the last annual meeting of stockholders a resolution was passed requesting the directors to prepare and submit to the stockholders a plan of reorganization. The directors have concluded that it would not be opportune at present, but recommend that the stockholders request the incoming board to do so.

Railroad earnings are reported as follows:

General Tendency of Cash, Bonds, and Other Securities at London, Paris, and Berlin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Commercial Advertiser's London financial cablegram says:

"Business on the Stock Exchange did not improve today, and the tone was less cheerful than yesterday. American stocks were regarded with particular favor. The business is in full bank control, which is likely to continue for the remainder of the year. The bank return shows that the institution is hugging the last consol installment of £3,000,000. Paris exchange is 25.13½."

LONDON, Nov. 14.—There was a generally improved tone at the opening of business of the Stock Exchange, especially in Kaffirs. Americans opened quiet, irregular, and below parity. Afterward they were somewhat steadier. They closed dull.

KAISER'S "DIPLOMA MILL" WAR.

German Consul Explains That No Fight Is Being Made on Legitimate American Dentists.

A cable message announcing that the Berlin police had ordered an American dentist to cease practicing was no surprise to Dr. Walter Wever, the German Consul, yesterday. The German government began a fight against the American "diploma mills" some time ago, the United States authorities coöperating, or rather taking the initiative in this country. The German government was notified from Chicago that the Wisconsin Dental Academy was a bogus concern and the Berlin police acted on this.

"The Wisconsin Dental Academy mentioned in the cablegram," said Dr. Wever, "was one of the oldest 'diploma mills' in this country. It went out of existence long ago, but occasionally a dentist is found bearing a diploma, which, now that we know its value, receives no consideration at all from German authorities.

"The information that there was no such academy went from the Chicago office, our advice having been requested in the matter."

Terlinden Case for Supreme Court.

The United States Supreme Court will have to pass on some of the points raised in the extradition proceedings against Gerhard Terlinden, formerly of Oberhausen, Prussia. Judge Jenkins, speaking for the Federal Court of Appeals, refused yesterday to consider the treaty question raised in the motion for a writ of habeas corpus. He said it was properly a matter for the Supreme Court. Arrangements for taking the case to the higher tribunal will be made at once.

SELL OUT ON GOOD NEWS.

WALL STREET PROFESSIONALS DISPOSE OF STOCKS.

Public Rushes Into Market on Settlement of Northwestern Railway Troubles and Yet Prices Break Under Sales and Melt Away — Rise in Call Money Rate and Prospect of More Gold Shipments Among Unfavorable Developments.

[BY A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

New York, Nov. 14.—[Special.]—Professional Wall street today followed its usual custom of selling on the "good news." Having accumulated a considerable line of stock at lower prices, the professionals, therefore, gladly availed themselves of the chance offered by the announcement of the Northern Pacific settlement to sell to the public, who rushed in to buy in anticipation of a marked advance in prices following the removal of what for the last six months has been one of the most serious menaces the stock market has ever had.

Hence it was that, in the face of the best news since the May panic, prices today, under the heavy selling, fairly melted away, with such stocks as Union Pacific, St. Paul, New York Central, and Missouri Pacific showing declines at one time of 3 and 4 points each, while generally throughout the list there was weakness.

Apart from the Northern Pacific settlement the day's developments were not altogether helpful to advancing prices. Call money again rose to 5 per cent, there was not a little calling of loans, and there were suggestions, not pleasing in view of the low surplus reserve account, of further gold exports.

Of the stocks that advanced the most conspicuous were Glucose Sugar securities, the common gaining two full points on dealings in 2,000 shares, while the preferred rose one-half on the transfer of 200 shares. It now develops that the earnings of the company are showing handsome profits—much to the discomfiture of a large short interest in both stocks. Insiders were buyers today and the report was the talked of consolidation with the National Starch company is shortly to be effected.

Another of the advancing stocks was Chicago Terminal preferred, which company—so it was gravely stated on Wednesday—had seriously contemplated defaulting on its bonds in January next. For some time a persistent effort has been making by certain interests in the property to depress the prices of its several securities in order, so the report is, to buy them in cheaply, so that a deal involving Chicago Terminal might the more profitably be carried through. It is also a fact that, on the decline, independent railroad interests were reported buyers of the stocks, in an endeavor, so the head of a Western Stock Exchange house declares, to buy the control of the property.

Of the stocks that declined few were affected by any news, but were sold generally for the purpose of securing profits. The shares of the Steel trust were well supported, closing each with only a fractional net decline on dealings in about 20,000 shares each. There was good support also to the Pressed Steel Car issues.

St. Paul was sold because of alleged disappointment that it did not figure in some way or other in the Northern Pacific deal, while the selling of Union Pacific and Great Northern preferred looked like nothing more than realizing.

◆

The break of two points in Western Union in the early trading, which contributed not a little to the unsettling of the market, was said to be due to pool selling. Gould brokers bought.

◆

On the curb Northern securities, the stock to be issued in exchange for Northern Pacific and Great Northern stocks, was inquired for early in the day. The early bids, however, brought out no offers of the stock, and it was not until 110 had been reached that any sales were effected. At this price during the afternoon there were sales of 500 shares, and at the close the stock was quoted at 109½ bid, offered at 110½. Bids were also made for the new convertible 4 per cent bonds of the Northern Pacific company, but no sales were reported. At the close 110 was bid for these bonds.

◆

The Sugar trust interests have decided to organize a New York State corporation to control the trust's operations in this State. The American Sugar Refining company of New York was incorporated at Albany today, and its capital stock has been placed at $3,500,000. These directors have been selected: Henry C. Havemeyer, William B. Thomas, Lowell M. Palmer, Charles M. Senff, Arthur Donner.

IN NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.

General Tendency of Cash, Bonds, Railroad Stocks, and Other Securities in Wall Street.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The official announcement of the terms of the settlement of the railroad controversy in the Northwest attracted little outside demand for stocks. Bears put out extensive short lines to take away the market from those seeking to liquidate, and then fiercely raided the market to dislodge stop loss orders and enable them to take profits.

How large an element the short selling was in the weakness of the market was disclosed when the bears began to cover during the last hour. Substantial recoveries were made in all the active stocks and at some points among the coalers and specialties there were complete recoveries.

The railroad bond market was weak. Total sales par value, $5,691,000.

Close—Money on call firm at 3½@5 per cent; last loan, 3½. Prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent. Sterling exchange strong, with actual business in banker's bills at 487¼ for demand and at 484¼@484⅜ for 60 days; posted rates, 485 and 488@488½. Commercial bills, 483¼@484.

Bar silver, 56⅝. Mexican dollars, 45.

DUNNING TO BE EXAMINED BY A SPECIAL COMMITTEE.

President Hanberg Says Betterment of the System Is Desired—Coal Deal Still Hangs Fire.

President Hanberg of the County board practically arranged yesterday for a special committee to inspect the insane asylum and poorhouse at Dunning with a view to suggesting plans for the bettering of conditions in these institutions. The President will appoint this body and its personnel will include County Commissioners and private citizens who have knowledge of charitable and public institutions. There will be no sweeping inquiry, however, as was the case with the hospital, but the idea will be to devise plans for improvement as the result of visits and observation.

Mr. Hanberg again conferred with Miss Jane Addams and Miss Julia Lathrop. He asserted that he will appoint one or the other a member of the special committee.

Mrs. Kate Green and Miss May Shea, attendants in the insane asylum, who were charged with neglecting patients, as expected, were exonerated by the Civil Service commission. The defendants are ordered reinstated.

O'Gara, King & Co., it was asserted, will refuse to abide by the plans for chemical and evaporation tests which the board is preparing to enforce.

"They may go so far as to throw up their contract," said a supporter of the firm.

President Hanberg contends that if contracts are thrown up the board will take action on the bonds filed by the contractors.

SAYS TRACTION MUST WAIT.

Judge Humphrey, in Chicago, Refuses to Grant a Temporary Injunction.

Almost simultaneously with the filing of the bill for an injunction by the traction companies the matter was brought to the attention in Chicago of Judge Humphrey of the United States District court for the Southern District of Illinois. Attorney Crawford called on him and on behalf of the traction companies asked that a temporary injunction issue against the defendants in the case filed at Springfield.

The Judge said he could not consider such an application on an ex parte hearing. He suggested that the lawyer give notice to counsel for the defendants and said he would be in Springfield next Monday to set a date for hearing of the arguments on the petition.

"It is evident that the traction people are not satisfied with the Illinois courts," Mayor Harrison said. "They are making themselves popular with the people," he added, sarcastically.

Corporation Counsel Walker said he knew of no ground upon which an appeal to the federal court could be taken and maintained.

WEST SIDE EXTENSION LECTURE

Professor Vincent Will Open the University Series at the Lewis Institute This Evening.

The first of the series of lectures to be given at the Lewis Institute in coöperation with the University of Chicago will be delivered this evening by Professor George E. Vincent on "The Popular Mind." This will be preceded by an introductory address by Professor Edmund J. James on "The Modern University." This is the opening evening of the West Side center of the University Lecture association. No admission fee is charged.

End Union Pacific-Omaha Row.

Omaha, Neb., Nov. 14.—The Union Pacific railroad today settled by agreement with the city of Omaha a matter which has been in litigation for thirty years. The railroad will expend $2,000,000 on improvements. The city has agreed to vacate streets and several blocks; the road will build its own viaducts, erect new shops at a cost of $750,000, and the right of way line of the road between Omaha and South Omaha will be fenced.

N THE INSURANCE FIELD.

STATE SUES COMMERCIAL FIRE AT INDIANAPOLIS.

Action Is to Recover Judgment of $5,000 Secured in the Chicago Courts by the State Department for Underwriting Without a License—J. R. B. Van Cleave May Return $36,000 Next Week—Lion of London Reinsures Its United States Business.

Suit was begun yesterday in Indianapolis to recover a judgment for $5,000 secured in the Chicago courts by the Illinois Insurance department against the Commercial Fire of Indiana on a charge of writing insurance in Illinois without a license. A similar suit will be begun next Monday against the Vernon of Indiana, when the examination of its condition by its stockholders, now in progress, is concluded.

If the procedure can be made to stand an important point will have been gained in the warfare the State is carrying on against the unauthorized companies which are operating here without any regulation by the Insurance department. The Illinois suits were for a writ of quo warranto, and writs of ouster were granted and fines of $5,000 imposed against several companies. As they had no property in the State nothing was done. Since Fred H. Rowe became attorney for the Insurance department he authorized L. J. Behan, who had charge of the suits when Perry Hull was attorney for the department, to try to collect the judgments, and the suits were arranged by him. Should they stand the unauthorized companies will have to stop operations in the State, as they are held all equally guilty.

◆

The fire insurance companies from which J. R. B. Van Cleave, while Insurance Commissioner, collected $36,000 as taxes on return premiums which they had not returned in their reports, are at last in a fair way to get their money back. Mr. Van Cleave yesterday promised to take the matter up next week, apportion the amounts, and turn the money over. When it was collected the companies brought suit to recover it. The Supreme Court found for them some months ago.

The Lion Fire of London, represented here by Wiley, Jennings, Corlies & Co., Munger, Ebbert & Co., and R. W. Hosmer, has reinsured its United States business in the National of Hartford, excepting the Pacific coast, New York City, Hartford, and Boston. It had lost money on its underwriting for the last three years, operating principally in the large cities, with a premium income in 1890 of $565,754.

Receiver Sterling of the Manufacturers and Merchants' Mutual of Rockford is paying a first dividend of 75 per cent on the allowed claims, which amount to $46,366.

The insurance loss on the Hammond packing plant has been adjusted at $492,000.

Centralia has been rerated by Secretary Peisch of the Illinois State board.

The North American Accident company of this city, which has been operating in Wisconsin through L. A. Wheeler & Co. of Milwaukee as general agents, has decided to make direct contracts with the agents. Wheeler & Co. will remain as Milwaukee agents.

ALARMS PUZZLE WATCHMEN.

Chief Musham Finds Many Private Policemen Are Ignorant of How to Call the Department.

Chicago has been relying on watchmen who know nothing of the fire alarm system, according to reports sent in to Marshal Musham. The Chief says he is amazed at the ignorance of the men to whose vigilance the safety of down-town buildings at night is committed. Several weeks ago the Chief sent out and order requiring his men to learn whether watchmen know how to turn in alarms, and, if not, to instruct them.

Captain Edward J. Buckley reported: "In my district 30 per cent of the private watchmen knew nothing about how to send in a fire alarm."

Captain John Klett said he found that all the watchmen in his district were ignorant.

Captain Marinus L. Strook found that in twenty buildings visited only two watchmen were able to send in an alarm or knew the situation of the nearest box.

Captain William Barker said that one-third of the managers of buildings did not know how to send in an alarm.

TO FIGHT NEW CONSTITUTION.

Alabama Democrats Who Oppose Recent Changes in State Charter Will Continue Struggle.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—General Charles M. Shelly, chairman of the committee in the campaign against the new constitution, was here today and said:

"I have called a conference of our friends to meet at Birmingham on Nov. 20, to begin the reorganization of the Democratic party.

"The large majority of white men who have just had an odious constitution counted in on them will not longer submit to the old organization. We will retain the name of Democrats and have a real Democratic party on a platform of honest elections, white supremacy, and a fair constitution. My associates in the campaign are in sympathy with the movement.

"The next step will be the calling of a State convention early next year, and we will put out candidates for Governor and other State offices, and for Congressmen in all the districts. We will not fight inside the old organization because we would be counted out in the primaries and conventions, just as we have been in the recent election."

FIGHTING SPREAD OF DISEASE.

Diphtheria and scarlet fever cases are showing an unusual increase in Chicago, according to officials of the Health department. Eight physicians are employed to administer antitoxin in cases of exposure to diphtheria. Heretofore the number employed for this work has ranged from three to four. Yesterday fourteen cases of diphtheria and five of scarlet fever were reported. On Monday there were eighteen, on Tuesday nineteen, and on Wednesday twenty-four.

Mr. Lee has also sold to Cora C. Willett the premises on Wabash avenue, 268 feet north of Fifty-third street, west front, 49x161 feet, with apartment building, for $26,000.

Joseph E. Otis Jr. purchased at judicial sale at the auction rooms of the Real Estate board yesterday the premises 695-697 West Lake street, 97x122 feet, with brick improvement, for $21,500.

Bryan Lathrop and Clarence A. Burley, trustees of the estate of Frances Ogden, have given a trust deed to William A. Jeffries of Boston for $75,000 covering the premises 263-265 Wabash avenue. The loan runs five years at 3½ per cent.

Adele W. Clark and husband have conveyed to Fred S. James in trust the premises at 3802-04 Ellis avenue to secure a building loan of $35,000, five years at 5 per cent.

MAYOR FAVORS BURIED WIRES.

Indorses Transportation Committee's Declaration for Underground Trolley, but Would Enlarge Territory.

Mayor Harrison yesterday sanctioned the declaration by the Local Transportation committee for the underground trolley system within the district bounded by North avenue, the lake, Twenty-second street, and Ashland avenue. He took the position, however, that the proposed underground trolley zone should be extended to Fullerton avenue, Western avenue, Thirty-ninth street, and the lake.

"The proposition to install this power on the cable systems is open to objection, as that would be favoring streets which have cable lines to the detriment of others which have the overhead trolley," said the Mayor.

At Corporation Counsel Walker's request Judge Kohlsaat has served notice on the People's Gaslight and Coke company that it must plead to the city's bill of complaint in the Ogden Gas case on or before Nov. 24.

Controller McGann has issued an order that monthly reports shall be made by the head of each department, setting forth the work done and money expended. The controller also will insist on a strict following of the city ordinance requiring the Finance committee of the Council to audit the books of his department at the end of the year in the hope that the mystery about his annual report may be cleared up.

"A report should be presented that every citizen and financier will know is correct in every detail," said Mr. McGann. "For years a great deficiency in the sinking funds has been carried. The Controller's report has shown what ought to be in these funds, but the Treasurer's report has shown far less ready cash to the same credit. The Finance committee should allow this discrepancy to be remedied."

Superintendent of Streets Doherty served notice on the Allis-Chalmers company to remove within five days the obstructions on Fillmore street between Rockwell street and Washtenaw avenue, which tract the company is said to be using illegally.

Final notices to many alleged offenders were sent out by Smoke Inspector Schubert during the day, the more important cases being Zero Marx, 162 Superior street; Criminal Court Building, Michigan and Illinois streets; F. W. Rueckheim & Bro., 265 South Desplaines street.

The Civil Service Commissioners may announce their verdict in the case of Captain Luke P. Colleran today.

PROFIT IN FARM LANDS.

KANKAKEE INVESTORS PAYING AS HIGH AS $150 AN ACRE.

Parts of Holdings Purchased Originally for $50 to $60 an Acre Sold Off and Proceeds Used to Secure Real Estate in Western States at Lower Rates—Investments in Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas Sought by Illinoisans.

Kankakee, Ill., Nov. 14.—[Special.]—A few years ago there was but little farm land in Illinois that was valued at more than $50 or $75 an acre. A few days ago a farm near Manteno, this county, was sold at $112.50 an acre, and this price has been the rule rather than the exception in that locality within the last year. Land in other parts of Kankakee is proportionately high. The Grinnell farm of 100 acres, not far from this city, was sold last month for $120 an acre, and the owner bought 480 acres in Missouri for about one-fourth the proceeds of the sale. Speaking of high-priced land the Champaign Gazette says:

"Last week a farm of 160 acres near Ellsworth was sold for $130.50 an acre. The improvements are said to be ordinary. At Roanoke, Woodford County, a farm of 160 acres was sold last week for $150 an acre. Two persons owning farms near Colfax have recently refused $125 an acre for their land. Across the road from Henry Grosse's, half way between Kappa and El Paso, a man owns 240 acres, with ordinary improvements. He has just refused $140 an acre for the entire tract. He offers to let it go for $150 an acre, and will doubtless get it."

During the last year it is estimated that upwards of $200,000 has been invested by people in Kankakee County for land in Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas, at prices ranging all the way from $12 to $50 an acre, with perhaps $30 an acre as an average. All the county officials have bought farms in those States, mostly for speculation; they are familiar with farming and know desirable tracts when they see them. Some of them have cleaned up tidy sums.

Senator Len Small bought 160 acres in Minnesota less than a year ago, paying $1,000 down. Since then the land has advanced $1,800, and in addition the rent from Mr. Small's tenant has more than paid the interest on the investment. This is only one of many similar cases. Every excursion day between twenty and fifty Kankakeeans have been northwestward on homeseeking excursions, and in numerous cases they come back with title deeds to farms in their pockets.

It is hardly worth while for a man with small capital to buy a farm in Illinois. The trend is all toward Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota. In the two former States there is plenty of fine corn land to be had around the $50 mark, while in South Dakota the chances to make money at farming are equally good.

SENATOR M'LAURIN SPEAKS FOR AN AMERICAN MARINE.

South Carolinan Sees Danger in Weakness on the Seas and Advocates Subsidies to Upbuild the System.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 14.—At a "smoker" given for the visiting delegates to the Southern Cotton Spinners' association Hoke Smith spoke on "Development of Our Home Talent" and Senator John L. McLaurin on "Extension of Our Foreign Trade." McLaurin advocated an American marine.

"Our weakness upon the sea is the one great danger that confronts the nation," said the Senator. "If ships could be built in the United States as cheaply and operated under our flag as cheaply as they are under other flags it would be unnecessary for our government to do more than to offset the subsidies, bounties, naval reserve, retainers, and other methods by which foreign governments attract capital into merchant ships built and managed by their own people.

"We must not imagine that American capital is dependent upon national legislation in order to make ship owning pay. We have ample evidence of large American investments in foreign built ships, manned and operated by foreigners, in our foreign trade. However much our people have invested in foreign ships, they are unavailable under international law when at war as naval auxiliaries.

"Another thing we should remember: These ships and the men employed on board of them may be turned against the United States in the event of our becoming involved in war with the nation whose flag they fly.

"The object of extending government aid to the upbuilding of our merchant marine is to secure adequate protection for the nation upon the sea, and the mere fact that the investment has been made attractive to American capital is an incident of the transaction.

"What we need in this country today is a non-sectional patriotism and statesmanship more devoted to the building up of our country than the achievement of party success. Great national or business questions involving the glory of our republic and the prosperity of our people should not be dwarfed into mere party questions."

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1901.

A Happy Escape. The Army of the Tennessee is to be congratulated on its wariness in refusing to undertake an official inquiry into General Lew Wallace's conduct during the battle of Shiloh. It may be that General Wallace has been misrepresented, and it is perhaps natural that he should desire a public vindication. That he has felt criticism keenly was shown by his giving up his membership in the Society of the Army of the Tennessee because of some informal and unofficial remarks made privately in condemnation of his manner of conducting his troops from Crump's Landing to Pittsburg Landing. He now expresses a willingness to join the society again on condition that statements which he takes exception to are investigated and he be given a chance to vindicate himself. It is in no spirit of hostility to General Wallace that the Army of the Tennessee has refused to accept these terms. It does not care to go into questions which have been fought over so often. Life is not to be regarded as nothing but a happy opportunity to study the battle of Shiloh. It has other uses, though the persons who continue to heap up materials for that purpose seem to think differently. "Shiloh" is now almost a special department of historical investigation, like "The Roman Constitution" or "The Formation of the British Empire." The present generation has really had enough of it. Let it be set aside for the use of young men who have to write theses for their doctor's degree.

AN INCOMPLETE BEAUTY.

Mr. Lorado Taft and his fellow-artists seem to be at present a kind of apostolate sent out to preach the gospel of "Beauty is Truth, Truth Beauty," in a land given over to the worship of Commercialism, Materialism, and Ugliness. It is the scrimmage for the dollar, thinks Mr. Taft, that engrosses all our energies and leaves us no time for anything else. Whatever the cause may be, the result can hardly be denied. The absence of grace and loveliness in our modern life has been pointed out and admitted long ago. The "cleer, keen joyaunce" that the Greek took in the prospect and in the creation of things beautiful to look upon is not found among us. This point one must frankly concede.

But if the men of today have not the sense of beauty that the Greek had they are his superiors in other ways. They do not drink their wine, for instance, out of such artistic cups, but they have better wine. Their houses may not be so beautiful outside, but they are more comfortable inside. That is the main thing.

The Greek tyrant whose fine artistic tastes would have made it impossible for him to tolerate an ungraceful fold in his costume, a poor statue, a solecism in his speech, an improper quantity in his pronunciation, or a lapse from courtesy in his manners, was capable of ordering a wholesale massacre of his political opponents. Now the Mayor of Chicago, though he wears a "cylinder around his neck and cylinders around his wrists," and though he uses harsh language sometimes concerning his political opponents, would not put them to death if he had the power.

Grecian supremacy in sculpture and most other forms of expressing the beautiful is to be admitted. But one must keep one's eyes open to the fact that this supremacy in art was found side by side with a laxness of moral fiber which even modern commercialism, with cylinders around its neck and wrists, would not tolerate. This commercial age has not a keen appreciation of beauty, but it has some morality. If Americans cannot have both beauty and morality then let beauty go and ugliness come.

THE DELINQUENT CHILDREN.

Whatever exaggeration there may be in the reports of the conspiracy among the Ghetto boys against the life of Patrolman Capparelli, it is evident from the kind of cases which come up before Judge Tuthill every day that such a conspiracy is not impossible. The crowded conditions of the city, which make it easy for the good to get together, perform the same service for the bad, and coöperation is as powerful an engine in one case as in the other. James Kolis, who is charged with instructing his "gang" of boys in the art and science of crime, found his designs aided and abetted by just that massing of large numbers of boys in a small district which furthers the efforts of men who have "clubs" of boys at settlements. In these days of organization the sheep and the goats seem to be separated at an early age.

This tendency gives additional emphasis to Judge Tuthill's plea for a home for delinquent children. Such a home, together with the John Worthy School, the Juvenile Court, and an efficient corps of probation officers, would not only check juvenile crime but ten or fifteen years from now would perceptibly reduce the number of cases in the ordinary criminal docket. If the boys are brought up in better surroundings there is obviously less chance of their taking to a lawless life. There is at present a strong public interest in this question. It is a favorable moment not only for building the boys' home but for putting on a firmer basis that system of probation officers which has been shown to be indispensable.

It is not enough to take care of the boys who are so bad that they have to be shut up by themselves. An efficient supervision of the boys in their ordinary life is just as necessary. It will be possible then to note their first tendencies toward wrongdoing and to bring them up short before they are too far advanced on the road to ruin. Nothing will do more for the future of the city than this effort now being made to bring up the coming generation in ways of good citizenship. It will make Chicago stronger and greater. It is dictated both by philanthropy and self-interest.

RAILROAD PEACE IN THE NORTHWEST.

After more than five months of negotiations the disagreement which culminated in the disastrous and costly Northern Pacific corner in the New York stock market on May 9 last has been settled, though the details of the settlement are not yet fully known. The contending factions of necessity have sunk their differences and will operate in harmony in the Western railroad territory for the present at least. So far as the Hill or the Harriman interests are concerned there will be no extension of lines which has not the approval of all interested. Rates will be maintained on a uniform basis through the application of the community of interest principle.

The ascendency of the Harriman-Rockefeller interests is a marked feature. They not only preserve the Union Pacific from encroachment but their chief opponent in the Western railroad field no longer possesses the independence he had before the Burlington deal was ventured upon. The Rockefellers own a controlling interest in the St. Paul, which it does not appear is directly involved in the settlement, and the Northwestern, a Vanderbilt property, can always be relied on to uphold rates and act in harmony for the joint interest of all. The settlement could not be arranged on a temporary basis. Peace could be assured in no other way than by such a plan as that finally agreed upon.

There was no excitement in the stock market over the announcement of the incorporation of this Northern Securities company, with its capital of $400,000,000. There might have been more activity had more details been given about the plans of the new corporation or if the rates for money had not been advanced to 5 per cent by several heavy lenders. The public is not concerned as yet in the stock of this new corporation because none of it is to be offered for sale at present. It can safely be assumed, however, that the volume of securities will be so vast that the assistance of the funds of investors and speculators will be needed. When this assistance is asked for the value of those securities will deserve consideration.

There are features to this new company which furnish material for thought. It is given by its charter almost unlimited powers. It may own or sell the securities of any corporation. At present the only ones it is taking over are the Northern Pacific and Great Northern. To do that it has a capitalization of $400,000,000. It is hinted that the control of the Union Pacific, Chicago and Alton, and half a dozen other roads will be acquired by it. Its power and its capitalization will be increased. Whether so vast a system, if formed, can hold together is yet to be determined. Whether, if it does hold together, its permanency will be for the public good will be denied by many. The men at the head of such a system will have to be most scrupulous and considerate in their dealings with the public or the demand for the government control of railroads will gain strength.

CHEAPER BREAD.

A baker is about to make an experiment with cheap bread in New York. He thinks he can so reduce the cost of producing bread as to be able to sell it at two and a half cents a loaf and still have it clean and wholesome, with sixteen ounces to the pound. Nothing is said yet about the manner of distribution, and it may be that customers who wish to buy at the "two for a nickel" rate will have to go to the bakery to do it. But even in this case the experiment is of great value, for it means a 50 per cent reduction in the price of the most important kind of food in the market.

In this country, it is true, bread has not quite the position which it occupies in certain parts of Europe. There it is not only the chief article of diet but is of as much importance as all other kinds of food put together. Here if the workman were deprived of his bread he could still subsist on other things. But at the same time bread has by no means passed out of fashion. Though it has new and dangerous rivals, and though it is traduced and maligned by health food congresses it still keeps its place at the head of our list of edibles. Wherever there is food of any kind there is always bread. It is the invariable feature of every meal.

It would be most fortunate, therefore, if some one could do for Chicago what the baker who has been mentioned is trying to do for New York. Many a family would find itself raised from a position where there was not quite food enough for all the children to one where going to bed hungry was unknown. When one knows how many people are prevented from going from one part of the city to another because of not having a nickel for carfare, one begins to understand how large a sum of money five cents sometimes is. A reduction of two and a half cents in the price of each loaf of bread would mean the eating of more bread and perhaps the saving of a little money with which to buy more coal. A large bread company which could accomplish this result would be welcomed by hundreds of thousands of people in this city.

A CHEEKY "BOULEVARD" SCHEME.

The more the proposition to "boulevard" Washington street from the South Branch to Michigan avenue is thought over the more fantastic it seems. As the South Park Commissioners have no jurisdiction over Michigan avenue north of Jackson street and the North Side boulevard system ends at Ohio street, the eastern extremity of a boulevarded Washington street would be in the air. It would connect with nothing.

This is a project which never would have been broached if Washington street real estate owners had not seen in it benefits for themselves. Undoubtedly they would be gainers if all the car tracks were removed from their street and it were given a fine asphalt pavement, freed from heavy teaming, and then maintained at the expense of the general public. The street would be far more desirable for shop purposes than it is now. It would improve as Jackson boulevard has improved. It might become the favorite promenade of shoppers. Buildings erected on it would command better rents than now.

It is natural that Washington street real estate owners should wish to see their property more valuable, but their plan to make it so is selfish. They desire to dance, but wish others to pay the fiddler. They seek to get rid of street car tracks and heavy teams by shifting them to streets on the north and south, which have already their fair share of these burdens. There is no spirit of brotherly love in this. The owners of real estate on streets it is proposed to subject to greater incumbrances will be quick to perceive the unfairness of the scheme.

The West Park Commissioners have seen fit to accept for "boulevard" purposes that part of Washington street between Halsted and Canal. It is not likely that the value of real estate will be affected materially by this one way or the other. The South Park board should not accept the east end of Washington street. It will not if President Donnersberger is not mistaken in his judgment. He says the board has all it can handle now, when there are twenty-two miles of streets awaiting acceptance as boulevards.

President Donnersberger says that "some streets have to be left open to traffic, and Washington street is one." To close it to traffic would not displease those who wish to traverse the northern end of the business district with ease in carriages. But it would congest with traffic the parellel streets. It would be an injustice to the owners of property on these streets. Therefore Washington street should be let alone. The owners of real estate abutting on it must work out their salvation at their own expense, not that of other real estate owners.

THE PROBLEM OF COLUMBUS.

It is not exactly clear why the South Park Commissioners should have refused the application of Mr. Hutchinson on behalf of the Art Institute for the statue of Columbus which has reposed so long in the ignominious obscurity of the South Park's back yard. On the other hand, it would seem that the Art Institute is just the one to know what to do with the bronze misfit, which is acknowledged to be an elephant on the commissioners' hands.

Up to the present time the commissioners have shown no disposition either to dispose of Columbus or to utilize him. Oshkosh, Muskegon, Three Oaks, and other places where dawnings of the art spirit have manifested themselves have offered to take him off their hands, but they have refused. At the same time they have left him face upwards among the weeds, subject to the indignities of every passerby. Well might he exclaim:

> Perhaps it was well to dissemble your love,
> But—why did you kick me down stairs?

It is possible that the commissioners have concealed Columbus from the public view as far as possible so that he shall not inspire young sculptors to similar atrocities or vitiate the public taste. But it cannot be possible they are afraid the Art Institute people might set him up in their rotunda by the side of the World's Fair Goddess of the Republic. The latter certainly could be trusted with the custody of Columbus. They will make the best use of him. But if the commissioners really wish to express their disapproval of him, would it not be better to remount him on his pedestal, set him up in some conspicuous place after the manner of the conventional scarecrow, and properly label him as a frightful example? Or, better still, why not remove him entirely from public view by burying him, thus making him an object of interest to future antiquarians and scientists, who will wonder when he is unearthed what sort of petrified monster they have discovered?

The proposition of the Art Institute should have been accepted with thanks. It is well understood that it would have melted up the ten tons of Columbus and used the residue for real artistic purposes. Thus this ungainly fifteen-footer would have suffered a change "into something rich and strange" instead of rusting longer on the park's rubbish heap. If the commissioners wish to get the value of Christopher as old junk, why do they not advertise him for sale? Probably the Art Institute people would pay what he is worth in pot metal. At present the commissioners will not give him away, nor sell him, nor put him up again. But something should be done with him, if only to get his value as old junk. There is no sense in keeping him where he is now. Apparently the commissioners do not know what to do with their bric-a-brac.

ONE VIRTUE OF A GREAT INDUSTRIAL.

After the recovery from a period of industrial depression has reached its height there is an inevitable reaction. That reaction has been marked by certain notable features, especially in the iron and steel industry, whose history has been more closely studied than that of any other. During hard times there is a limited demand for iron and steel goods, and stocks on hand are small. When good times fairly set in the manufacturers of these goods at once rush in their orders for raw materials. This sudden demand sets the iron furnaces and steel mills at work. As they have small surplus stocks these orders induce them to advance the prices of their raw materials. There is a period of feverish activity and of rapidly increasing prices. Presently the demand for the finished products begins to fall off. Then the men who make them give smaller orders for raw materials. Then there is a sudden slump in prices all along the line.

This year there has been no such revulsion. The iron and steel industry still has before it an immediate future of prosperity. The New York Times is inclined to ascribe the fact that there has not been at this time a tremendous advance in quotations and then a sudden drop in them to what it calls "the conservative and steadying influences" of the United States Steel corporation.

The Times says that since that corporation was organized it has refused to lend itself to any scheme to advance prices. Independent producers have wished to take advantage of the present demand for rails, for instance, and ask $30 a ton instead of $28. The United States Steel corporation has refused to agree to such an arrangement, believing that it would make more money at the lower rate in the long run. There is no doubt that such a belief is well founded.

If the steel corporation has indeed had the moderating and regulating influence the Times thinks it has, then its organization has, momentarily at least, been of value to a great industry. It is easy to see that a corporation which manufactures everything from pig iron up to tinplate, barbed wire, and nails, is in closer contact with consumers and better able to judge of their ability and willingness to buy than any corporation carrying on only one line of business can be. Furthermore, an immense concern with unlimited capital which expects to stay in the field indefinitely is not obliged to make suddenly all the money it can, as did the predatory trusts whose organizers did not expect them to last more than a year or two. Nor is it so greatly tempted to make all the money it can as is a small company. The latter always wishes to make all the hay possible while the sun shines.

But it does not necessarily follow that because the present policy of the United States Steel corporation is sagacious that it will always pursue that policy or that other great industrials, managed perhaps by less intelligent men, will be equally as conservative as the Steel corporation has been this year.

FLYING TO THE FEDERAL COURTS.

The Union Traction company and the Consolidated Traction company have asked the United States courts for the justice which they allege they cannot get in the State courts. The national constitution reads that no State shall "deprive any person of property without due process of law." These two corporations say an attempt is being made to take their property without due process of law and they ask for the protection they say the constitution guarantees them.

They assert that while they have paid their taxes for 1900 an attempt is now being made to force them to pay additional and much heavier taxes for that year. They allege also that while real estate was assessed last year at about 60 per cent of the fair cash value it is proposed to assess their capital stock and bonds at their full cash value. The exemption from assessment of the capital stock of manufacturing corporations is complained of as a discrimination.

If the two traction companies succeed in getting this assessment question into the United States courts they will be able to keep it there for some time. They will not be satisfied until they have had an opinion from the Supreme Court. That court is not inclined to interfere with the taxing laws of a State unless they are manifestly unjust. It is not likely that that court will hold that it ought to intervene for the protection of these two corporation and other corporations which may make common cause with them, but the litigation which has just been begun may temporarily deprive this city of the increased revenue which it had assumed the decision of the State Supreme Court would give it.

Then the high-spirited, well-bred little boy, who was about half the size of the rude, bad boy, but had muscles like steel, constituted himself the champion of the shabby little girl.

JOHNNY AND THE TEACHER.

Johnny was an idle boy at school. One day he made a potato popgun out of a goose quill. Then he cut several potatoes into slices for ammunition, put the gun and the slices into his pocket, and took the outfit to school with him.

While the grammar class was in session he loaded his popgun by pushing the ends through a slice of potato, and discharged the gun with a loud report by pushing a slate pencil through it.

The teacher kept him in after school.

"Johnny," she said, with tears in her eyes, as she laid the switch about his legs with great energy, "I am not punishing you for being disorderly in school, but for your reckless extravagance in wasting potatoes."

THE MAN AND THE SPECTACLES.

"Are these your gold-framed spectacles?" asked the rough-looking man. "I picked them up on the sidewalk just after you had passed."

"No," sternly replied the other man. "You can't work me on that old confidence game."

The tough-looking citizen seemed hurt, but said nothing in rejoinder.

Half an hour later the man who thought he had not lost his glasses picked up a paper and mechanically felt in the accustomed pocket for them.

They were there, all right.

But It Has a Use.

"What do you know of the Chicago River?" asked the teacher.

"The Chicago River," responded the bad boy of the class, "is Lake Michigan's vermiform appendix."

CHAPTER X.

Alice Finds a Publisher.

VERY glad was Alice to be quit of the society of the Hatter and the Loon; but she rather liked, and felt sorry for, the Jabberwock, who was a pleasant enough young woman when she wasn't wading over her stocking-clocks in the imaginary gore of mythical people.

Presently Alice came to a high building which looked a little like an ore dock and a little like a grain elevator. It was really a publishing house. On a track at one side of it stood a line of freight cars, into which, through steel chutes, tons and tons of books were tumbling. On the other side were other freight cars, from which manuscripts were being transferred in great baskets to the building. It was a wonderfully busy scene.

Alice noticed a sign:

BARABBAS & COMPANY
OFFICE.

She had no notion of going in, but as she was turning away a pleasant-faced gentleman, sitting at the open office window, beckoned to her. He was the Manager.

"Five per cent is the best we can offer you today," he said when he had fetched Alice a chair.

"Thank you," said Alice; and she thought: "Five per cent of what?"

"Well, what have you written?" asked the Manager.

"I've written some dolly stories," said Alice, timidly.

"Dialogues?" asked the Manager.

"Why—my dollies talk to one another," replied Alice, getting more and more puzzled.

"Um!" said the Manager. "Anything else?"

"Only a story about our dog, Gyp, and one about our cat, Tom, and—O, yes—one about Bossie, our neighbor's muley cow."

"That's better," said the Manager. "Animal stories in great demand now. Muley cow new idea, too. How will two weeks from today suit you?"

"If it suits you," said Alice, without an idea of what he was talking about.

"First edition will be twenty-five tons," said the Manager, briskly. "Let us have photo and story of your life tomorrow, please, and copy for book on the following day. Good afternoon, Miss ——. What did you say your name was?"

"Alice."

"Good afternoon, Miss Alice."

The Manager turned to his desk, and Alice left the office, her young mind in a sad tangle. As she started down the avenue she again met the Little Man with the large green eyes and extravagant grin.

MR. DUBBE'S PROGRAM STUDY CLASS.

"Brahms," said Mr. Dubbe, "is eminently sane. He got this from his father. To illustrate I will give you an anecdote that I got the other day from my friend Herr Weidig, and which I do not think has ever been printed."

"I love anecdotes," said Mrs. Givu A. Payne.

"So do I," said Mrs. Fuller-Prunes.

"The elder Brahms," continued Mr. Dubbe, "used to play the bass viol in a café orchestra, and one night he remarked to his friend Meyers: 'I say, Meyers, it's only by accident that a man plays in tune on the bass viol. Nicht wahr?'

"This unaffected simplicity, this freedom from illusion, was inherited by his son, and is the note of his Second symphony, which we are to consider today. The symphony, you will observe, is written around three notes—D, C sharp, D. The reason it is C sharp instead of D flat is that the signature is D, which requires that C sharp shall be the leading tone. A leading tone is so called because it leads into the tonic. On stringed instruments it is sharper than on the piano, which can give only the same tone, ascending or descending. The use of leading tones is characteristic of Brahms.

"Observe the architectural simplicity and strength of this three-note figure. It is thoroughly German, saturated with the essence of Northern legendry. There is no catering to Italian sentimentality. Yet it is light as eiderdown. Three greater notes were never written. I never hear them without being profoundly affected."

Mr. Dubbe then played the various themes in each movement, and pointed out the wonderful use that Brahms had made of the three notes.

"Isn't it Beethoven that uses C sharp so much?" asked Mrs. Givu A. Payne.

"Beethoven uses it a great deal," replied Mr. Dubbe. "It is one of the most useful notes in the scale. Bach, too, uses it at every opportunity."

"Is Bach composing now?" asked Miss Cilly.

"No; he is decomposing," replied Mr. Dubbe.

After the others of the class had gone Mr. Dubbe turned to me. "And how are your piano studies coming on?" he asked.

"Very well," I answered. "I have a Chopin nocturne this week. I think Chopin is just lovely, don't you?"

"I used to think he was the limit," said Mr. Dubbe, "but that was a long time ago. You will find, my dear Miss Pants, that as one progresses in music culture one cares less and less for Chopin."

"It isn't so with me," said I. "And just now he means so much to me when I am lonely and sad."

"Rubbish!" exclaimed Mr. Dubbe, and, turning to the piano, he played the scale of C over and over in double thirds.

"Feel better now?" he asked.

"O, much better," I replied brightly. "And thank you ever so much." POETA PANTS.

AMONG THE NEW BOOKS.

"Woman and the Law," by George James Bayles, Ph. D. The Century company, New York.

THE legal status of married women in the United States has almost completely changed since the union, and probably the most rapid changes have been made in their legal condition within the last fifty years. The laws relating to unmarried women, however, have undergone slight alteration, because never having married they were not supposed to have merged their individualities in that of their husbands. The hard conditions arising from the legal fiction of the common law that husband and wife were one in law necessitated its destruction, and for that purpose statutes have been enacted in all the States and Territories. Mr. Bayles in this work has aimed to "present a general view of the legal condition of women in the United States at the present time," and has designed it more especially for the use of women. To this end the author has collected with painstaking effort the various statutory provisions in regard to women in all the States and Territories, and has set them out with clearness and in their logical sequence.

He divides his subject into three parts. The first he entitles "Domestic Relations," and under it treats of the contract to marry, marriage, husband, and wife, personal torts, the right of a wife to support, guardianship and adoption of children, divorce, and statutes arising from divorce, and sets out the text of the proposed uniform divorce law. The statutory causes for divorce in each of the States and Territories are published in the alphabetical order of such dominions. And on account of the large number of States and Territories, this part of the work comprises about half of the first division.

The second part is entitled "Property Relations," and deals with marriage settlements, dower, a married woman's estate, property rights of married women, their contracts, deeds, women as traders, and homestead laws.

The third part occupies but a few pages, and is entitled "Public Relations," and sets forth those laws which, with one exception, relate to all women. The topics are: Women citizens, aliens, woman's suffrage, employment of women, protection of women, women as attorneys, and married women as witnesses.

Notwithstanding the fact that great care and much time have unquestionably been spent on this work, some inaccuracies have crept in, but to produce a work of this character free from error would be near to impossible. While not calculated for the use of the legal profession, for some purposes, it might be used by it. It is a production which all may read with profit, and to one interested in sociological problems it would furnish ample food for reflection.

W. L. Tomlins, whose long association with the Apollo club and other musical organizations of this city makes his name a familiar one to all Chicagoans, has just published through C. C. Birchard & Co. of Boston an exceptionally meritorious collection of songs and choruses of which he is the editor. The volume bears the title, "The Laurel Song Book," and is designed for the use of such schools, academies, and choral societies as have need of part songs of medium difficulty but of musical worth. It has been Mr. Tomlins' aim to bring together choruses that so far as is possible are of American composition, and with this end in view he has selected works by such representative native writers as Horatio W. Parker, E. A. MacDowell, Arthur Foote, George Chadwick, Clayton Johns, Edgar Stillman Kelley, Henry Holden Huss, H. K. Hadley, Henry Waller, and Wilson G. Smith. The texts are chiefly from such poets as Whitman, Bryant, Shakspeare, Tennyson, Browning, Whittier, and men of similar literary eminence, and as several selections from the oratorios of Handel, Haydn, and Mendelssohn, as well as from the choral and song works of other foreign masters, have been included in the volume, and a number of folk songs, among them two of Indian origin, have been added, the collection in its entirety is worthy of hearty commendation. The work is typographically attractive, and, barring an error by which on page 236, in an arrangement of "Who is Sylvia," the authorship of the original is credited to "Fr. Schumann" instead of to Schubert, is edited with evident care and the attention to details desirable in a choral song book.

LETTER OF THE MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright, 1901, by the Marquise de Fontenoy.]

LORD BATEMAN'S fate is likely to render peers of the realm a good deal more careful about giving their names to financial enterprises as directors and trustees. He foolishly accepted the position of trustee of the "South Coast and Continental Service company, Limited," and when the affair came to grief was sued by one of the stockholders of the concern for the money which the latter had been ill-advised to embark in it on the strength of the representations contained in the prospectus, and the titled named connected with the management. A judgment was given against the directors, and it will go hard with them if every one of the stockholders follows the example of the plaintiff in the recent action and sues them in a similar manner for the amount of their subscriptions to the undertaking.

The proceedings in court as usual showed that the titled directors knew little or nothing about the true character of the company, and of its promoter, who turned out to be an undischarged bankrupt and ex-convict. And while the court held that they had been guilty of no criminal intent, yet, under the terms of the new directors' liability statute they were held financially responsible for the undertaking, and as such, obliged to refund to stockholders all money obtained from investors on the strength of their name and of the untrue statements contained in the prospectus.

This decision is likely to contribute more than anything else to put an end to what is known as "guinea-pigging," that is to say, the selling the use of titled and honored names to financial enterprises, which, without the guarantee of respectability implied by the presence of these names on the Board of Management, would not be of a nature to attract investors.

Lord Bateman ought to have known better than to have permitted his name to have become associated, no matter how innocently, with any such enterprise, and to have studied the history of his house to better advantage. For the founder of his family, Sir James Bateman, a London merchant and Lord Mayor of London in the year 1717, remains on record as one of the directors, and, indeed, a subgovernor of that ill-fated South Sea company, the collapse of which involved so many thousands of people in ruin. The present Lord Bateman is an elderly man of over 70, is Lord Lieutenant of the County of Hereford, and has not only a large family of children, but likewise of grandchildren.

I notice among the names of the other directors of this enterprise that of the "Marquis de Ruvigny," whose title is possibly as familiar as that of the author of that curious annual publication known as the "Legitimist Calendar." It is a "calendar" which ignores all the effects of revolutions, usurpations, and military conquests throughout Christendom, and gives only the names of those sovereigns who should by right of birth and of legitimate descent be seated on the thrones of countries which, in many instances, have abjured monarchical government altogether. Thus, we have Victor Emmanuel figuring as King of Sardinia and as Duke of Savoy, but not as sovereign of United Italy. Kaiser Wilhelm is put down simply as King of Prussia and elector of Brandenburg. Dom Miguel of Braganza, now an exile in Austria, is styled the King of Portugal. The Count of Caserta, who makes his home at Cannes, is described as King of Naples. King Edward is ignored altogether, the sovereignty of the British Empire being allotted to Princess Louis of Bavaria (who, prior to her marriage, was the Austrian Archduchess Marie Theresa), as less remotely descended from the English Stuart line that the present British monarch.

No mention is made of the Duke of Orleans, or of Prince Victor Napoleon, the crown of France, like that of Spain, being accorded to Don Carlos, whom the "calendar" describes as "King Charles XI. of France," and "King Charles VII. of Spain." The United States is, of course, non-existent, except in the form of French and English colonies, while the whole of South America, save Brazil, remains as in days of yore, dependencies of Spain. The ex-Crown Princess of Brazil is set down as Empress of that country. Norway continues in the "calendar" to form part of the kingdom of Denmark, Sweden being under the rule of Queen Carola, the consort of the present King of Saxony, she being the last surviving member of the historic Scandanavian house of Vasa.

What renders this "calendar" more curious still is its British peerage, in which all creations since the revolution of 1688, which drove the Stuarts into exile, are contemptuously ignored. It serves to show how modern is the creation of the vast majority of the English peerage, the Marquis de Ruvigny's list comprising barely half a hundred names, although there are now some 600 members of the House of Lords, besides about another 400 Scotch and Irish peers not entitled to a seat in the Upper Chamber. Indeed, after reading the "calendar" one is tempted to look upon the much-vaunted nobility of Great Britain as of somewhat mushroom growth.

There has always been a certain amount of mystery about the identity of the author of this extraordinary "calendar," the more so as no mention of any Marquisate de Ruvigny can be found in any British peerage or in any of the standard or recognized works giving the names of the foreign nobility. It was possibly this that led the presiding Judge of the trial to show so much curiosity concerning the nationality of the Marquis, and his inquiries brought to light the fact that the Marquis is not a Frenchman, as might be inferred from his title, but an Englishman, subject, like his father and grandfather before him, to the English crown, and having no authority whatsoever from the latter to adopt or use any foreign title. He declared in court that he was of French descent—as he describes it, of "Huguenot ancestry"—and it seems that his father, whose family name was Heddle, assumed the style of Marquis de Ruvigny and Raineval on the strength of an alleged descent from a French Viscount de Ruvigny, who lived in 1598, and from a French Marquis de Rainéval, who lived in 1621.

Now, an English subject cannot bear a foreign title without an official patent of consent from the crown, and, inasmuch, as the "Marquis de Ruvigny" has not received any such permission, it is impossible to describe him as anything else than as "soi-disant," and his titles as a piece of unwarrantable assumption.

According to the evidence which he gave in court he was quite recently living with his wife and child at a boarding-house at Putney, near London, and is now residing in a cottage in the equally semi-genteel suburb of Chertsey. From this it would appear that the sale of the "Legitimist Calendar" is quite as unprofitable to the self-styled Marquis as his Presidency of the so-called Jacobite, or White Rose league, which has branches in this country, the members of which may gather instruction concerning their chairman by consulting the evidence in the recent case of "Henderson vs. Lord Bateman, Ruvigny, and others," tried in the King's Bench Division of the London High Court of Justice, before Justice Grantham.

SHORT STORY OF THE DAY.

Elsie Mayne's Heart.

BY MARY D. PAINE.

ELSIE MAYNE married Dick Sherwell for his money, and every one guessed it except Dick, and he was blind—blind to everything except her blue eyes and red lips.

He knew that she had not loved him when they married, and he knew that she had once loved another man, but he did not guess the truth—he did not know that all the money he had settled upon her had gone to pay the debts of her old lover! She had married Dick Sherwell for that reason—in order that the blackguard whom she loved should have money to start life afresh without her!

What he had done with it she did not know. He had disappeared, and she had never heard another word of him. He had gone out of her life, and for twelve months she and Dick lived quietly in the old house, and for twelve months Dick was wildly happy. If it had not been for the black shadow of deceit upon her life, perhaps, Elsie would have been happy, too; but the thought of it sent a strange shudder through her when she looked into Dick's eyes. If he knew! If some day he asked about the money that Fred Clinton had taken, and he found out that she had deliberately given it away—what then? He would never forgive her—never forget. He had known she did not love him, but he would not forgive that.

It was almost exactly twelve months since Fred had gone when one night Dick brought in a letter for her. She remembered that night long afterwards with a sick feeling of shame. It was early spring, but quite warm, and she was in the garden with her face turned up to the darkening sky when Dick came in.

He walked straight through the house towards her with the old eager light in his eyes just as it used to be. He put his arm around her waist and kissed her, and then gave her the letter.

She looked at the handwriting and her heart grew sick. The dull brown earth and the blue sky above swam around giddily. She crumpled the letter and thrust it in her pocket.

Dick did not think to question her about it—he never did—and later on she opened it with a sudden feeling of fear. For twelve months, silence, and now——

The thick, black handwriting danced before her eyes. The white paper shook in her fingers, and it was a long time before she managed to understand that he was coming back—that Fred, whom she had almost forgotten, was coming back to Elmchester—coming to see her!

In that instant she realized what a fool she had been. In that instant a sudden knowledge came to her that Dick and Dick's love were more to her than ever Fred had been, and a new sick feeling of coming evil seemed to clutch her heart. If she told him now, if she confessed everything, would he ever believe her? If she told him now he would think that she was deceiving him again; he would never believe in her any more; he would think she was still lying in order that he should still protect her.

She took up a pen and wrote hastily: "Do not come; I cannot see you," and she slipped out herself that night and posted it at the pillar box that stood outside the gate.

The next day was interminable. Every footstep on the gravel, every knock at the door, made her start uneasily; and the more she thought the more easily it seemed she might lose Dick and all the happiness the last year had brought her.

It was an endless day. Fred had asked her to meet him in the town at 6 o'clock, but 6 o'clock came and she did not move. At half past Dick would be in—Dick, with his dear face and honest eyes—Dick, her husband, the man she really loved.

She went to the window and waited for him to come, watching for him as she had never watched before. When he came she would tell him everything. She would never keep anything from him again! She would spend all her life in showing him she loved him!

It seemed a long time to wait that night. The dusk deepened. She heard the rattle of silver as the housemaid arranged the dinner table, and still Dick did not come. She looked at the clock and started. It was nearly 7.

She was about to turn when suddenly some one came running up the drive. She opened the window and put out a white face.

"What is it?" she cried.

The boy handed her a note.

"'E said as I was to give it ter you," he cried—"as nobody else was ter have it."

Elsie tore it open. It was from Dick.

"My wife," it ran. "It is for your sake I am going. I heard that Clinton is helpless, but I'll save him if I can. DICK."

Elsie stared at the boy.

"What is it?" she cried. "What has happened? Who gave you this?"

"It was Mr. Sherwell, ma'am," said the boy, "an' 'e was off up the ladder afore I could speak. It's the fire at the 'Bull,' ma'am, an' 'e went off after a gent as is laid up with a broken leg, ma'am. He can't move nohow—'e got knocked down by a dray this morning—and they say as 'is room's afire, but nobody wouldn't go up till Mr. Sherwell came along."

Elsie waited to hear no more. She turned and rushed up-stairs for her hat.

Ten minutes later she was standing with a crowd of others staring up at the burning "Bull." It was an old inn, full of wood, and it was burning fiercely. By an odd coincidence there had been another fire a little earlier, some way out of Elmchester, and the consequence was that fire engines and men had not yet returned, and the few men playing on the fire with garden hose had no chance.

Elsie thrust her way between the staring groups.

"Don't you hear?" she said. "Where is he?"

They looked at her dumbly.

"Don't you hear?" she said. "Where is he?"

Some man came forward.

"They brought him out a minute ago," he said. "They couldn't get the other, but Mr. Sherwell's gone to the 'orspital, mum."

For an instant Elsie reeled. Her lips moved, but no sound came. Her heart stood still, and then seemed to choke her with its mad beating. She stood for an instant rigid, and then, turning, made her way unsteadily towards the hospital.

In one of the rooms they had just put down a charred and blackned body. At first sight it seemed to have no life in it, but gradually as they peeled off the burnt clothes they saw pain shoot up to his face.

They did all they could, and had just stretched him comfortably on a soft bed when the doctor brought Elsie in. He was a personal friend, and for once the hospital rules were ignored.

Elsie ran forward breathlessly and fell with a sob at Dick's side. His blind eyes, his lifeless face, were all she thought of just then.

"Dick—Dick! she cried. "O, Dick, my darling!"

Her voice broke with a sob, and Dick suddenly opened his eyes. He stared at her for a minute as if he did not see, and then one of his bandaged hands moved slowly out to her.

"I did my best," he gasped, in a whisper. "I tried—my wife—I tried—for your sake—to save him—but I couldn't; he was dead."

His voice dropped and died out, and he fainted again. Elsie flung herself down beside him.

"Dick—Dick, my darling," she cried. "I can't lose you! Come back to me, my love—Dick—I don't care—I only care for you!"

Perhaps he heard before he had gone too far, perhaps the dim sound of her voice as he was sinking into unconsciousness came to him just in time and saved him; but anyhow he came back to fight for his life almost by a miracle, and he conquered at last.

Six weeks after the fire he lay on a couch in his own house once more, and Elsie knelt beside him looking into his face.

"I must tell you, Dick," she cried. It has been like a nightmare to me, and I can't bear it any longer. Even if you never forgive me I must tell you now, but I love you better than my life, and I can't bear—that you should think—I cared for him."

He caught her hand in his.

"As if I didn't know—now," he began; but she interrupted him, and in a broken voice told the story of her marriage settlements.

Perhaps once Dick flinched as he listened. But it was only once. He looked into her eyes—into her face, that had grown so thin and white during the last few weeks, and he saw that she had suffered—that her sin had had its punishment.

"My wife! My wife!" he cried at last, hoarsely. "I can forgive it all now because I know you love me—because I know you loved me even then—though you didn't know it, because that man still influenced you. My darling, I'll forgive you anything in the world—if you will only keep that look that is in your face now—if you will always look like that!"

Elsie dropped her head on his shoulder so that he should not see the tears in her eyes; but perhaps he guessed they were there, for he held her close, and for a long minute they did not move.

The infant weighs only two pounds, but physicians say it will survive. It was 9 o'clock in the evening when Mrs. Robertson heard the low cry of a baby. Opening the door of the kitchen she found on the back porch a small market basket, which contained the baby, carefully wrapped in a warm blanket. A bottle of milk was clutched in the child's hand. KIMBALL PIANOS.
KIMBALL REED ORGANS.
KIMBALL PIPE ORGANS.
KIMBALL SELF-PLAYING INSTRUMENTS.

Critical examination of Kimball pianos and organs will demonstrate that conscientious care is given to every detail in their construction.

Nothing short of the highest degree of perfection will satisfy the manufacturers.

"THE KIMBALL" is made in the largest factories of the kind in the world, where system, skill, brains, economy, and artistic musical ability are combined.

This enables the makers to supply the most artistic instruments at lowest prices.

The display of pianos and organs at our warerooms constitutes an exposition unapproached in extent and completeness.

We would suggest an early inspection if you contemplate buying a piano or organ for Christmas.

A GREAT VARIETY of second-hand upright pianos, square pianos, and reed organs, at VERY LOW PRICES.

Any used instrument bought at this time may be returned within two years and full purchase price allowed on any new piano or organ in our stock at higher price.

Old instruments taken in exchange.

OATS' HIGH MARK IN SEVEN YEARS.

Sell on Board of Trade for 41-41⅝c for May, and 44c for Immediate Use.

SHORT CROP THE CAUSE.

James A. Patten Holds Immense Line, with a Big Profit Return on Paper.

BEARS PREDICT A BREAK.

Oats sold yesterday on the Board of Trade at the highest prices on the crop, and the highest prices reached in seven years. Buyers paid 41⅝c a bu for May delivery, and as high as 44c for desirable grades for immediate use.

Brokers are wondering how far the advance will continue, whether it will be advisable to trade their horses for automobiles to save feed bills, and if their children will be obliged to eat their breakfast sugar and cream without oatmeal porridge this winter to keep grocery bills down to a reasonable limit.

Patten Holds Big Line.

At the same time they are interested in the outcome of a speculative venture being carried on by James A. Patten, who has a line bought for May delivery variously estimated at from 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bu, the larger figure more than five times the entire amount of oats in store in Chicago and twice the amount in the visible supply in the country. The line was bought from half a cent to 5c a bu below the top notch reached yesterday, and already represents, on paper, a handsome profit.

While the farmers of the United States raised a crop of 660,000,000 bu of oats this year, according to government estimates, it is 140,000,000 bu short of the 1900 crop, and in view of the short corn crop as well, opinion has been growing that there are not enough oats to go around.

Farmers apparently need most of their stock or expect higher prices and are selling sparingly. A general shipping demand from all directions, east, south, and southwest, during the last few weeks has reduced supplies at Chicago and caused a steady appreciation in prices.

During the excitement over the drought and the threatened destruction of the corn crop in July, May oats sold at 41c and cash oats at 39c. There were sharp declines from those figures, but since early in October there has been a gradual advance of 7c a bu for cash oats and 5c on May, the greater part of the advance coming in the last two weeks, and the final jump of nearly 1c yesterday.

An interesting feature of the speculative situation is the fact that the American Cereal company, the largest corporate consumer of oats in the country, sold out on the advance a large line accumulated during the drought scare and is believed to have sold short heavily fighting the up turn.

Patten Says Crop Is Short.

Mr. Patten, neither in his private capacity nor as Mayor of Evanston, is a large consumer of oats, but he believes the demand is so much in excess of the supply that higher prices must rule. Speaking of yesterday's advance he said:

"I have not made a trade in oats today. The situation is extremely bullish on the cash demand, which will take care of the price. It has seemed to me a simple proposition that oats ought to be bought. We have had a short crop, receipts here for sixty days have been running about half what they were last year.

"Stocks are small and have been growing smaller steadily, as the shipping demand has been exceeding the supply. This demand has forced a general increase in prices without increasing farmers' sales, and if it continues prices will go higher. I believe oats will sell at 50c."

Says Demand Is Increasing.

On the question of the consumptive demand for oats George S. McReynolds, a large elevator owner and shipper, said:

"I do not know of any shipper who is buying oats to any extent in the country. Receipts are small and are likely to fall off still more unless the attitude of the country holder changes materially. In the meantime there has been a sharp shipping demand from every direction, New England, Pennsylvania, the South and Southwest, where feed is in scant supply, all drawing on Chicago. A large proportion of our stocks of No. 2 mixed oats has been bought for shipment South as soon as delivered in December. The cash situation is strong and seems to warrant higher prices."

WEIR FAMILY AGAIN IN COURT.

Adam and Emma Make Return Appearances and Face a Charge of Shoplifting.

An echo of old times in the Criminal Court was heard yesterday when Judge Kavanagh called Emma and Adam Weir to trial on a charge of shoplifting. Time was when it was common for some member of the Weir family, known by the police as the "Weir gang," to be on trial in the Criminal Court. The charge yesterday was made by the Taylor Dry Goods company, 1010 West Lake street, and the evidence as to the woman was heard. Adam failed to appear, but a friend promised to have the defendant in court Monday, and the case went over to that time.

EDITORS' CASE UP TODAY.

JUDGE DUNNE TO HEAR ARGUMENTS ON HABEAS CORPUS.

Animated Hearing Expected as Attorneys' Views Are Widely Divergent—Ex-Judge Shope Declares Writ Cannot Lie, While Defense Holds It Can—Attack on the Jurisdiction of Judge Hanecy Looked For—Disagreement Over Alleged Verbal Order.

Judge Dunne, sitting in the Criminal Court, yesterday ordered the habeas corpus writ by which Managing Editor Lawrence and Reporter Canfield of the Chicago American hope to escape from the imprisonment decreed by Judge Hanecy set for hearing at 9 o'clock this morning. It is expected the argument will last two days.

The opposing counsel in the case take diametrically opposite views of the issues as well as the law involved, and an interesting and perhaps lively time is looked for. The contention of ex-Judge Shope, representing the prosecution, is that the only order of court by which the two defendants are now held is the writ of attachment. Against this ex-Judge Shope contends no writ of habeas corpus can lie.

For the defense the lawyers hold that under the writ the defendants were actually in the custody of the Sheriff. They also attack the jurisdiction of the court which issued the writ of attachment and assert that any findings he may have made, including the writ of attachment, were illegal and should be dismissed. To this ex-Judge Shope sets up the contention that the contempt proceedings are not finished until Judge Hanecy enters his final order of commitment, and one Judge of a Circuit Court cannot review the proceedings of another while the case is yet open.

There is a disagreement between counsel also as to whether on Tuesday Judge Hanecy did not give a verbal order committing the defendants to the custody of the Sheriff. The attorneys for the defendants say he did, and ex-Judge Shope says he did not.

In connection with this last contention the attorneys for the defendants yesterday discovered that in the minute book of the clerk, just underneath the entry of the order for the writ of attachment, was another order which had been afterwards erased. This, they contend, was the order committing the defendants to the custody of the Sheriff, and they filed an affidavit charging this to be the fact. The clerk, however, declares the erased entry had nothing to do with the contempt case.

In the proceedings before Judge Dunne yesterday morning ex-Judge Shope asked that the habeas corpus matter be taken up at once, as the matter could be settled in ten minutes. The other side said it was also willing to proceed, but stated that at least a day would be needed to present its side of the case. Judge Dunne set the case for this morning. When it comes up then the defense expects to file some affidavits attacking the jurisdiction of Judge Hanecy.

Samuel Alschuler, partner of Adolf Kraus, took the latter's place in the case yesterday and will make one of the arguments for the defendants today.

TO GIVE MAN-O'-WAR SERVICE.

Chicago Delegation Starts for Presentation on Battleship Illinois at Old Point Comfort.

The Chicago delegation which will attend the presentation of the silver service to the battleship Illinois tomorrow at Old Point Comfort left for the East yesterday morning. In the party were Potter Palmer, Ferdinand W. Peck, F. H. Cooper, J. G. Shortall, S. D. Kimbark, John M. Clark, William Penn Nixon, W. D. Boyce, H. H. Thomas, and T. H. Keefe.

At Washington the delegation will be joined by Secretary Long, Secretary Gage, Senator Mason, Jesse Holdom, S. B. Raymond, Admiral Terry, Senator Cullom, Congressman Boutell, W. Francis Thomas, George E. Adams, and William Butterworth. The entire Illinois delegation will be entertained at luncheon at the Arlington Hotel in Washington today, after which those in the party will be taken to the White House by Secretary Gage, where they will pay their respects to President Roosevelt.

The delegation will go to Old Point Comfort tonight by special boat, which will return after the ceremony. The presentation address will be made by Senator Cullom. Former Congressman George E. Adams is chairman of the Presentation committee. The silver service consists of ten pieces and is presented by Illinois to the battleship which bears its name.

TALKS OF CATALEPTIC BOY.

Elgin Asylum Physician Says He Is Being Cared For Better than if He Were at Home.

Isador Golfson, the Chicago boy who has been in a cataleptic state at the North Asylum for the Insane at Elgin for eight weeks, showed no change yesterday. The physicians say that he may continue in this state for some time. He takes nourishment when it is given him. Otherwise he lies seemingly without life. When the boy revives he informs the physicians that he has been conscious of what has happened around him.

"The boy's condition is unusual, but not unprecedented," said Dr. Frank S. Whitman of the asylum last night. "Everything that should be done for him is being done. His mother could not take care of him at home. She should realize that he is being taken care of free of expense to her. The fact that he can tell us what has happened around him while he was unconscious shows that he is semi-conscious. He lies perfectly inert during the day and night. He is in no danger from his condition."

Receiver for a Cheese Company.

On application of several creditors Judge Kohlsaat has appointed the Chicago Title and Trust company receiver in bankruptcy for the Chicago Cheese company. It is claimed that officers of the defendant company have turned over their business at 73 South Water street to Lawrence Nelson with the intention of preferring the Western State Bank as creditor. The amount of property transferred is said to have been valued at $16,020.
